--- You vs. Brainteasers

Okay puzzle players, gather ye wits and get ready. This week, the Mariner launches its fourth annual Brain Teaser contest, giving you the chance to make some money and have a little fun as well.

The Rules

The contest will run for the next six weeks, with 10 questions plus a bonus to be asked each week. The reader who correctly answers the most questions will receive $100. Second prize is $30 and the third place winner will receive $20. Those who finish fourth and fifth win two-year subscriptions to the Mariner and one-year subscriptions go to those who finish in the six through 10 spots.

All answers must be typed or printed clearly. Remember, if we can't read your miserable handwriting, your answer will be marked incorrect.

Each entry must be postmarked on or before the Tuesday following publication of each Brain Teaser series. That means the answers to this week's questions must be postmarked by next Tuesday. Send your answers to: Brainteasers, Mariner Newspapers, Box 682, Marshfield, Massachusetts 02050.

Readers who want to finish in the money should be absolutely certain to answer all questions every week. Bonus questions will be used only to break ties.

Teasers

Part 1

1 — Friendly Nina wanted to take her boyfriend Chip to a cheap movie. So she broke open her piggy-bank and counted her money, which was all in coins. She discovered she had exactly $5.50 consisting of exactly 100 coins and that she had no nickels, no quarters and no silver dollars (which wouldn't have fit the slot anyway). Tell us how many coins she had in the bank and the number of each kind of coin.

2 — Were Thomas Edison living today, what would he be most noted for?

3 — Name three states in the United States with metallic nicknames and explain which is which.

4 — How long will it take a train 160-feet long, traveling at 25 miles per hour, to pass completely through a tunnel 240 yards long?

5 — This U.S. President is a direct descendant of King Edward III of England and was himself named for an English King. At the age of three, he fell from a carriage and cut his head, resulting in a long scar and leaving him somewhat subject to dizziness. He also had a problem with hay fever. As a young boy, he worked in a grocery store and later, when campaigning told audiences he was too poor to own a horse. He was adept at poker and also liked Checkers. In school, his classmates nicknamed him "Iron Butt."

6 — Name a five letter word with three "d's" in it.

7 — How can the movement of a dog's jaw differ from that of a cat's?

8 — Johnson's cat went up a tree,
Which was sixty feet and three.
Every day she climbed eleven,
Every night she came down seven.
Tell me if she did not drop,
When her paws would touch the top!

9 — How long will an eight-day alarm clock run without winding?

10 — Give the next line: "The time has come, the Walrus said."

Bonus: Which country named its monetary unit after its national bird? (Hint, it's not in Africa.)

The answers to this week's teasers will appear next week. Be certain your answers are postmarked by Tuesday. Good thinking.

Saying Goodbye To Mr. Goodbar

By Polly Sarcia

[This is the first in a four part series following the progress of the author as she undergoes the first four weeks of an intensive weight loss program at Bodyworks in Scituate. Polly Sarcia is, of course, not her real name; the true identity of our writer will be revealed in the final episode.]

I have spent the past six months trying to convince myself that it's okay to be fat. Had I never been thin, it might have worked.

My husband still agrees to be seen in public with me; my friends (all tall and thin) assure me that they love me for my matchless charm and wit. What does it matter that my wardrobe consists of two outfits (straining at the seams), that I am asked at least once a week when the baby is due, that I can no longer climb a flight of stairs without pausing for a 10 minute break?

Miss Piggy is the new American heroine, so pass the cheesecake and damn the calories. Life is a banquet, baby, so enjoy!

Forget It! Forget the understanding relatives and friends (who murmur politely to others "she used to be so pretty, it's really such a shame"; I am the one who must live with this body, in this body, and carry this extra person around. And I'm tired.

Thank you, Dr. Atkins, Dr. Stillman, et al; I've tried your miracles, and at times they've worked. But my days of being a yo-yo are over. Memories of looking good and feeling comfortable scream at me for attention. At thirty years of age, I think it's time I listened . . . . . .

Many times, I've tried it alone and my success has always been short-lived. This time, I've got help, from two concerned professionals who've fought the same battles and made the victory last. When I heard about the new, medically supervised program at Bodyworks, I was skeptical. After all, I'm no novice at this dieting game: just what did these people think they could tell me?

At my first meeting with Nancy Sheenan, director at Bodyworks, and Carol Shattuck, R.N., we discussed my motivations and the terrible eating habits that had pushed me to the highest weight in my history. They could help, they were sure, but I had to be ready. And after a summer of shunning the beach (who needs all that competition?) and a few weeks of longingly admiring the stunning new fall clothes, I had to admit that. it was now or never.

After breakfasting on a farewell English muffin, I donned my extra large jogging shorts and ERA teeshirt, dumped the last of the cheesecake into the trash, and set out for the first day of the rest of my life. Stepping on that scale for Carol was no picnic, but she and I both know that it's all downhill from here.

We talked, in private, for over an hour; Carol explained the program's philosophy for health, as opposed to simply dieting. The combination of exercise and a sound nutritional style of eating will have to become a permanent lifestyle for me.

No more diets to be endured and then abandoned. The first few weeks will be rather grueling, but crucial to my re-education. And by sharing this experience with others, through the Mariner, it's even more important that I succeed. If you're reading this now, I'm assuming that you may have been going through the same experiences; so if I make it, friend, then you can too.

It is now the end of the first day. I've survived the meal plan that Carol set down for me (which she will do on a day-to-day basis for these first few weeks); I'm feeling a little hungry, and a little sore from the morning's exercises (adding insult to injury, I even took a two and a half mile walk this afternoon). But I Did It! And I can't wait until tomorrow.

Construction Courses For Women

Women will be learning the construction trades through a CETA-funded Women In Construction pre-apprenticeship project, beginning in October. The 18-week course is sponsored by Jobs, Inc., non-profit subsidiary of the Mass. State Building & Construction Trades Council, AFL-CIO.

WIC, which will train women to qualify for construction trades apprenticeships, will ease women's entry into this previously all-male profession. Participating women will develop marketable skills and qualify them for trade union membership.

In the first five weeks of training, union instructors will teach carpentry, electricity, plumbing, bricklaying, painting and sheet metal work. Each woman will then choose a specific craft for 13 weeks of in-depth study.

Five to six hours a day will be devoted to hands-on and classroom work. The women will train physically for the other one-and-a-half hours.

The closest area program site is Plymouth-Carver, chosen by the U.S. Department of Labor as a national demonstration project.

WIC responds to Federal regulations that state that all construction projects receiving over $10,000 in Federal funds must employ a certain percentage of women.

Quincy CETA, currently interviewing applicants for the Plymouth-Carver program, will pay participants hourly wages and transportation expenses.

After the women graduate, WIC counselors, with the help of union business agents and contractors, will help them seek apprenticeship openings. The placement rate for the 32-week pilot program in 1978 was 70%.

Women unemployed, low-income heads of household or public assistance recipients can qualify. High school diplomas are not required. For information, contact Patsy Bickford, 773-3983.

Those of us who save elastics, string and milk cartons used to be thought of as weirdos. But now, with inflation hitting over 13 per cent, we're at last coming into our own. No longer do they hoot as we spend considerable time undoing knots in string so we can reuse it. Petty economies fast are becoming the vogue. Hanging out the wash instead of turning on the dryer, turning off the dishwasher just after the dry cycle starts and switching off the lights in unused rooms are energy savers.

As always, it's the little things that count. Those of us who have refined the art, save pins from new shirts and blouses and even milk cartons that make wonderful kindling, as do ice cream cartons and candle stubs. They kindle quickly When you have the oven on, plan the meal so rice and vegetables can be baked along with meat. Now, when tomatoes are foisted upon us by all who have gardens, tuck this casserole in your oven. It's a favorite at the Peter Glick's house.

BAKED STUFFED TOMATOES

Choose medium-sized tomatoes. Wash and scoop out inside to form hollow cup. Dust with salt and fill with this mixture, enough for 6 tomatoes:

1 c. left-over cooked rice, or soft crumbled bread
1 T melted butter
1/2 c. minced cooked meat
Onion juice, salt and pepper

Place in a baking pan containing a little water. Lay thin slice of bacon on top of each tomato. Bake in 350 oven 35 to 40 min.

Saving gift boxes is a passion with some, and many iron miles of ribbon to go right back on other packages. Grocery bags are not only great for lining the waste basket but come in handy for wrapping out-of-town gifts to be mailed. The plastic bags for fruits and vegetables at the produce counter can be used over again, and some customers have been known to take a few extras from the roller. Don't use up your costly gas to run to the store when your sweet tooth is acting up. Junk foods are costly and do nothing for us nutrition-wise. But if your child has a passion for peanut butter, Mary Creed's cookies are rich in protein and delicious as well.

CHEWY PEANUT BARS
1 c. all-purpose flour
1 1/2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
3/4 c. sugar
1/2 c. creamy peanut butter
1/4 c. honey
2 eggs
1 c. salted peanuts, chopped

Combine flour, baking powder and salt. In separate bowl, mix sugar, peanut butter and honey til smooth. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Gradually add flour mixture. Stir in peanuts. Spread in greased 9'' pan. Bake at 350 degrees 20 to 25 min., or until cookies begin to shrink from sides of pan. Cool 15 min. Cut into squares.

One housewife we read of is a real 'penny pincher,' even though her husband is the former chairman of the New York Exchange. She's into aluminum foil, using it more than once after washing it, smoothing it out and storing for future use. Old toothbrushes are also saved to clean silver. To reach the heights when it comes to being miserly, you might want to save on the cost of your pantyhose. Buy two pair of the same color and when one leg gets a run, chop it off and save until the second pair also get a run in one leg. That is also chopped off to make a complete pair. It means wearing two pair of pants with one leg each, but who's to know? Your ideas are always welcome — recipes, too, of course. And if you care to share your thoughts on favorite ways of saving, give me a call.

KEEP WARM cheap WITH QUARTZ HEAT.

Quartz heat is revolutionary . . . in fact, it's downright mysterious . . . Other heat sources warm the air and therefore you get warm . . . not so with quartz heat! The people and furnishings in the room are warmed without the necessity (and expense) of heating the air.

Special settings and controls turn the unit on and off in such a way that at just the low setting comfort is achieved.

When the draw on the power source (electric) is computed often the result is heat for just a few pennis per hour.

We will be happy to explain more. Call us at 843-1133 or better yet, drop in and we wil give you a demonstration.

And, you'll be pleasantly surprised at the low, low cost.

New Choral Art Director Opens Season

The Choral Art Society, under its new conductor and music director William C. Sano, will begin rehearsals for its 22nd season on Monday evening, Sept. 17, at 8 p.m. at the Scituate Public Library, 85 Branch St., Scituate (lower-level meeting room and entrance).

Prospective members are invited to attend the first three rehearsals, and while no auditions are required, some previous musical experience is helpful. The first concert, in early December, will include Britten's "Ceremony of Carols," Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on Christmas Carols," and the Faure Requiem.

William T. Adams of Norwell, founder, music director and conductor of the Society, announced his decision to retire from that position in July of this year and his decision was reluctantly accepted by the Board of Directors, with a formal expression of appreciation and gratitude for his many years of devoted service to the Society and the cause of good music.

Robert Kniffen of Halifax, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Choral Art Society, and members of the board interviewed and auditioned applicants for the post of conductor, finally choosing William C. Sano of Swampscott as the new director.

Among Sano's professional associations are memberships in the Music Educator's National Conference; the Massachusetts Music Educatoar's Association; the American-Orff-Schulwerk Association, and the Eastern Division, American Choral Directors Association.

For more information about the Choral Art Society, membership, and rehearsals please call Robert Kniffen, 293-3147; Ellen Brown, Scituate, 545-0637; Ruth Sibley, Norwell, 659-2571; David Norris, Marshfield, 837-0985; or Nancy White, Cohasset, 383-1411.

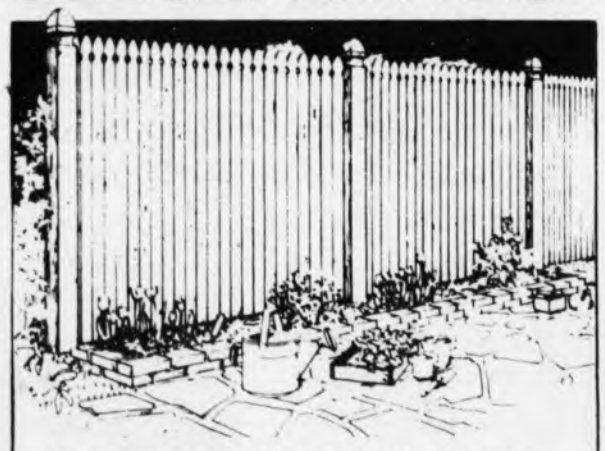
Abbott Nuclear Speaker

William Abbott of Plymouth will be featured speaker at a Nuclear Energy Forum to be held Sunday, Sept. 16 at 3 p.m. at the Harvey Auditorium of the First Parish Church, Tremont Street, Duxbury.

Joining Abbot with the economic implications of nuclear power will be Sylvia Ford of the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (Mass PIRG). Dennis Jaehne, a staff writer for New Roots (alternate energy magazine), will report on other approaches to the energy snortage, and a member of the Boston chapter, Physicians for Social Responsibility will review nuclear power's implications for health.

The forum is sponsored by the Duxbury Citizens for Safe Energy. There will be an opportunity to question speakers, and to get further information from an extensive collection of reports and articles.

There is no admission charge. All concerned area residents are invited.



Adapting Old To New Uses MAPC Topic

Adapting old buildings to new uses is the topic of a workshop sponsored by the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC). The workshop, first in a series of five sponsored by MAPC this fall, will be held Wednesday, Sept. 19, 9:30 a.m. to noon at MAPC's 5th Floor Conference Room, 44 School St., Boston.

Communities with old municipal buildings that no longer meet current needs are thinking twice about demolishing existing structures for new ones. High cost of new construction is making renovation and reuse more attractive. Apart from its economic sense, reusing older buildings of historical and architectural value helps maintain symbols of a community's pride and heritage.

Highlighting the workshop will be a discussion of the advantages and disadvantages of building reuse, along with specific planning tools and techniques pertinent to successful projects.

ANGLER'S CORNER

By Roger Hare

Hurricane David spoiled most of the fishing last week, sending the schools of all fish out into deeper water away from most angler's hooks.

Alan Meyer of Scituate found some nice rock cod just beyond Minot Light before the storm hit. He caught about a dozen on sea worms and they had a bright red color. Those cod are probably back there again now that the water has cleared.

Earl Bates of Marshfield fished south of the Cape last Friday and found that most of the fish had been put down, but he did catch one 10 pound sea trout.

Larry and Bonnie Anastasi fished off Minot Light before the storm with their sons, Len and Teddy. They hooked into some bluefish, but were not able to get any on board the Bonnie 11. Ted had a sea gull pick up his popping plug, take it up in the air like a kite, then snip the line and fly off.

We Hares fished on the Bonnie 11 on Labor Day with the Anastasi's and Larry put us into bluefish off Provincetown. Every one caught fish. Charline, Joyce, and Jim Hare and Cathy Stickles and Barbara Grube, Bonnie and Ted Anastasi caught at least two blues each. In all we caught 14 nice sized fish. Teddy lost another popping plug, but this time to a bluefish. The blues were full of squid so we used hoochys on the trolling lines. The dark pink color was a killer. We went back again on last Sunday, but the fish were down and we only caught two blues, but they were big fish.

I saw Carlton Chandler at the Green Harbor ramp Sunday. He was putting his lobster pots back in after taking them out to escape David. He said he had been doing quite well on the lobsters. It has been a pretty good year for most lobstermen.

The Giant Bluefin Tuna continues to be slow in our area. Kevin Scolar has caught the most fish so far. We watched Bill Drury boat his 6th tuna on Labor Day. Young Paul Hankey and Bill's son Brad helped to pull in and then harpoon the big fish.

This is my last column for the season. We have had only a fair fishing summer. There was a strong return of striped bass, and that fishing should be very good in the next few weeks.

The bluefishing was good, but not as good as last year, although bigger blues were caught. This fishing too will be very good through mid October as these fish feed up to head south.

The mackerel were spotty in and out of our area. There were no big schools of pogies as there have been in past years.

The cod and flounder were abundant and are back strong now so it is a good time to fill up the freezer.

The fresh water fishing was better than other years with lots of trout and bass being caught in our local ponds and streams.

I'll be fishing for the next few weeks so you can call me for any fishing information or if you have an unusual story that we can print. You can reach me at 834-9337. See you next year.

New Program

The Education of the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset has announced the addition of a certificate program in drawing and painting as another important step forward in the Center's expansion of cultural services.

Beginning this fall, students may choose to complete requirements for an art center certificate that will represent successful completion of basic courses in drawing, painting, art anatomy, color and design and art appreciation plus elective courses in portrait, landscape, crafts and 3-D.

Present students may count four terms of courses taken in the past three years toward their certificate. Certificate work should be completed four years from the beginning date but students may petition for extension.

As in the past, all Center courses including courses credited through the Mass. College of Art continuing education program can be taken individually without certificate or credit status.

Parting Is Such Sweet ????

Exactly three years ago I recounted a familiar family experience, namely the effect on Mother when the first child leaves home.

At that time sage women told me the wrench felt during the early separation from the little person (18 or older) would be repeated as each child left the nest. They were right.

During this last week hundreds of mothers have been put in the position of surrendering their offspring to state universities or colleges. And we're constantly plagued by the possibility that those venerable institutions, regardless of their imperial costs, are not as worthy of our young people as we are.

PATCHES

It's a challenge for the places of higher learning to qualify as recipients of our young. Yet the amazing part is that the boys and girls eagerly opt for the places away from home. Though we raised them to grow up and away, it's always a shock to us when they leave. Consequently, a metamorphasis ensues not only for the one leaving, but for the one left . . . "Aloner" than she's been since he was born.

It astonished me Sunday, as I leaned against the car outside a coed dormitory, the distance we'd traveled in 18 years, from an absolutely dependent tiny person in a drawstring blue-checked nightgown to a tall person in tee shirt and jeans who's in charge of self-proclaimed independence.

And the schools are different from what they used to be. Gone are the rosy-cheeked housemothers greeting demure maidens in charming dormitory lounges. Forever a memory are e arly curfews, the nightly bedchecks and the off limits rooms of tender maidens.

I tell you it's a shocker, even the second time around. And kids are going to college now with the aid of U-Hauls for possessions parents still don't have. I watched a lissome lass from New York unloading her station wagon as her mother sighed with a mixture of relief and despair. The student had a television set, a stereo, a broiler/toaster affair, steamer trunk and enough clothing to outfit all the Jaycee women on the South Shore.

Two other girls had boxes of plants with which to stock their rooms so as to inspire the envy of any horticulturalist. And they all seemed to have everything under control, especially as soon as the parents left. I saw one mother making up her son's bed, all fresh and clean, one final gesture . . . that I didn't make.

Among all those people on campus the only ones who looked confused were parents. We surrendered our children like we would an impacted wisdom tooth, for the general good, but not without pain. And I saw a sign as we drove away on a fence by a field of raspberries. The sign said picking of the berries would resume Wednesday. The day being Sunday I figured I could show up there, pick a few berries, drop by the dorm to say hello . . .

But of course that was a mother's momentary fantasy, thinking she could oversee a life that was let loose upon the world. That's the point, you see, we should learn from the first one, but we don't. You can take the child away from the mother but you can never take the mother out of a woman.

Anyway instead mothers go home to clean the room vacated by a college student. She polishes and cleans his home sanctuary, and puts his childhood away . . . the baseball trophies, the pictures of the boy and the dog when both were pups, the Earth, Wind & Fire album that is silent in his absence.

And while the new bigtime students are buying books, organizing their sneakers in the closet and being introduced (properly) to classmates, Mother is making her adjustments. She's trying not to boil too many potatoes, giving the cat the milk before it goes sour for want of a human consumer, and taking the leaf out of the kitchen table . . . again.

But most mothers are lucky. They still have the father of the child who went away. It's his duty, and one he takes to with ease, to remind the old girl that he who goes away will come home with dirty laundry, among which are the good towels.

And what's more, the parents are put on notice, repeatedly, that they're going to be left with one another, if they're lucky. It'll be back to the pre-crib, pre-baseball, pre-prom days. And, you know that's titillating. We don't remember what we were like b.c. (Before Children).

Just think, some day the last of the birds will fly the coop. My immediate reaction is one of sadness. My secondary thought, however, may be an awareness that there are other things to do besides parenting. Meantime, though, in the September Separation, Mother is still trying to understand a void that's home in the place of a kid who's "Outta here."

☐the lover's lament: "I was about to kiss her until I saw the spinach in her teeth."

☐A specialist is a person who knows a lot about a little. Right? If he keeps studying more and more, he finally knows everything about nothing. A generalist, who knows a little about a lot, will, if he keeps studying, finally know nothing about everything, right?

☐I fear some relatives even when they're not bearing gifts.

☐I had a bad dream last night. The pilot of my plane had a death wish.

☐The greatest waste of human resources in the U.S. is the skilled physician who retires early.

Mary Mele At Relocation Conference

Mary Mele, Relocation Director for Gallery of Homes' Hingham office of Richardson & Collins, recently spent two days at a National Relocaton Seminar presented by the Relocation Department of Gallery of Homes. Over 30 Relocation Directors attended the seminar in Chicago.

The seminar was designed to acquaint the people involved with the new National programs being initiated to assure timely and free flowing information between Galleries for assisting supporting families being transfered from one part of the country to another.

Gallery also helps coordinate moves of local industries and national corporations which frequently move personnel. Programs were discussed which would help meet the needs of large corporate transfers by minimizing administrative costs through limiting corportative time involvement; minimizing actual relocation cost via cutting time required to buy and sell homes through Galleries proven marketing methods; and helping alleviate employee concerns by educating them about their new community and helping them get settled quickly.

Mary invites you to call her at 749-2300 for assistance or to answer questions about how Richardson & Collins, Gallery of Homes can help with reloca tion problems.

Vote On School Supt.'s Contract Expected Monday

Despite objections made by two school committee members, the committee voted to discuss the renewal of the school superintendent's contract in an executive session Monday night.

According to School Committee Chairman Jack Langmaid, the reason for the session was because the school supt's contract could have an impact upon the school administrator's contract.

He added that the results of negotiations will be voted upon and made public at a meeting to be held Monday, Sept. 24.

The committee voted for the executive session four to one with one abstention. Committeewoman Patricia Walsh voted no; Martha Gjesteby abstained from voting after saying "I find nothing wrong with his (Maloney's) competency or health."

Ms. Walsh said it was her understanding the superintendent's contract was exempt from collective bargaining.

"We've done it for years that way," Irene Brown said.

"That doesn't mean it's right," Frank England responded.

Langmaid said "We don't have to do anything in public if it impacts upon collective bargaining."

At that point during discussion England opted to call the school committee's attorney, Allen Miller, regarding the issue.

After the attorney was contacted, Langmaid said "Counsel informed us we should take a vote and that the contract will affect the finances of the town."

England added: "Counsel said it couldn't effect the contract overall, but it could effect the finances of the town."

At 9:45 p.m. the committee entered into an executive session to discuss the contract. Langmaid said the committee would reconvene in open session only to adjourn.

CHS Soccer Nets And Poles Vandalized

A new set of soccer goals, valued at $850, were vandalized last Thursday. Police gave chase after a call from a resident, but no suspects were apprehended.

School Supt. John Maloney made the school committee aware of the damage at Monday's session, saying that he wasn't yet sure of the money needed to straighten the cross bars or replace the nets, which were completely destroyed.

Committeeman Frank England, a soccer coach, said, "This happens in all towns. In other towns teams take the goals down after a game. You cannot leave the soccer goals up. One problem is that there is no storage room at the high school."

Committee chairman Jack Langmaid concurred with England, advising that the goals should be removed from the fields and stored overnight in the future. There was no formal vote of the committee.

OTHER ACTION

In other school business, Supt. Maloney asked the committee to readvertise bids for playground equipment as past specifications had not been met by bidders. "I feel we can get a product we want, now."

Supt. Maloney also alerted

Walk In Whitney Woods With Your Noisy Children

By Tanna Kasperowicz

The silence was golden... until you came. Your son is on top of Bigelow Boulder, which he climbed up easily enough but now can't or won't slide down.

Ten minutes later. He and his friend are gone. You break the quiet peace of the afternoon by screaming their names through the woods. Should you go for the police? How would you explain you told them to go for a walk in the woods and get lost?

The last maps of these woods were printed in 1946 and there are very few left. So if you contemplate walking in Whitney Woods in the near future you had better clip this map.

It is not the neatest most accurate map in the world because I made it. However, it should get you through Whitney Woods and back safely enough. If not, head north 'til you hit 3A.

If you want to play it safe, stay on the trails, or the bridle paths.

Herb Marsh, a newly appointed member of the historical commission, and an employee of the woods' trustees, graciously offered to take me on a hour's tour of the woods

How Students Rate Teachers

As the school committee beat its brains this week figuring out how to analyze teacher efficiency and evaluate the classroom scene, The Mariner took a more simplistic approach.

We simply asked students how their teachers were doing so far. The additional information we received followed as a matter of course.

At the onset we promised students, but not their teachers, anonimity. In spite of our attempts to gather sensational information, we found that students almost without exception are pleased with their teacher assignments this year.

Here's what they said about . . .

OSGOOD/DEER HILL TEACHERS

MR. MCGINNIS

"He has blond hair and hazel green eyes." — girl student.

"Well, yeah, I guess he's ok." — boy student.

MRS. WHITLEY

"Last year the kids said I had gotten General Whitley, but she's turned out pretty nice."

"She doesn't give too much homework."

"She gives us "Becker money, then at the end of every month kids bring in pencils and gum and we buy it

Sunday. It was lovely.

We didn't take a picnic but there is a picnic area at the Sohier Street entrance. If you plan a short walk, do take a canteen of water. You get very thirsty walking through the woods.

This tract of unbroken forest land contains about 688 acres. Part of it lies in Hingham, but most of it is in Cohasset. The trustees formed an organization in 1891 for preservation but the largest tract of this land was acquired in 1933 and named "Whitney Woods." It is under the supervision of a local committee.

Aside from the bridle paths, long used by horseback riders, the woods has a system of foot trails which stretch for 12 miles and wind through both swamp and low hills.

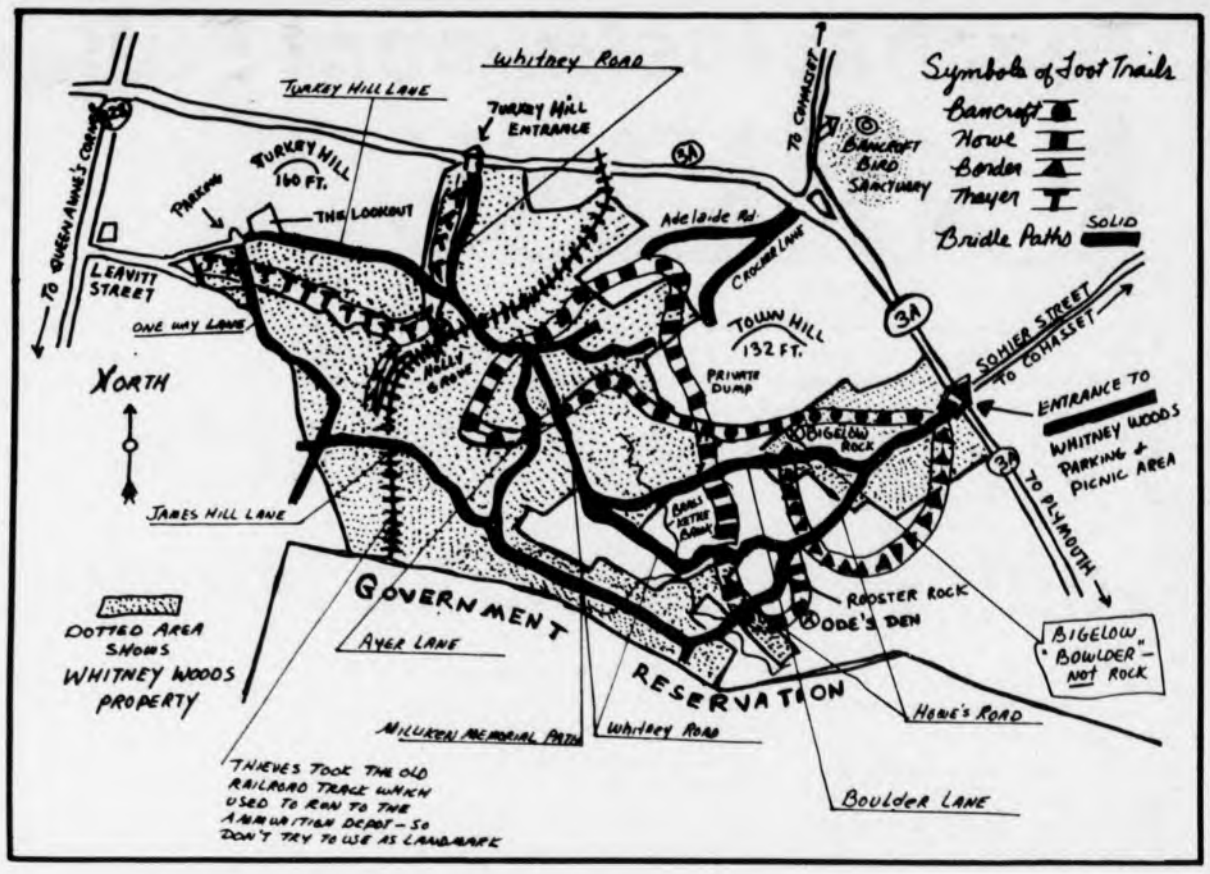
Path symbols are painted on trees and rocks. Sometimes the path disappears — but the trees and rocks continue to signal you on your way.

WE SEE A HUMAN

Around about Boulder Lane we met Robert MacMasters and his dog, who came in from the Hingham side. MacMasters said to be sure to spell his name "Mac," even though his relatives in Scotland use the plain old "Mc."

He complained about the private dump in the Howe foot trail area (see my map), but Herb said it's perfectly legal, the man owns the land and the foot trail will have to be rerouted. The dump is an old wood and stump dump — not for trash or garbage.

We didn't get to "Ode's Den," which is on Howe foot trail near Brass Kettle Brook. "Ode," who was Theodore Pritchard, made his home under a large fragment of rock in 1829 or so. He was reportedly discouraged with life, having lost his home on Sohier Street and his body was found one Spring near his den.



Rooster Rock is on the southeast side of Howe's Road. It is perched five or six feet high upon the top of another boulder. And it does resemble a rooster.

Herb pointed out a few water holes here and there which were created under the administration of President Delano Roosevelt to be used as water holes in case of fire, a public works project. They are lined with stones and do seem to catch the rain water well.

Great horned owls, raccoons, foxes, skunks, birds can all be found in the woods. Oak, maples, ash, black birch and witch hazel bushes abound. The Milliken Memorial Path was planted with many non-local plants and in their season rhododendrons, azaleas and other choice shrubs bloom among the rocks.

The railroad track which appears on my map is no longer around. Can you believe it was stolen? "It used to go into the ammunition depot at the government reservation. It was a short line which connected with the New Haven line," Herb said.

Somewhere in the woods is the foundation of an old school house, but no one has ever located it. Can you?

the school committee to the possibility of the schools being closed for a half holiday on Monday as a result of the visit of the Pope to Boston.

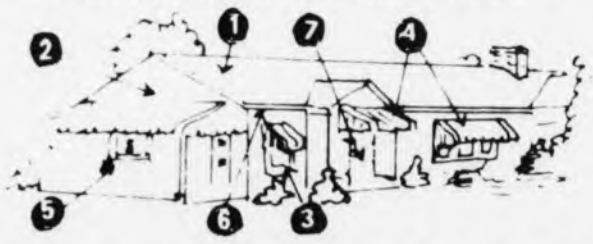
A declared holiday would be a waver from the 180 school day schedule," he said.

The committee made two appointments: Priscilla Johnsen as a 1/5 Spanish teacher at the high school at bachelor's step 3, $2,400 a year; also Melissa Haught as a gifted/talented teacher at the Deer Hill School on a part-time four day 20-hour week, $3,500 a year.

Enrollment figures as of September 13 were not made known to the press, as Supt. Maloney said an official school census would not be finalized until Oct. 1. He did say there had been a major decline in the student population at the Osgood School, while enrollment was down by only 10 students at the high school.

Story Hour

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will present two six-week series of pre-school story hours on Thursday and Friday afternoons at 1:30 p.m. beginning Thursday, Oct. 4. Any child between the ages three-and-a-half and five is welcome to register.



The story hours are given by volunteers who have completed the "Storyteller's Workshop" sponsored by the library. Each program lasts approximately 40 minutes and is designed to bring the best in book experiences to the young child.

Children may be registered in the children's room any day after 2 p.m. or by calling Ms. Mitchell or Ms. Pope at 383-1348 any afternoon. Any adult interested in assisting with the program is also invited to leave their name and phone number.

Teacher Instrument Evaluation Success

Perhaps it was partly the way the teacher evaluation committee, under the chairmanship of Ralph Dormitzer, presented it.

Maybe it was the Charlie Brown cartoons they used to help make their points. The skit presented by Osgood School Principal Jack Creamer and Christine Collins was as funny as it was instructive — and there were no rehearsals.

But mostly, the school committee Monday night voted to approve the new evaluating instrument with some minor definition work to be done because it was just so good.

The evaluation committee, composed of Christine Collins, Ralph Dormitzer, Denise Desmond, Jack Hartwell, Diana Kornet and Pat Wunschel had been working on short notice since August in an attempt to devise an instrument which would help teachers improve the quality of their instruction and simplify the format of evaluation.

They appeared to have achieved the school committee's goals with the instrument presented this week.

Twenty competencies were listed which Dormitzer said "represent skills we feel teachers should have." An assessment form broke classroom instruction into four domains: environment, competitive domain, affective domain and class management.

Dormitzer said the instrument provides for direct observation and encourages a closer relationship between the teacher and her supervisor and provides for a review of growth throughout the year.

It was also pointed out that the instrument makes no difference between tenured or non-tenured teachers, nor does it specify the frequency of teacher/administrator conferences.

Ms. Collins went into detail on the cognitive domain, which she said was comprised of six levels. "A teacher has to know what level she is functioning on:" recall, comprehension, application, analysis, synthesis (originality), or evaluation.

The instrument was designed to measure only the personal growth of teachers, it will not compare teachers to one another.

No Flu Vaccine

The state has notified Dr. Roger Pompeo that the flu vaccine will not be available at the dates specified in the Cohasset Mariner last week.

The flu clinics will, however, be held sometime in November.

from each other and give the money back to Mrs. Whitley. It's called "Becker money" because Mr. Becker, a sixth grade teacher, invented it."

"We're comparing man to apes, Samon and something else."

"In sixth grade teachers don't give peanuts. If you finish your work she always wants you to be reading a book. She's awful nice."

MRS. FINK

"She has her private piano but she can't play it."

"She has a water fountain in her room."

"When you don't have a snack she gives out crackers and peanuts."

MR. STOCKBRIDGE

"He says he's firm and fair and that's what he is."

MS. BOWKER

"She's doing very well."

"The smartest kid in her room is really smart because he has lots of brothers and sisters to help with homework."

"The talking is better."

"I think she knows what she's doing."

"She always says 'stop talking.' "

MRS. COLLINS

"She's coming along good. She gives out candy. And we go out for three recesses — when I get into second grade we will only have two recesses and we have four recesses when it's winter time."

MR. NARCO

"He's the director of the language department. He's great. He sort of jumps around alot. He's probably about 40."

"He gives a fair amount of homework — about 45 minutes worth."

MR. FLYNN

"He's a nice guy. He's very relaxed."

MR. CHATTERTON

"He's good, but I've only had him one day so I really can't evaluate him."

MRS. MONTUORI

"She's about 30, married. She's doing ok so far — she's very nice."

MR. DEACON

"He seems to know what he's doing. He gives a lot of homework — half an hour each subject."

MRS. TEWKSBURY

"I'm not sure how well she's doing. She hasn't given out candy yet."

(The Mariner would like to point out that there was some discrepency here as another student reported:)

"She gives out M & M's if she likes our work and we're good to her." (We plan to investigate the conflicting evaluations).

MRS. MORVECK

"When you go into the classroom you have to get to work immediately."

MRS. MCDONALD

"She's fair and she's nice and she helps people if they're stuck."

"There's nothing really mean about her. If you're extra special good you get a point for the point bank, and when you get 15 points you can play a soccer game or a kick-ball game."

"If you're bad you get a point taken away."

"I can't really tell if it's harder this year — we just started you know."

MRS. CLARK

"Oh she's so nice. She gives M & Ms on Friday afternoons."

HIGH SCHOOL TEACHERS

"They're all nice. The ones that are supposed to be bad I won't get until next term."

MR. MIKA

"He's fine. He's serious. He doesn't try to be funny."

MR. KITE

"Yes, that's as in 'go fly.' "

"He tends to get into a conversation then goes off into some really interesting subjects insteading of keeping a really strict outline. I hate teachers who follow strict outlines."

MR. SHEEHAN

"I really haven't seen him very much. I'll probably know him better later. He's fun, but I wouldn't go so far as to say he's a character."

MRS. WUNSCHEL

"She talks to us instead of at us."

"She's really good."

MR. THOMPSON

"He bounces around a lot — makes the course really fun, and I'm a kid who's always hated science."

Wilfred O'Mara Cooney

Wilfred O'Mara Cooney, 67, of Cohasset, a retired mechanical engineer for the former Bethlehem Steel Corp. Fore River Shipyard in Quincy, died at home Sunday, Sept. 16.

Born in Brownville Junction, Maine, he had lived in Cohasset for 36 years.

He was a 1935 graduate of the University of Maine.

He leaves his wife, Eleanor (Trowt) Cooney; three daughters, Nancy Cooney of Boston, Carolyn Cooney of Santa Cruz, Calif., and Mrs. Christine Black of Wantagh, N.H.; a brother, Edward C. Cooney of Winchester; and two sisters, Mrs. Zena Egleston of Belmont and Mrs. Ardelle MacNamara of Arlington.

A memorial service was held Wednesday at Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St.

Monitoring Power

This is a questionnaire regarding the ability of society to conduct and regulate itself in the common interest.

The troublesome word is power, which threads its way throughout life and particularly makes itself evident in the hands of the public official. Or does it?

What person(s) singlehandedly controls state/federal or local government? Who at any given moment has the power at The Boston Globe, The New York Times, The Patriot Ledger or The Mariner?

When we elect our public officials or employ municipal employees to what extent do we have the right to monitor their private lives, to examine their personal investments? Can there be such a thing as management apart from the situation it tries to manage?

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) is presently contacting local officials with regard to their opinion about a proposed financial disclosure bill for municipal officials and employe's.

Rep. Murray, although she voted in favor of financial disclosure as it pertains to legislators, said she is against a similiar measure for local officials.

"Ed King has had his problems with appointees who refuse to be named to posts. They don't wish to disclose their finances; they feel it's an invasion of privacy."

Rep. Murray added that the average taxpayer "feels it's ridiculous. Who would review the information? — newspapers, TV, anyone who has a gripe against certain legislators. A man's life could be tarred for life."

So far Rep. Murray has received six verbal responses (all antidisclosure) from four members of the Cohasset School Committee, one member on the Cohasset Board of Health, and a member of the Hull Board of Assessors.

Over the next several months she will be soliciting responses from the community at large in anticipation of the bill which is expected to come up for vote sometime in 1980.

While there are no trappings attached to the proposed bill at this stage, Rep. Murray feels it will basically mirror the legislators' own disclosure law with respect to income, mortgage, taxes, investments.

We are interested in how you feel about the matter. Please clip the bottom half of this editorial and return it to The Cohasset Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, 02025. Or drop your response off at The Colonial Pharmacy. We'd like to receive your responses by October 5.

Please Circle:
(Use additional paper for longer responses)

1. I am an (A) elected public official (B) appointed public official (C) resident (D) municipal employee (E) former public official/municipal employee.

2. I am (A) in favor (B) not in favor of financial disclosure as it pertains to local public officials and municipal employees.

(If your answer to question 2 was (A), please answer the following questions):

Comment regarding range, titles and description of elected and appointed positions which should be subject to financial disclosure requirements of some type.

Comment on type and nature of associations and interests — financial or otherwise — that you feel should be reported.

Comment on focus of responsibility for administering and enforcing disclosure requirements.

Comment on the sanctions which you feel should be applied for non-compliance.

3. If you are not in favor of financial disclosure for local officials please state your reasons why you are not.

Thank you

Trolling With Ellis

Commentary

By Chet Ellis

One of the most picturesque and popular spots in Cohasset may be in for some official scrutiny and action before next summer arrives.

The Mill River bridge, long a favorite spot for a few Cohasset youths to do their imitation of the ol' swimming hole routine is beginning to attract large numbers of young people from surrounding towns. They have come from as far away as Randolph and Milton.

Selectman Arthur Clark admits that, in the past, the town has always tolerated this activity as long as the participants were local kids and the numbers were few, but now "the word has gotten out" and the hoards have arrived.

Residents driving to Government Island on a warm day in July or August will have to face a street full of bathing-suited teenagers engaged in a sport known as "Bridge Jumping." Also, as sometimes happens with large groups, the mood can turn ugly when motorists, attempting to get through, voice their objections to the congestion.

Cohasset police periodically clear out the area, but within minutes of their departure, the amateur John Weissmullers are back doing their jackknives and back flips off the bridge abuttments. Lt. Charles Stockbridge, a famous bridge jumper of past decades, maintains that the only way the congestion can be curtailed is to station an officer at the bridge on a full-time basis, which, we agree, is not practical.

I wonder if a Troll would take the job?

Officials are in a quandry as to what to do to relieve the situation. Selectmen have considered solutions such as rebuilding to "unclimbable heights" the bridge abuttments or construction so a chain link fence above the existing abutments and continuing along the sides.

Neither solution seems acceptable in the opinion of many local bridge artists and sportsmen. Jim Gallagher, a local angler of note, has been singing "Don't Fence Me In" to anyone who will listen since the bridge is his spot to grab a hungry bass during a tidal change through the Mill River rapids.

Although no one yet has been seriously injured as a result of jumping off the bridge or a traffic accident, Selectman Rocky Laugelle feels something must be done before the situation gets worse.

Apparently he has received a large number of complaints from area residents and local concerned citizens. "An article in next year's town meeting warrant is a possibility," says Laugelle. When asked if he had ever done any bridge jumping as a kid, Rocky quickly changed the subject.

Seriously, we agree that congestion on the Mill River bridge is fast reaching the point where something should be done. Add up the effects of Hugo's parking, white water canoeists, traffic to Government Island, and bridge jumpers and you have a disaster waiting to happen.

Perhaps an open hearing could be held by Selectmen where suggestions from all sides can be aired to develop an acceptable or at least a compromise approach for a future town meeting article. Or, on the other hand, if we could just find that Troll . . .

(Mr. Ellis is a resident of Tower Lane. ED.)

Around Town Hall

SCHOOL BUSES

School officials are still monitoring the busing situation, and adjustments will be made. At a recent meeting, School Committeewoman Patricia Walsh said she had received several complaints from parents regarding the congestion of buses. John Creamer, principal of Osgood School, said some buses were leaving school as late as 2:55 p.m.

MEETING DATE SET

Selectmen officially called for a special town meeting to be held at 7:30 p.m. October 22, at the high school as a result of having received a 200 signature petition asking that the town pay police and fire contracts.

Once approved, the contracts will be retroactive to July 1, 1979. The total increase for the police department if $20,920 including first and second step increases of five percent and a maximum step of 6.13 per cent. The firefighters' contract is for $27,578 ($23,691 for salaries and $3,887 for expenses). That money represents a five per cent increase for regular firefighters.

WARRANT CLOSES WED.

Selectmen will close the warrant for the October 22 special town meeting at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, September 19. However, a late filing provision will be made for the water and sewer commission which may propose articles for a new sewage treatment plant or expanded facilities.

SELECTMEN ARTICLES

On a motion by Selectman Rocco Laugelle, selectmen unanimously voted to include an article on the October 22 annual town meeting warrant which would retain the water and sewer commissioners in their present capacity, and not split the commission into two separate boards.

Additional articles to be placed on the warrant are as follows: an unpaid bill of $400 for legal stenographers on the Kuhn case; a $900 increase in salary for the building inspector whose position has been reclassified by the personnel board. The reclassification would put the building inspector at $15,514 maximum.

Also, an article to appropriate $2,500 to repair the flood gate at Straits Pond, and an article to repair the heating system at police headquarters.

Moving Tale

Sadly, we have just moved from Cohasset (we were transferred) and we would like one subscription to be sent to us in Connecticut, and the other subscription to our son, who left last week for a position with a company building a military base in Saudi Arabia.

Tod is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Fairfield University '79.

Looking forward to reading "the Mariner" again. As they say, there may not be much to see in a small town but what you hear makes up for it.

Sincerely,
Joan M. MacKenize

Committee Votes To Upgrade Curriculum

The following goals were voted by the School Committee at their September meeting. The goal to upgrade the curriculum will be limited to high school English, Grades 7-12.

In addition, the superintendent, principals and/or appointees will work on a coordinated curriculum with special emphasis in the elementary schools in reading and listening skills.

The School Committee will request two soccer fields or two all-purpose fields be made available from the school facilities committee, and that the School Committee will furnish the justification for the fields to the school facilities committee.

The superintendent has been directed to initiate a cost-awareness program for every employe in the school system — not just for books, paper and equipment. The program is to be devised so that every person will be aware of "the little things" that add up to a considerable sum: phone calls, etc.

The superintendent will prepare for the administrator's unit negotiations by developing a management plan for delegating responsibilities.

In addition, the business manager will set up standard procedures and regulations for the accounting of all student activity funds by students and all class faculty advisors. Committee members felt this would be a good opportunity to teach students the proper methods of the business world.

The business manage will be the coordinator of a program to use the math department computer to do the work needed by the Cohasset School system for budgeting, purchasing, scheduling and the program will be coordinated with the assistance of the town accountant.

around town

Three new citizens arrived in town recently and here are their introductions:

☐Michael and Barbara Parziale of 11 Bayberry Lane are the parents of a daughter, Carol Ann, born Aug. 20 at South Shore Hospital. She joins Michael, 21, Thomas, 19, Ann, 17, Gary, 13, John, 11, and Joseph, 5, at home. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Parziale of Medford and Mrs. Gordon Thompson of Franklin.

☐Daniel and Joyce Curran of 11 Church St., are the parents of a son, Nicholas Daniel, born Sept. 2, at St. Margaret's Hospital. Their family also includes Derrick, 16, Rebecca, 13, and Martha, 5. Mrs. Regina Curran of Weymouth is the child's grandmother, Mrs. Gladys Salemme, a native of Cohasset, is great-grandmother.

☐James and Barbara Grant of 14 Holly Lane are parents of a daughter, Hannah Elizabeth, born at South Shore Hospital Sept. 8. They also have two daughters, Erica, 6, and Meredith, 3. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Grant of Abington and Mr. and Mrs. James Mullin of Weymouth. Mrs. Annie O'-Donnell of Weymouth is great-grandmother. The Grants moved to Cohasset last May from Needham.

☐Belated birthday wishes are extended to Burt Pratt, of 75 Ripley Road, who gracefully acknowledged his 60th in July. His wife, Helen, and family, Pete and Joy, and good friends, the Herbert Crehan's, the Bill Browns, and the Migliaccios, joined him for a bar-be-que picnic at his home. Pratt works for Dennison Press in Weymouth and in his hometown is well known as Town Historian; he has written two volumes of "A Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset." (He is also a fence viewer!) Many happy returns!

FUNCTIONAL FORMS — are functionally comfortable when designed and built by Cohasset resident James Fitzpatrick.

☐Whenever Diana or Allison Kornet ride their bikes to school, their dog Jerry follows along, like the faithful lamb, and good as gold (he's a golden retriever), stays outside the school house door until the girls are dismissed.

☐Three former School Committee members were honored last Thursday night at a dinner at the Greenhouse Restaurant, a tradition of long standing with the Committee. Ann Baird, Josephine Mahoney DiGirolamo, and Doris Golden were wined, dined, awarded, and, as expected, "roasted," a little. Their hosts were present School Committee members Jack Langmaid, Diana Kornet, Frank England, Irene Brown, Pat Walsh, Martha Gjesteby, and Dr. and Mrs. John Maloney, and John Raftery.

Doris Golden produced "A Day In The Life of a School Committee Member," which included remembrances of members in a humorous way, as portrayed in a mock meeting, with items like 25-page minutes, and 400-page reports from the Superintendent. Irene Brown likened those present to entrees in a menu, with such delectables as "Gum soup, garnished with life savers" for Josephine DiGirolamo, "Weston fried in saki" for Ann Baird, and "Gray sole," for Doris Golden.

☐What are the past, honored School Committee members doing now with all that leisure time? "I'm winding down and doing things that I never had time to do before," says Doris Golden, a member for six years, and Chairman for five. Josephine DiGirolamo, a member for five years, says she is taking a sabbatical and devoting more time to her family and the Health Spa. Ann Baird, a three year member, is still busy, but pleasurably so, with rounds of farewell parties for her and husband George, for their imminent move to Japan. Mr. Baird will be establishing a new office of Hay Associates, a world wide management consulting firm, in Tokyo.

☐The Nawns leave Cohasset for the second time and after many moves across the country, are hoping this return to Fort Worth, Texas will be permanent. Joanne Young Nawn was the very able author of this column from the first issues of the Cohasset Mariner until August. She also wrote many feature articles, substitute taught in the Cohasset schools, and did free-lance writing.

Her husband, John Nawn, is a vice president of Harsco Corp. and of Cantex, a manufacturer of plastics. Their family includes T.G., a fine photographer who will be entering his junior year of high school; Priscilla who lives in Brookline and works for Mass. Financial Services; John who lives and works in Chicago; Christopher, who attends Colorado College; and Andrew, a 4th grader.

☐What's three feet long with a circular disc at the bottom that goes beep-beep-beep at the beach? It's not a solar popcorn popper, but it is a metal detector. If you have ever lost a metal pop-top from your beer or soda can, or an old spoon, loose change, or a ring, try following one of these gizmos around and maybe the thing will turn up your lost item. No guarantees that the 'operator' will give it over to you; they scour miles of sand for 60 cents and maybe an ankle bracelet.

I don't need to spend $30-60 for one of those gadgets, I've got my own. He's about four feet tall and this summer he turned up 13 cents, two gold bracelets, and enough pop-top tops to build 10 metal detectors. He's also good at the dump, but I haven't brought him to compete with the machines at their other favorite haunts — fair grounds, estate sales, and house demolitions!

Way Cleared For Tax-Ax Petition Drive

The petition is entitled "TAX-AX". The petition has been sent to the Secretary of State's office so that the petition forms can be printed. Rep. Murray is one of the TAX-AX sponsors.

"Although several other petitions were filed this year concerning cutting taxes, my income tax cut plan goes right to the heart of the matter — by cutting income taxes by $318 million, state government is forced to reduce itself. In doing so, disposable income increases to the point where wage earners' spending creates thousands of private sector jobs," Rep. Murray said.

TAX-AX is a signature petition drive that would place the question of an income tax cut plan before the House of Representatives in 1980. If the House fails to pass the bill, additional signatures will be gathered in order to have the question placed on the 1980 ballot as a binding referendum question.

The petition calls for the reduction of state income taxes. It would repeal the 7 1/2 per cent surtax on income, increase the exemptions for persons over 65 and for all dependents from $799 to $1,200 and the deductions for dependents under age of 12 from $600 to $1,200. The personal exemption for the taxpayer and spouse would change from an amount varying between $2,600 to $4,600, depending on income from the spouse, to $4,000 regardless of income of the spouse.

Also, the petition would increase the amount for which no tax is due from $3,000 to $4,000 for single taxpayers and from $5,000 to $6,000 for joint taxpayers. It would exclude the first $2,000 of unearned income of single taxpayers and married taxpayers filing separately and the first $4,000 of unearned income of married taxpayers filing jointly.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset recently announced the Attorney General's Office has approved a petition filed by Rep. William G. Robinson (R-Melrose) which would provide for a $318 million income tax cut.

Town Hall

BIDS INVITED

At 8:30 p.m. on October 3 Selectmen will award a bid for approximately 57,000 gallons of gasoline (including the school department's needs).

APPOINTMENT

Atty. John Roy was appointed as an associate member of the Board of Appeals. Selectmen said they were impressed with Roy's real estate law background and the fact that Roy practices in the Dorchester area. "We didn't want someone who was practicing in town," Selectman Henry Ainslie said.

FEES REVIEWED

Selectmen noted that a recent survey conducted by the Town of Hingham showed Cohasset fees for various licenses the lowest of four towns in the area.

MOIR LOSES APPEAL

The Civil Service Commission has upheld Selectmen on seven of 11 charges issued against former Cohasset Patrolman David Moir, who has now lost his last appeal to retain his job.

In Spring 1978 Moir was discharged by Selectmen on 11 charges of misconduct. The charges included two counts of assault and battery and one count of assault with a dangerous weapon.

DOANE STREET SUBDIVISION

A subdivision proposal calling for 12 house lots on a 4.5 acre parcel on Doane Street has been taken under advisement by the planning board. Engineer for the property owner is Walter Winchester of Fairbanks Management Co. of Cohasset. Residents at the hearing were concerned about adequate drainage conditions and disruption of the presently "quiet" neighborhood.

Sweet Story

On the last day of school last year a first grader decided to give her teacher a present — her mother's pewter sugar bowl.

The sugar had a matching creamer, but the little girl did not choose to give the teacher the entire set, perhaps because it was too large a gift to swipe.

The teacher graciously accepted the bowl, but rightly suspected something awry as the bowl was not wrapped. Her suspicions were confirmed when she opened the lid and found sugar!

Jack Creamer, Osgood School Principal was contacted and he handled the situation beautifully, as usual.

Creamer quietly returned the sugar to its rightful owner.

Annual Library Book Sale Scheduled Oct. 12-13

By Richard Hayes
Chief Librarian

The annual book sale sponsored by the Friends of the Library will be held Friday and Saturday, Oct. 12-13 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Each year volunteers contribute many hours to this project. The main purpose is to recycle used books — discards from the library — as well as those donated by residents. The funds, $500-$800 each year, are used by the Friends to improve the library's book collection, services and equipment.

Please bring your donations to the library. If you tell us how many volumes, we'll give you a letter for tax purposes. But no musty, dirty books, or school and college texts are wanted, please.

The library will check each book given, and if it is needed in the library's collection, it will be kept. The rest will be offered in the Friend's book sale.

Recent additions to the New Book Room (shelf number in parentheses; "B" means Biography, which comes after numbered books: Dave Anderson, Sports of Our Times (796); Isaac Asimov, Extra-terrestrial Civilization (574.999); Leonard Baker, Days of Sorrow and Pain: Leo Baeck and the Berlin Jews (296.6); David Detzer, The Brink: Cuban Missle Crisis, 1962 (972.91); Elizabeth Mooney, In the Shadow of the White Plague: The Story of a Tuberculosis Victim in the 1920's (B-Comstock); Consumer Guide, Gas Saver's Guide (629.2); Margaret Donaldson, Children's Minds (370.15); Carol Green, Dressage Explained (798); John Gribbin, What's Wrong with Our Weather?: The Climactic Threat of the 21st Century (551.6); William Hoffer, Saved!: The Story of the Andrea Doria (910); Albert Jackson & David Day, Tools and How to Use Them (621.0); Naomi James, Alone Around the World:First Woman to Sail Single-handedly Around the World (910.41); Stuart Kahan & Robert M. Four Lanes & Electric Pinsetters Too!

Who says Cohasset kids have nowhere to go?

There's always candlepin bowling at the community center. With town and school recreation programs in full swing, it's easy for little kids and adults to get an alley.

Shoes can be rented for 10 cents a pair. "We have three sizes of everything," manager Bill O'Connell said, "and if we don't have the right size, kids can bowl in their stocking feet." He added that after use all shoes are sprayed with a deodorizer/disinfectant.

It costs 50 cents for members ($10 family membership, $5 individual) to bowl a string, and 75 cents for non-members. "When the lanes opened last spring we had kids waiting to bowl all through the night.

"But we're still feeling our way along this fall," O'Connell said. "This will be our first winter. On grey, rainy days we're packed. On sunny days you can't tell. Sometimes they're here, sometimes not."

O'Connell, a retired Boston Post Office employee helped attract kids to the alleys this summer by recommending to the community center board it offer three strings for $1. He's a competitive manager.

"It worked well." He also helps the kids with instruction, teaches them how to keep score, settles arguments, and monitors the 30 cents-a-coke machine.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle, who serves as second vice president of the center, said the bowling alleys are approximately 20 years old but until last spring, had been closed for some time.

He stressed that last spring's opening was preceded by lots of hard work by the board of directors, the Marine reservists, and notably Jim Drysdale, who retains the title of bowling director at the center.

Drysdale and others worked hard to install electric pin setters, refurbish the allies, install a new lowered ceiling, carpeting and air conditioning.

Thanks to donations of money and labor, and shoe donations from the Satuit Bowlaway, the costs were kept to $6,000 — still a large amount for the then struggling center.

Open bowling is scheduled from Monday through Friday from 3-5 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays from 3-5 p.m. and 7-10 p.m. The open bowling hours could change should more leagues sign up, so check the schedule before whipping down on your bicycle.

Around Town

☐Last week five Cohasset women opened the doors for business at Sea Heather Antiques on Route 3A. Robbie Broefle, Millie Mitman, Donna O'Connor, Jean Replogle, and Barbara Weisenfluh have been pairing off each day (except Monday) at their new shop and selling their eclectic storeful of antique furniture, accessories, and collectables. When stock gets low, they lug over more new-old pieces from their stores hidden away in barns and garages.

How is it working out in a new business with friends? They say they're having a ball and learning from each other. They will remain open until Dec. 15 when the shop reverts back to H & R Block until spring. Then they'll reopen with replenished stock from more travel and workshops.

☐Two delighted grandparents were discovered boasting at Town Hall this week: Frances Byrnes, an efficient Town Hall Clerk, is the happy first-time grandparent of 7 lb., 9 oz. Meghan Vicki Byrnes born to Ms. Byrnes' son Greg and his wife Stephanie of Sutton. Greg is the news manager for the Worcester Gazette and Telegram.

☐Town Treasurer-Collector Gordon Flint and his wife report their third grandchild Sara Skehan Flint was born in Portland, Maine Sept. 11. Miss Flint weighed in at 7.6 lbs. Her parents are Gordon A. and Patricia Flint who we imagine are delighted also.

10 WAYS TO FIGHT THE WINTER BILLS

Prepare Now For The Winter Season ● Take Steps To Keep Heating Costs Down

Professional Planting Protects Your Home and Protection of Your Evergreens
Ocean Bay Nurseries
Rte. 3A, Cohasset
1) Application of anti-dessicant material — controls loss of water through leaves — apply late fall
2) Protect against snow, ice damage — wrap evergreens with cord; wrap in burlap.

2 Attic Insulation — Roofing — Gutters — R. Brynes Home Construction, Inc.
The middle of winter is not the best time to work on your home. Look around your home now and assess the work to be done. Proper maintenance and repair work will prevent leaks and result in less damage to the area of your home.
Insulate your attic — one of the BEST steps you can NOW take against loss of heat.
383-6790

3 Wood & Coal Burning Stoves —
Mr. Beam, Rte. 3A, Cohasset, 383-6060
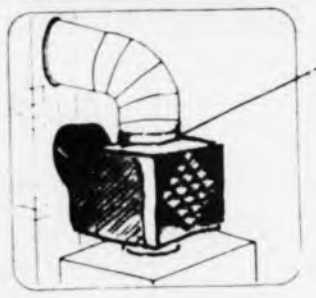
Try an excellent, safe alternative method of heating your entire home this winter. See the fine selection of wood and coal burning stoves at Mr. Beam.



4 Insulating windows & doors —
Edward Goff Co., Ripley Rd.
383-0223 — 545-6311
Thermostat at 80°?
Room temperature at 60°?
You need thermal Barrier aluminum replace-ment windows and doors. Drafty, rotted wood windows are expensive to maintain and eat up fuel. The new twin window is draft free — easy to operate — tilt sash, no binding or sticking.
Quality Crafted CAREFREE Products

Home Improvement Loan —
Scituate Federal Savings & Loan Association
Front St., Scituate
Protect your investment — Investment in a home is the average family's largest asset — well worth protecting! Usually home repairs and improvements you put off cost more later on (and the money you put into well-planned improvements now will save money in the end). So, if you're looking to insulate, install storm doors and windows or any number of energy savings improvements, come and see us first. BRAINTEASERS . . . . . Round 2

It is time once again to stretch your mind as we present round two of the Mariner Brainteaser contest.

Your task is to answer the following 10 questions, plus the tie-breaking bonus, and have your answers postmarked by no later than next Tuesday. Send them to: Brainteasers, Mariner Newspapers, Box 682, Marshfield, Mass. 02050.

With that, we shall proceed.

TEASERS, PART II

1. — Although not a relative or even a friend at the time, this man was closest to Carl Yastrzemski when Carl got his very first hit in the major leagues. This same man was among the first to congratulate Carl when he got his celebrated 3,000th hit. Who was he?

2. — "If you give me a dollar,"
Said Ike to Mike,
"It will readily follow
That we both have alike."

Replied Mike with some choler
"I'll not be troubled
But you give me a dollar
And I'll have you doubled."

How many dollars did each have?

3. — a. Which state has the word Sunshine on its state flag? b. Which state has the word Industry on its state flag?

4. — When his jailers opened the creaky cell door and handed the corked bottle of wine to the Count of Crocked Misto, they laughed because they knew he had no corkscrew nor sharp instrument of any kind. They also knew the fastidious count would never break the bottle. Seconds later as they turned to go, they heard a chuckle. Peering into the cell, they saw the count calmly drinking the wine. How did he do it?

5. — Name four five-letter words (not proper nouns) that begin with the letter "i" and end with the letter "d".

6. — Two shepherds, Beni and Belzi, had for dinner five dishes of which Beni furnished three and Belzi two. A traveller, invited to eat with them, shared their meal. Upon finishing, he handed them five dollars, saying, "We have shared equally in the meal; we should share equally in providing it. Divide the money between you." The problem: how should the two shepherds thus divide the money?

7. — How is it possible to throw a ball so that it will completely change its direction of travel and return to you without bouncing against or colliding with any solid object?

8. — Who said, "Just live your life so you wouldn't be afraid to sell your talking parrot to the town gossip."

9. — Hungry? Come along to Wong Lee's and buy those exotic lichee nuts, which he sells by the ounce. Marvel too at the ingenuity he displays in weighing any number of ounces from one to 364 by the use of a simple set of balance scales, with no more than six weights. And while you're picking the shells out of your teeth, pause for a few minutes to tell us how many ounces each of those six weights represents.

10. — Can you name a common noun that has the vowels "oei" together in that order? Go ahead and do it.

Bonus question: Who was named King when quite young and later was destined to become an American President?

Remember, insure that your answers (typed or printed clearly) are postmarked on or before next Tuesday. Remember too, that we are giving a $100 prize to the Brainteaser winner. Second prize is $30 and third is $20. Two-year subscriptions go to the fourth and fifth place winners and one-year subscriptions go to those who finish in the six through 10 spots.

ANSWERS

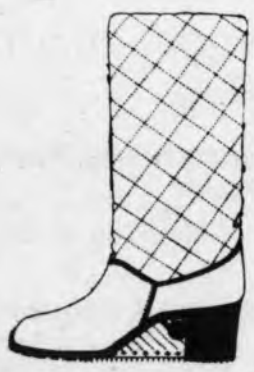
Here are the answers to last week's questions:

1. — Three choices here, including: 60 pennies, 39 dimes and one Susan B. Anthony dollar; six dimes, 90 pennies and four Susan B. Anthony Dollars, or 50 dimes and 50 pennies.
2. — Long life or old age.
3. — California (golden state); Nevada (silver state); Arizona (copper state).
4. — 24 seconds.
5. — President Richard Nixon.
6. — We'll accept added or daddy.
7. — A cat's jaw moves up and down, never sideways; a dog's jaw can move in either direction.
8. — 14th day.
9. — It won't run at all without winding.
10. — "To talk of many things."

Bonus: Gutemala (quetzal).

Second Week on Scale Trail

By Polly Sarcia



(In case you missed last week's introduction, this is the second in a four part series following the progress of the author as she undergoes the first four weeks of an intensive weight loss program at Bodyworks in Scituate. Stay tuned for part four, in which Polly Sarcia will reveal her true identity.)

SEVEN AND A HALF POUNDS IN SEVEN DAYS!!! Now, that may not sound like much to you, but it's sheer poetry to me. Once upon a time, I lost eight pounds in one week, but that was on a liquid fasting diet; the minute I started eating again, it all came back. These seven are gone for good (good riddance!) I'd like to be able to tell you that it was a snap; that my stomach does not rumble; that I do not dream of pizza and hot dogs and beer. But that's simply not true — yet. Everywhere I turn, I am reminded of the things I cannot have; the television tortures me daily with visions of big macs, smiling cokes and friendly mountains; I have passed up on the movies tonight, not ready to face the popcorn machine; the bowl of goldfish on the table in the lounge at P.J.'s have driven me to smoking a pack of cigarettes in two hours (well, you can't expect

Colorama Season

By Joan Pinkham

The maples reddden. The blue asters and ruby sumac contrast with russet grasses along the roadside. So September is with us, bringing autumn and the joys of changing foliage. Not waiting around for our maples to turn a shimmering gold are our Monarch butterflies which migrate much as the birds do, forming companies and traveling south. Ships have spotted bands of moths far out to sea, some seen a thousand miles from the nearest land. Soon we'll be hearing the honking of Canadian geese who move south with the 35 degree temperature. Then we'll know autumn is here.

The Fall season is ushered in at 10:17 a.m. on the 23rd, leaving in its wake a gardening season that was something of a challenge. Just fending off the mosquitoes was wearying. Never have so many bitten so much. Blame them on August's humidity, for dampness breeds a mighty band of the pests. Raccons were canny, as always, having an exquisite sense of timing, arriving during the night, just when the corn is ripe for picking. Barbara and Dick Pearson never got to their magnificent crop in time, arriving one morning to find corn stalks on the ground and each ear nibbled on. Nightly applications of red pepper to discourage the "suburban rats" and mineral oil to save the ears from borers, did little to save the favorite "Silver Queen" corn for the Dunnes.

They call themselves "DIRT dirt gardeners", not "hatted gardeners" and so the North River Gardeners, a small group of only 24, could be seen on the hottest of days tending the perennial garden at the Kent House in Norwell. The antique house and grounds has been the project for many a year and delights all who see it. Just for fun, they enjoyed a trip to Cranberry World in Plymouth yesterday and their monthly programs have included a visit to Herbert Conover's magnificent acre on Common St. Ruth Andrews of Main St. devoted one program to showing slides of a recent tour of English gardens.

The South Shore Bird Club chose a chilly, windy Sunday for their walk through the Glades and along the Driftway and Third Cliff, but several unusual birds were spotted, so it was all worthwhile. Jerry Flaherty led the tour in search of shorebirds and they saw warblers passing through, a buff-breasted sandpiper on Third Cliff and through their scopes, a yellow-crowned night heron on Trouant's Island. A Baird's sandpiper was seen on the Driftway and a northern water thrush. Many knots, blue-bellied plovers, sanderlings and a water pipit were seen and there are still a few egrets on the marshes.

Musings

By John Cutler

☐Andrew Carnegie, asked which was more important — labor, capital, or brains, said, "Which is the most important leg of a 3-legged stool."

☐If you are taking her seriously, son, remember what Nietzche said: "Never marry a woman unless you will be able to stand her conversation 30 years later."

☐G.K. Chesterton loathed exercise: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills but I will not lift up my carcass thither."

☐When L.B. Johnson was in the Senate an aide said, "You know, sometimes I wish Johnson was the Pope instead of the Majority leader." Asked why, he said, "Because then we'd only have to kiss his ring."

☐As Joseph Choate said, Pilgrim Mothers not only had to bear the hardships Pilgrim Fathers suffered, but the Pilgrim Fathers as well.

☐A cynic is not only a person who knows the price of everthing and the value of nothing. He also, said H.L. Mencken, a man who, when he smells flowers, looks around for a coffin."

☐Advice to Buckminster Fuller as a young man: "I am sorry to have to tell you that about a hundred and fifty years ago we had scientific proof that there is not enough to go around — and so it must be you or the other fellow and it must be your family's or the other fellow's. Really, its very tough but Malthus and Darwin gave very clear proof of these facts. So I suggest that you learn how to acquire yours quickly and incisively and then get around to applying the Golden Rule as far as is expedient."

☐"Nature has given women so much power," said Dr. Johnson, "the law has very wisely given them little."

☐It was fontenelle who said: "If I had my hand full of truth I should think more than once before opening it."

☐Dorothy Parker: "The rain it raineth down alike, upon the just and the unjust, feller, but mostly on the just because, the unjust's got the just's umbrella.

☐Gin is a slow poison? "That's all right," Robert Benchley said. "I'm in no hurry."

☐Good chefs don't have to read cookbooks.

☐I've never met a Bulgarian I don't like. In fact, I've never met a Bulgarian.

Studds Pushes New Fishery Bill

U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds will introduce in the House of Representatives this week, the National Fishery Development Act. This bill, filed earlier this year by Sen. Edward Kennedy in the Senate, is intended to establish a comprehensive program to promote the development of our domestic fishing industry.

Essentially, the bill more clearly defines the allowable uses of the so-called "Kennedy-Saltonstall" fund which was established in 1954 to help stimulate domestic fisheries.

"Congressional action in this area is sorely needed to prevent the continued use of this money for personnel salaries in the National Marine Fisheries Service, where they have, in effect, become part of the agency's base budget. I do not believe that this use of the funding was ever intended, nor do I believe that a fishery development account should be drained to support another government bureaucracy," said Studds.

The provisions in the bill will guarantee that at least 50 percent of the Kennedy-Saltonstall fund will be used to finance small individual fishery development projects. The bill also provides for strict Congressional oversight of its uses. Another stipulation in the legislation directs the Secretary of Commerce to appoint at least six regional fisheries attaches to serve abroad to help develop export markets for our fisheries products.

"Because the Administration has indicated it would like to phase out the Kennedy-Saltonstall fund, I believe it is essential that the Congress move quickly on this measure. Passage of the National Fishery Development Act will guarantee the availability of this funding, which is so vitally important to the growth of our fishing industry," Studds said.

Dining Showcase

Featuring this week in Scituate Harbor

When the original Satuit Restaurant (circa 1930) suffered smoke damage in April, 1976, owner Red Richards set out to rebuild a larger restaurant to accomodate the growing clientele. The new building houses a spacious dining room and bar on the first level and a beautiful lounge with a harbor view on the second, plus function facilities. The specialties of the house, prepared by veteran chef Mildred Quinn, are in the seafood line, with an excellent selection of other traditional New England fare. Soups and sandwiches are available in the Top O'The Harbor Lounge, which provides entertainment several nights a week. A mini menu for the smaller appetite, at a smaller price, is available as well. Hostess Rosemary O'Neil and her competent staff look forward to serving you at The Satuit Restaurant. Closed Tuesdays.

The only place for that special function to suit any pocket or palate.

Ever wish you were a fly on the wall and could zip next door to see what's on the menu that night? Eating is something we all have in common, but it isn't easy to dream up new and different meals seven nights a week, so it's always fun to know what foods others enjoy. That's why we asked a few prominent residents to share a recipe or two and, as always, are just waiting to hear from you, too.

Paul Miles is chairman of the Norwell Board of Selectmen, so busy that each year his vegetable garden grows a little smaller. Mrs. Miles is a firm believer in good, nourishing foods for her husband and their daughters, Susan, 10 and Paula, 7. The entire family is fond of salads and for romaine lettuce from the garden, Mrs. Miles has concocted this creamy Caesar salad dressing.

1/2 c. olive oil
2 T. wine vinegar
1 T. lemon juice
1 egg
1/4 tsp. dry mustard
1 garlic clove, minced
1/2 tsp. salt, generous grating black pepper
Few drops Worcestershire sauce
3 T grated Parmesan cheese

Place in blender until creamy. Store in good Seasons bottle. May be garnished with croutons, or bacon bits.

Steak, lobsters and chocolate cake. Breathes there a man who wouldn't die happy devouring them? Cohasset Supt. of Schools John Maloney counts these among his favorites, knowing all too well that anything good is usually fattening. He's caught in a bind, though, for his wife loves to cook, and their school-age son likes to eat, so small servings of her favorite desserts and a boycott on snacking, keep the calorie count down. How anyone could refuse seconds of his wife's cheesecake is hard to believe. Fresh fruits may be subsituted in this

3 pkg. lady fingers
1 pt. all-purpose cream
1 8 oz. and 1 3 oz cream cheese
1 1/2 tsp. vanilla
3/4 c. suger
1 c. fruit pie filling, or fresh fruit.

Line split lady fingers around side and bottom of a spring-form pan. Whip cream and in a separate bowl, mix softened cream cheese, vanilla and sugar. Blend two mixes together and pour half into lined pan. Place another row of lady fingers in pan, addi g remaining mix, alternating rows until mixture is used up, topping with fruit. Refrigerate overnight for best results.

Busy, busy lady that she is, Selectman Evelyn Ferreira of Scituate indulges her husband with good, wholesome food, for he firmly believes "you are what you eat." Oven meals are easiest she finds, for her days are filled with politicking. "Every place I go," says she, "everybody's talking politics." Having lived in town since her birth, she is known to all and recalls the days when her town had only two elementary schools and the beaches were patrolled during WWII. Here is one of their favorite oven dinners, called simply:

CHICKEN DRUMSTICKS
6 chicken drumsticks or legs
Cut up 2 onions and one pepper
6 carrots, cut lengthwise
3 potatoes, peeled and halved

Cover chicken and vegetables with a mixture of ketchup and water, after salt and peppering chicken. Bake in 350 degree oven uncovered, for one to one and a half hours.

Suddenly It's Time For Lawrence Welk

By Lois Martin

Last Saturday night something alarming happened: I watched Lawrence Welk and liked it.

Most of you understand what that means. Nothing against Lawrence or his beautiful bevy of songsters, but you know darn well he's relegated in popularity for people over 60. I'm not, in spite of rumors to the contrary based on my personal appearance.

Technically I'm nouveau middle-aged. That means a lot. For one thing, I had no business slouching comfortably in the den chair on a Saturday night. Clearly I should have been dressing in my disco outfit, priming for a gala 'in-town' or at least I should have borrowed the new Bazaar from the dentist's office and read the article, "How to feel rich and racy."

PATCHES

But I wasn't, you see, and that immediately makes me wonder about the waning vivacity that left me vulnerable to Lawrence. Suddenly after that big tennis match, wherein two of the strongest egos in America took turns hitting a ball at the U.S. Open., the merry melody of Lawrence began.

Now in the past I've seen bits of pieces of his performances, avoiding too much because it's like eating too much chocolate. But in the following hour I was amazed at the wholesome show before me. There was Norma Zimmer, her ever-blonde hair just so, and her voice still mellow. Not only did she sing with that eternal tenor, she gave her personal endorsement to Geritol.

At that I started fidgeting in my chair. But then on came Bobby and Cissy, tap dancing their hearts out. Now I remember Bobby from the time he was a Mouskateer. In my mind he still is. I believe he and I are about the same age but he's much lighter on his feet.

And for several years apparently, Lawrence has hired this gorgeous baritone person, who sounds something like Pat Boone but looks like a statue of a Greek God. His name's Tom Netherton or something like that, and gleams through his rich ballad renditions. His hair seems more permanently affixed than even Norma's.

Off and on of course the commercials catered definitively to people who no longer attend PTA meetings. I got tips on getting rid of arthritis, the inside adhesive story on denture cream and sound reasons for taking Serutan.

That night was called the Escondito Special. From what I could gather, the show was filmed at a retirement home. Joe Feeney of Irish fame was dressed up in a Mexican costume singing "Granada." And the old gang was intact, strong instrumentalists, capable bandmeisters; the works.

Personally I'd feel better if Lawrence had one or two plain of face, casually dressed stars. The girls are thoroughly bedecked in chiffon and long tresses. I suppose for older people they reflect the wholesome, clean way of life they remember, like a scrapbook or something.

But for the woman who's still nagging at teenagers to take out the garbage, all those unswervingly fresh beauties are intimidating.

The audience, at least the people on camera, was a spirited attractive gathering of adults, some of whom had brought their grandchildren along. It seemed the high point of the evening was to garner a turn on the dance floor with Lawrence. He handed over the baton to that fellow with the beard and then was off, swirling the ladies about until another woman cut in on the pair.

That's when I started to take heart. If, at that point, I'd had envy in my soul for the women lucky enough to dance with Lawrence, I'd have started asking for the senior citizen discount at the drug store. But I didn't have any desire to be among the fortunate, sashayed by the millionaire maestro of early Saturday evenings.

Of course it would be a privilege. But if I get a chance to fill out my dance card with celebrities, there are a few others I'd list, closer to town than Escondito.

Still the hour's entertainment went by quickly. I thoroughly enjoyed the comfortable music, the scenery, the costumes. Lawrence'll give you his best, a special kind of hour. He puts his best foot forward in a production that dresses up even the most ordinary songs, with gentle breezes that cause Norma's gown to waft her shoulders.

But this Saturday I plan to live it up, just to protect my middle-age image. We're supposed to be getting older better. Any my idea of a real swinger is someone who can stay up late and tease to go for coffee and doughnuts at an all night spot. I shall allow myself an occasional peek at Lawrence, Cissy, Bobby and that singing statue. But until they switch it to 4:30 p.m. Thursdays I can't make a commitment . . . except to Serutan, Geritol and too much chocolate.

Energy Data Bank Planned

The National Energy Extension Service (EES) today announced that it will form a Federal/State Partnership to give personalized information and technical assistance on energy conservation through state-wide grants.

New England's share of the 29 million DOE program is $2,253,300.

Homeowners, tenants, farmers, and small businesses are the beneficiaries of a new energy program providing services such as energy audits, personalized counseling for energy savings, conservation workshops, and energy hotlines.

me to give up everything at once). On the second day of the program, I cheated, with half a glass of Tab (too much salt and caffeine) and guiltily sought absolution from Carol the next day.

And thank goodness for Carol . . . every day, before I submit my (happily dwindling) rolls of fat to the stretches and groans of my exercise program, we sit in her office boosting my ego. I am the home team, and she is the cheerleader. We plan the next day's meals and talk of the things I am missing, the way I am feeling. It is strange to realize how grateful I can feel for the addition of a piece of melba toast or an apple to my spartan menu. But is it really that spartan?

How delightful it is to really taste the fresh crispness of a salad unsullied by heavy, fat laden dressings; to savor the sweetness of lemon drizzled schrod uncluttered by butter. What a wonderful feeling to rise from the dinner table, comfortable but not stuffed, able to spend the evening somewhere other than beached on the sofa. The faint pangs of hunger (growing fainter each day) remind me that I am alive, and seem to spur me on with renewed energy. I am learning to really see food as fuel, as a reward or a panacea. Bags of potato chips (no, I cannot eat just one) and boxes of oreos (what good are they after you eat out the middle?) might just as well be poison.

Seven and a half pounds have not made that much of a dent in this bulky body, yet I can feel it. I am walking a little faster, moving a bit more gracefully as the pounds disappear and the regular exercises tone my abused muscles.

A friend of mine once wrote a very humorous column asking where all the fat went that people kept telling her they were losing. She feared that somewhere in the night, just around the next corner, a huge glob of disowned blubber waited to plunge at the first unsuspecting victim to cross its path. Well, Mary, I'll tell you where it goes by simply saying this: I have spent enough time in the 'sal de bain' this past week to read "War and Peace" and the Gulag Archipelago, plus the whole bicentennial series!

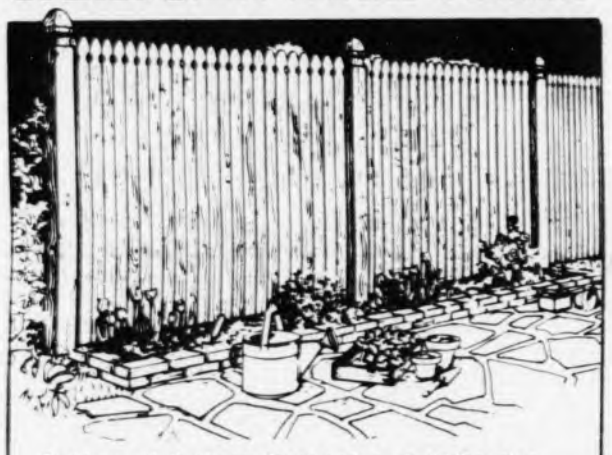
The delusions of martyrdom are wearing off, being replaced by a sense of well being and accomplishment. I am looking forward to my mother-in-law's reaction to the svelte new me at Christmastime. I am looking forward to burning my baggy tent jumpers and parading down Front Street in Vanderbilt jeans with my horizontally striped jersey tucked in. But for right now, I am mostly looking forward to next week, when I'm sure I will be able to report to you that there is even less of me sitting at this typewriter, with my jeans zipped up.

Red Cross Issues Urgent Appeal For Blood Donors

David Westbrook, Eastern Mass. Administrator for the American Red Cross Blood Service, has said a dramatic increase in scheduled surgery cases in Massachusetts hospitals, combined with a slow week of blood donations dropped the regional blood supply to dangerous levels.

Westbrook appealed to all past blood donors and those who may never have donated to call their local Red Cross Chapter and help replenish a deficite of some 1,000 pints of blood needed before Sept. 21. The particular needs are concentrated on the negative blood types A-, B-, and O-.

Donors must be between 17 and 65 years of age, weigh over 110 pounds and never have had hepatitis.



Abandoned Property List Due

In a few snort weeks the State Treasurer's office will be releasing the names of Massachusetts residents who are owners of abandoned property.

Abandoned property refers to property (most usually in the form of bank accounts) that has been unclaimed or lying dormant for at least ten years. Under new legislation Treasurer Crane assumes the responsibility for locating the rightful owners and returning the property to them. Our efforts in this area last year resulted in the return of 1.4 million dollars to 20,000 residents of Massachusetts.

This year Treasurer Crane will be releasing the names of only those individuals whose abandoned property is worth over $25.

KEEP WARM cheap WITH QUART HEAT.

Quartz heat is revolutionary . . . in fact, it's downright mysterious . . . Other heat sources warm the air and therefore you get warm . . . not so with quartz heat! The people and furnishings of the room are warmed without the necessity (and expense) of heating the air.

Special settings and controls turn the unit on and off in such a way that at just the low setting comfort is achieved.

When the draw on the power source (electric) is computed often the result is heat for just a few pennies per hour.

We will be happy to explain more. Call us at 843-1133 or better yet, drop in and we will give you a demonstration.

And, you'll be pleasantly surpised at the low, low cost.

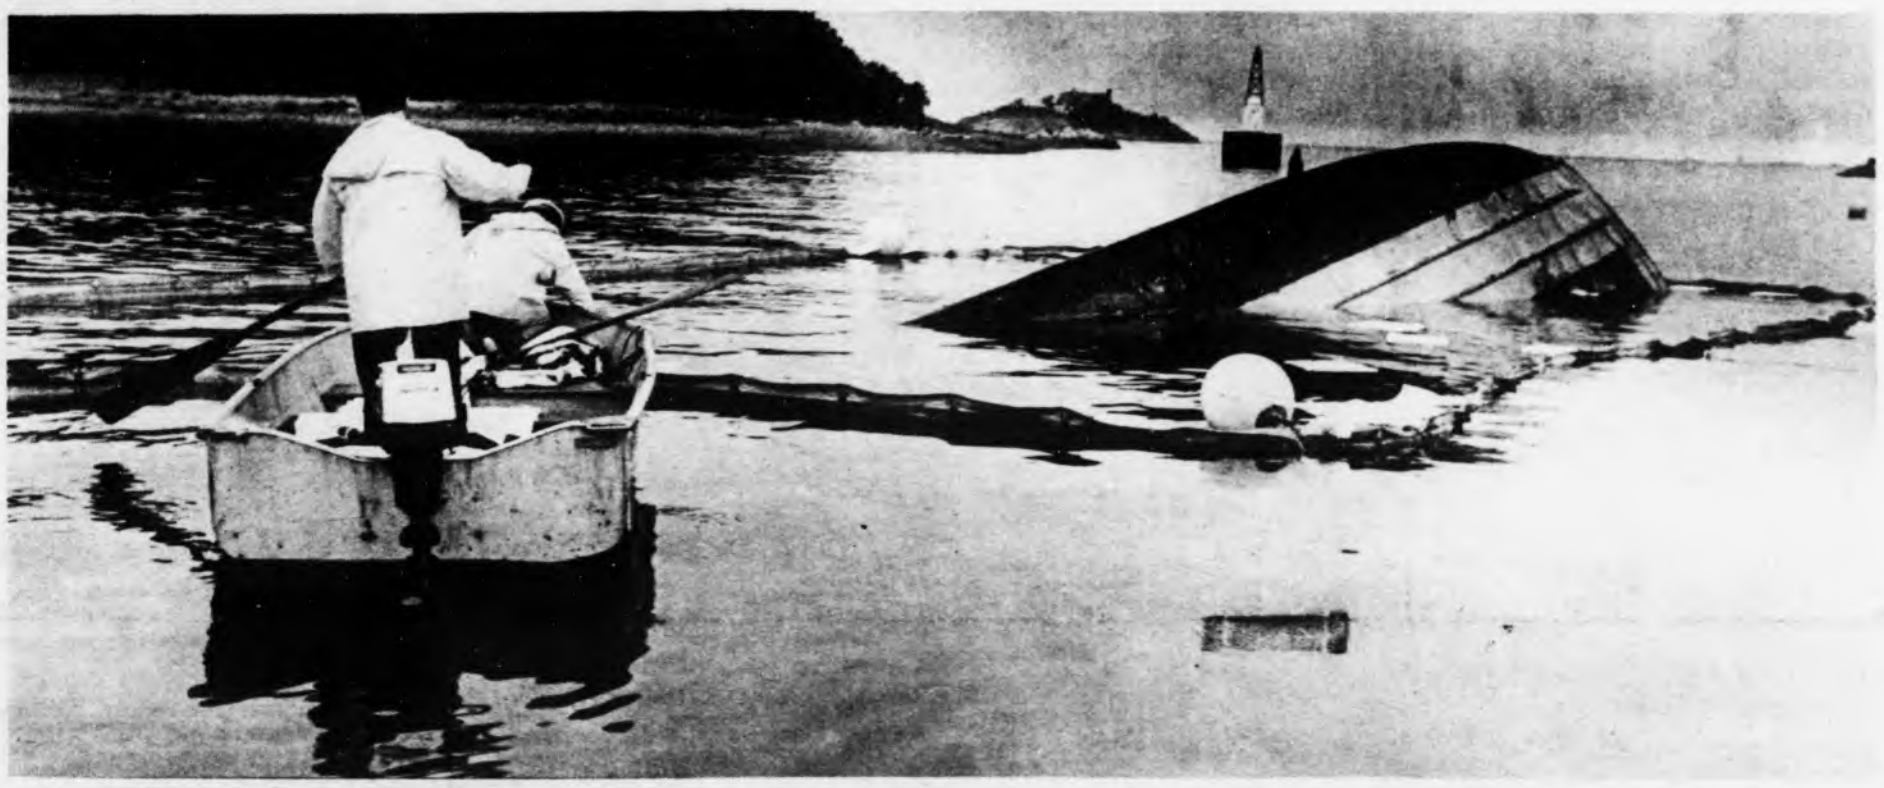
Three Rescued From Sinking Barge

As of press time Tuesday an East Boston Lighter was still on its way to clear the harbor of a 1944 surplus LCM and the load it was carrying, a 10-ton truck with 15-18 tons of stone.

The tenants of the deep have been waiting in the harbor since they capsized Wednesday, Sept. 19. The area is marked off by orange balls, and a strobe light on the hull of the barge which is only partially submerged in the harbor. The sinking occured about 150 feet from the land near the Yacht Club.

Harbormaster Harry Ritter said the Coast Guard was notified and an oil boom was contained around the barge which has been spilling only "minimal" oil. An environmental survey of the area will be made by state and federal agencies.



The barge had been transferring stone from the Parker Avenue ramp of the harbor to the Basing Beach area to be used in the building of a jetty. Owner of the barge is the Frank Ganter Co. of Boston.

The truck is owned by the Lawrence Lynch Corp. of Falmouth.

Three men (none Cohasset residents) were on the barge when it went down, but none were seriously injured. They were pulled to safety by Robert Protulis of Cohasset who was accompanying the group in a small motorboat.

Cliff Dickson, Yacht Club steward said it was his understanding that the steel bottomed barge landed on a small rock while loading its tonnage, which caused a small leak.

Ritter added that the two 2.5 inch pumps couldn't keep up with the leak, and that the 10-ton truck with its 15-ton load of stone was high in the air. Selectman Arthur Clark saw the boat listing before it capsized.

OPERATION CLEANUP finds workmen cleaning up oil spillage from barge which sank in Harbor last week.

Solution To Jacome Septic Problem Sought

Five years ago the town closed off two ground water drains in the vicinity of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jacome's property located at 42 Norfolk Road.

Since that time the Jacomes say their sewage system has not operated properly. Kevin O'Brien, inspector for the board of health, said Monday that the entire hillside in the area has "a terrible problem. There are a lot of complaints from a number of abutters in the area with the same problem."

Edward Young, acting as the Jacome's engineer, said it was possible the Jacomes were getting everybody else's ground water since the town closed off two drains in the area.

He advised that two trenches with a pipe in the center might be able to relieve the situation — "At least the price can be managed," but said he could not guarantee that any measure would provide relief."

School Superintendent Voted A 9 Per Cent Increase

During a four and a half hour session Monday night the school committee voted to give School Supt. John Maloney a one-year extension of his contract and an almost $3,000 raise over last year (from $34,438 to $37,320).

The committee also voted to close all the schools Monday in honor of Pope John Paul, II's visit to Boston and in anticipation of traffic problems. Peggy Sullivan, recording secretary of the school committee, tendered her resignation, saying she no longer wished to work for the committee.

Maloney begins his fifth year in the Cohasset system with this renewal. Although he was given several options, School Committee Chairman Jack Langmaid said Maloney opted for the higher salary figure which went with the one-year extension.

Maloney's increase will be retroactive to June 30, 1979. On a 4-2 vote he also received an additional $300 for automobile allowance, bringing the total allowance to $1,200.

A brief executive session held before the vote on the superintendent's contract was challenged by a member of the press.

In other school committee action, it was noted that 12 students were National Merit Scholarship award winners, having received letters of commendation.

Three additional students, Ed Baer, David Zoebel and Chris Williams were named as semi-finalists in the competition.

The committee was informed that John Levangie, basketball coach at the high school, resigned to accept a coaching position at Boston College High School. The Health Board Questions DEQE Approval

According to developer Wayne Sawchuk, the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has approved the proposed development of land on 79 Atlantic Avenue owned by Robert Crawford of 79 Atlantic Trust.

However, Dr. Roger Pompeo, chairman of the board of health, said "Whatever the DEQE does we can take under advisement. It's become obvious to us that the DEQE is not always right. I really have my doubts about how they operate," he said, referring to "a little technicality on 24 Surry Drive" (an issue before the courts, in which a homeowners septic system failed after DEQE approval).

Pompeo stated flatly that "The DEQE should not have approved that plan," in several respects. But Sawchuk countered that the DEQE had been present and had observed the perc.

Two abutters to the 79 Atlantic Avenue property attended the session Monday, Ms. Sally Tague and Dr. Robert Sceery, who said he was concerned with the proposal's plans for 26 bedrooms, noting that the Sandy Cove area is "where we all swim."

Sawchuk said all title five regulations had been satisfied, but Pompeo said he felt the board of health should control the number of bedrooms to be built.

"We consider dens, librarys, playrooms as potential bedrooms. We need a plan to guarantee only x number of bedrooms."

Sawchuk said plans call for six homes to be built on six long pork chop lots which run to the ocean beach. Residents would be required to sign covenants agreeing they would not fish or lobster off the beach and would share a

Don't Take Snakes On Beth Goff's Bus!

How many times do you hear of a senior class dedicating its year book to a bus driver?

No, the 1979 graduating class was not particularly unhappy with its teachers last year. They were just wildly in love with Beth Goff, the originator of a life-style.

Beth doesn't appear old enough to be a grandmother, unless you believe that she was a precocious nine-year old. She and her husband Ed are a Brady Bunch original. About the same time the Brady's got their TV act going Beth and Ed merged families . . . her three and his three and what appears to be six stereos.

Although the thought of all that might turn yours and our minds to mush, Beth seems to thrive on the now teenagers and grandchildren, and your children and my children.

Being laid out in spendor might have suited Cleopatra, but Beth's program — at least it always seems so — calls her to buzz off in quite diverse directions.

In 1976 she was one of a group who originated the Cohasset Boosters Club. While she wasn't the first president technically, she was the first elected president of that group.

And for the past four years she has worked diligently along with "The Dirty Dozen" to raise money for Spirit trophys which are given to the most enthusiastic player on each varsity team (20-25 students) as selected by their peers.

NOTE

Just a note, here. The Boosters are presently looking for new blood and new ideas for fund-raising. "We can't push raffles anymore, Cohasset is raffled out." (See "It's Happening" for their meeting date).

Beth started driving a school bus six years ago after complaining to the school administration about the pay cuts given to the activity aides.

"They said if you don't like it drive a school bus. So I did — and I love it! I could never work in an office."

This is her ninth year as an activity aide at Osgood School. "I'm the one who slides down the slide at 8:30 a.m. to get the morning dew and sand off," she said, patting her backside.

"And every year at the beginning of the year I drop on my knees and beg Harold Litchfield for a bag of sand. He always delivers."

When the community center or any other group puts on a musical Beth almost automatically gets an important, singing part. She's had leading roles in "Pajama Game," "Wagons Ho", both community center productions. But — I can't read music. I just fake it."

With prodding she'll enter any local Gong Show and she oftentimes wins. We caught her act in Hull at Casey's two years ago where she took $100 in the semi-finals singing "Wagons Ho."

FAMILY MONSTERS

"We have monsters in the family," she said. "My cousin Jim is Dracula — He lives in Hull. I've been the hatchet man, a gorilla and a guide at the JC's haunted house (on Beechwood Street). Ed's the monster at home."

Although she kills plants, kids thrive under her direction.

"Do you know what's a real horror show? — when you start the kindergarten bus. You see one little head left in the back. So you say 'where do you live?' He answers Cohasset."

"So you ask where in Cohasset. He says 'The white house.' And usually he's always composed, but you're out of your mind.

"We all have a list of where the kindergarten kids get off. So I stop at Hull Street and my list says four should get off. And only one kid gets off. I wait.

"Finally I say who else lives here? It took me four attempts to get all the kids off the bus. They're priceless, nothing phases these kids.

"In all my driving I only had to put one high school kid off the bus. He was a freshman. He finally bought a car.

"They're good on the bus, they really are," she said.

Except for the time the kid brought the snake.

Hey kids!—It's your bus driver!

Frances Byrnes Is A Grandmother Again!

She did it again. This is not a repeat.

Boasting around town hall AGAIN this week was Frances Byrnes, efficient Town Hall Clerk, over the birth of her second ever grandchild, Jennifer Byrnes, who clocked into the world at 12:30 p.m. Monday at 7-11, just as the Mariner was receiving an ad.

Jennifer's mother is the former Pauline (Polly) Malley, who is married to Ms. Byrnes' son Robert.

"Your family is multiplying like rabbits," Selectmen's Secretary Peg Ramsey, always good for a quote, said of the second birth.

Some statistics: each of Fran Byrnes' two sons married a woman with a 12-year old boy, and each of the Byrnes' sons had girl infants 12 years later. Probably a record.

Robert is a builder in town. He constructed the Greenhouse Restaurant and Dr. Pompeo's medical building, and has done work for Target Industries. "I'm putting a plug here to take care of the baby," Fran said.

Polly used to work at the computer room at town hall. Greg Byrnes, brother of Jennifer, is a seventh grade student at the high school. He's delighted too.

Luckily, the shower was held just in time. Connie Callahan held it for the expected baby last Friday night and not a moment too soon.

Mrs. Byrnes' son Greg and daughter-in-law Stephanie of Sutton gave birth to Meghan Vicki Byrnes this month also.

Sailboating Doesn't Just "Seem" To Go On Forever...

By Chet Ellis

Just as the NBA and the NHL seem to go on forever with regular season play extended by quarter, semi and final play-off games, so does sailing continue ad infinitum for those hardy souls who enjoy off season small sail boat racing.

A case in point is the Hingham Harbor racing fleet #103 which schedules weekend class races from mid September to late October and April through June for sunfish, lasers and force fives, all popular South Shore racing boats. Carrying a crew of one, the fourteen footers are fast and manouverable in light winds and downright screamers in moderate to heavy winds.

Participation is growing rapidly in these post and pre-season schedules. For example, in one Cohasset family, the Clintons of Parker Rd. all five family members participate individually and competitively in either sunfish or lasers. As a result of this kind of experience, sixteen year old Hannah Clinton took second this year in the Sunfish Nationals, a very difficult feat considering the intensity of the competition.

For the larger boats, such as the seventeen foot Day Sailers and the nineteen foot Flying Scots, there are many regional regattas held in the fall so the hardy can test their skills against other South Shore fleets. Carrying crews of two or three they are also quite fast in moderate to heavy winds and a lot of fun to race.

Last weekend three Government Island sailing groupies tried their skill in the five race Lake Maussapoug (Sharon) regatta. Pete Chapman, Ray Kasperowicz and yours truly had done well in the regular fifteen race Cohasset summer series coming in second, fourth and first respectively. As soon as we lowered our centerboards however, it became evident that sailing against six or seven boats off Cohasset where the wind is steady and true is different than racing against 25 competitors in a lake where the wind can (and does) vary considerably in intensity. Sudden directional shifts of 180 degrees are common. We finished around the middle of the pack with Chapman doing the best as he finished fourth overall with a record that included a first and two seconds. Wait till next year!

For the hardiest souls, there is the mid-winter racing madness affectionally known as frostbiting. Sailing amongst the ice from November through March and wrapped in parkas and mufflers, two person crews compete both against other boats and the winter elements in fourteen foot interclub sloops.

Frostbiting can be found in Scituate, Duxbury and Marblehead harbors.

Small sailboat racing has become a popular, growing, year round sport in almost any environment. Now, if we could just find some water on the moon...

Peter Barnicle To Write Weekly History Column

Beginning next week Peter Barnicle of Pond Street will write a weekly column of Cohasset years yon.

Barnicle is a veteran newsman and feature writer, having written for The Boston Globe, The Boston Herald American, The Times of London, The Quincy Sun, the old Boston Herald Post, Philadelphia Record, New Bedford Standard Times, Wilmington Maryland News and the old Boston Evening Transcript, Boston Herald Post and Record American.

He began his writing career with the old Boston Evening Transcript in 1940. "It folded in 1941. I went in on a Tuesday and the editor said 'Well, I guess you're the feature writer.' Between Tuesday and Friday of that first week I got a full course in layout and makeup."

Barnicle majored in history and English at Boston University and did his graduate work at Trinity College in Dublin.

For years Barnicle has been researching how Cohasset ended up in Norfolk County. He still hasn't figured it out.

A Cohasset resident of 25 years standing, Barnicle is familiar with the community and its tale-tellers.

We look forward to his weekly byline. We're sure that you will too. Letters to Barnicle should be addressed to him care of this newspaper.

Good reading!

Cohasset Food Co-op Forming Monday

If you want to get in on the ground floor operation of a first-ever (we think) Cohasset food cooperative, then go to the Congregational Church at 7:30 p.m. Monday and get the details.

The Reverends Mitchell and Rachelle Jacover have been investigating the matter and think the time is ripe.

Several food cooperatives in the area have been thriving for some time in Scituate and Weymouth. But the cooperative in Marshfield has a waiting list. It seems everyone's saving energy dollars by cooperative shopping.

"On the West Coast cooperatives are similar to grocery stores — except the participants — through the donation of time, have ownership of the store," Rachelle said.

"In New England cooperatives don't usually have a store front. Normally, garages and churches are used."

The Jacovers have already done some comparison shopping and have discovered that through cooperative shopping, it is possible to save as much as 30-50 per cent on one's food bill.

Members of the cooperative would of course decide what would be purchased. The Jacovers feel the group would stick to basic staples such as grains, raisins, nuts, oils and beans at first.

A "break-down" crew would package the foods obtained into individual orders, which members would then pick up.

Rachelle feels that anyone who could not actively participate in the group could still be a member, if they were willing to be charged a non-active percentage.

Even now the Jacovers are looking into the prospects of hiring a nutritional teacher to lecture on the cooking and preparation of foods. They feel the cooperative can be of both social and educational value.

As the group grows in numbers, Rachelle said it would be possible to purchase meats, fish, breads, even toilet paper and tea.

We asked, "What about oil?"

"Well, an oil cooperative might not be a bad idea," Mitchell laughed.

The Jacovers are members of the Holy Orders of Mans who are attempting to form a Christian Community of the orders in Cohasset. If you can't make Monday's cooperative meeting, you can call Rachelle at 383-6683 for more information regarding future meeting dates.

A Transitory Age

Four Cohasset football players were dropped from the varsity team last week for a minor civil infraction.

No policeman arrested them, no one cited them with breaking a civilian law. Their coach simple threw them off the team for being in the possession of beer before a game. Fair enough.

Cohasset citizens we spoke with found no fault with the coach's action. Their consternation appeared to be over the publication of the players' names in a Quincy daily. Because, they said, these youths are not known to be troublemakers in the community.

Over 150 years ago British common law stated why there should be minors and how they should be treated. People were considered legal infants until they became 21 years of age.

By today's standards a person is a minor until the age of majority which is set by the state. In Massachusetts a person can be arrested for an adult crime at the age of 17, or much younger if the judge so determines.

However, federal law does not permit a person to vote until 18. In this state one has to be 20 in order to buy alcohol but can serve alcohol to customers at 19 and can drive at 16.

At 18 one can get married and see one's school records. At 17 one can join the Armed Forces with parental permission; at 18 one can sign up with no one's permission.

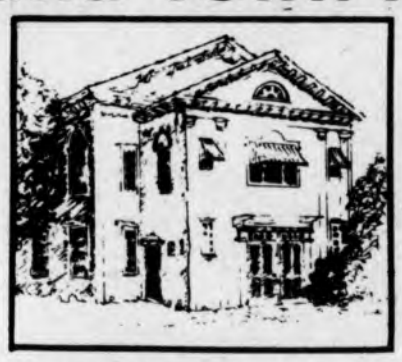
Obviously people between the ages of 17 and 19 are in a transitory state. State and federal government recognize that fact. They are not, during those ages, accorded all the rights of an adult, but they are legally accountable for their actions.

The Mariner feels school years, at least, should be a time during which we permit youths to make mistakes.

Maybe on the pages of the press football players are given star quality, and in their own community perhaps they are idolized, hero-worshiped. But in reality they're kids and they play the game for fun.

When and if any youths become a constant menace to and a source of irritation to society and its citizenry, then we agree that the public should be warned.

Last week we did not feel it necessary to alert the citizenry to the fact that four Cohasset football players were discovered the night before a game . . . on Martha's Vineyard . . . with a couple of cans of beer.



Licenses Awarded To Fire Dept.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, announced recently that the Cohasset Fire Department was one of 11 approved ambulance service licenses awarded by the Massachusetts Public Health Council.

These licenses are issued under the Massachusetts Ambulance Law and are aimed at improving the overall quality of pre-hospital emergency medical care available to people in the Commonwealth.

Rep. Murray explained that the State's Ambulance Regulation Program — to inspect and evaluate ambulance services, equipment, training and personnel — has been underway for the past 36 months. The Massachusetts Ambulance Law allowed a gradual phase-in of the upgraded standards through July 1, 1977.

ENERGY COORDINATOR

Selectmen queried the school department with regard to making Business Manager John Raftery "energy coordinator" for the town. The query was made after selectmen received a letter from the governor's office suggesting that all communities intensify energy planning efforts.

The letter suggested that communities outline an attempt to cut back working hours at the schools and in town departments. For example, if the town should run 10 percent short of heating fuel, all municipal employees might work a four day week.

In addition, it was suggested that one municipal building be designated as a site for relocating persons displaced by lack of heat.

According to selectmen, the town's civil defense unit is working along the same lines.

BREAKWATER EASEMENTS

The state Disaster Recovery Team is still trying to negotiate easements for the Jesuit breakwater construction. Rick Domas of that state agency anticipates a bidding date sometime in the next month, with Feb. 1980 being designated as a target for completion.

BID OPENING

H.M. Horton and Co. of Walpole, the only bidder on the painting of the Bates building, will be invited to discuss the bid with selectmen at a future meeting. Horton's main bid was $2,449 with a total bid of $4,442 for touching-up, prime and a second coat. Selectmen said bid specifications had been sent to all Cohasset painters and were surprised that none had bid on the contract.

FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE

"When they find out how little we make they'll be at our doors with bags of food," Selectmen's Secretary Peggy Ramsey said of the proposed financial disclosure bill for municipal officials and employees. Which reminds us, have you answered last week's questionnaire from the Mariner on the subject?

LAUGELLE IN CHARGE

Selectman Rocco Laugelle has been named honorary chairman of "The Washingtons Belong in Boston" campaign. "You're in charge, Rocky — you're an artist of sorts," Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said. Laugelle has 100 days in which to fundraise for money to keep the Gilbert Stuarts in Boston. He said he may ask that all concerned citizens send him their green George Washingtons.

WARRANT BID

Golden Print of Cohasset, low bidder, was awarded a contract of $218 to print the special town meeting warrant. The next lowest bidder was Village Printers at $260, The Mirror at $310 and Dennison at $315.

BLACKTOPPING PLANS

No action was taken, but Building Inspector James Litchfield informed selectmen that his department wants to seal, sand and blacktop the following roads in town: Deep Run, Schofield Road, Black Rock Road, Stanton Road, Gammons Road, Sheldon Road, Locust Road and Otis Avenue in addition to a private drive where a hole was made by the water department.

JURY DUTY

The following residents were selected for jury duty at Dedham Civil and Criminal Court, Fri., Oct. 19 at 10 a.m.: Robert Kingsland of 300 South Main Street, Katherine Richards of 11 Beach Street and Richard Tibbetts, Jr. of Hobarts Lane.

UNDER ADVISEMENT

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark read a letter from Gilbert Tower who wishes the selectmen to intervene with the Commission of Environmental Management to remove restrictions on salt marshes. Selectmen took the matter under advisement.

MILIKEN FOOTBALL FIELD

Good news for sports enthusiasts is only two years away.

Peter Laugelle, tree and park superintendent, told selectmen last week that only a few finishing touches are needed before specifications for the new Miliken football field can be put out to bid.

The 2.5 acre field will bring the Miliken field complement to a total of 4.5 acres. However, the field will have to be fenced and closed off for a period of two years.

LOW OIL BIDDER

Clene Heat of Quincy was the low bidder at .7790 net cost when selectmen opened heating oil bids last week. The board liked the low price and the firm two-year increment policy, but will check out the reliability of the bidder with Scituate officials before making a final decision on the award. Quin-Oil, Inc. also bid for the contract at .8185 net cost.

DUMP STUDY

At the suggestion of the Board of Health, selectmen voted to seek individuals to serve on a study of the life of the town dump and to offer alternatives to the town. Selectman Henry Ainslie said he didn't think the town stood a chance of getting additional land approval for landfill. Persons interested in joining the committee should contact the selectmen's office. Selectmen are particularly interested in having an engineer serve on the study.

Commentary

Age Of Majority

By John J. Rhodes III
Cohasset Police Sergeant

In Massachusetts, a juvenile is a person between the ages of seven and 17. All persons 17 and older are considered to be and are treated as adults. Persons under age seven are presumed to be below the age of reason, and therefore, incapable of committing a crime.

It would therefore, follow that our judicial system recognizes the fact, derived from English Common Law, that a child age seven or older is aware of what is considered right from wrong.

There is no constitutional right or right under Massachusetts General Law prohibiting the publication of the name and address of a juvenile offender. The release of the names of juvenile offenders to the media has been a matter of policy within the judicial system, police department and the news media.

Cohasset, for instance, in its rules and regulations for the Police Department, under Police and News Media section 10a, maintains that "The identity of any person under 17 years of age taken into custody or accused of crime, shall not be released to the news media without the direct approval of the Chief of Police."

This type of rule would seem inconsistent with many generally important policies as relates to law enforcement and the public.

The public has the right to know the kind of news and information that the police can provide. The news media has the right to disseminate this information. Juvenile crime is a major factor of crime within the community and this is more than just juvenile misbehavior. Too often it is adult crime committed by juveniles.

There are many instances where censorhsip by the police department and media are necessary, i.e. victims of crimes, constitutional rights of those accused, protecting witnesses, etc.

However, it is not justified to arbitrarily supress information which may be of importance to the general public in order that peer groups make a distinction between who is responsible for an act or alleged to have committed an act, eliminating gossip and rumor.

While there may be circumstances involving the arrest of a juvenile offender which need not be publicized, for instance a victimless type crime of alcohol abuse or violation of liquor laws or motor vehicle laws, the constant offender should be made known to the public.

common septic system tie in, a single paved access road and utilities would be underground.

Ms. Tague and Dr. Sceery said they were concerned about flooding in the area should the grade of the land be raised, but Sawchuk said there would be no change of grade. "Everything we have permits for must be certified by engineers.

"The sewer line is lower than the water line — we're planning for public sewer connections, all man holes will be concrete and sealed so at a time when public sewer comes by there will be no disruptions.

Sawchuk said each home would have pumpable 1,000 gallon tanks and would share a syphon chamber measuring 18 by 10 feet which would act as a holding tank, infiltrating the leeching field bed.

Pompeo said the board would request to review all reports from other town agencies before signing any approval.

At its meeting scheduled Oct. 18 the health board will hold a public hearing on the Sawchuk proposal.

Peer pressure by disassociation and publication of names of those responsible for criminal acts should act as a deterrent. Further, it would seem that family membership would take on new responsibilities to the juvenile where he or she would then be responsible for publicly accounting for their actions.

It might also force parents into making sure they know where there child is and what he or she is doing, lest they get into trouble and "publicly disgrace the family name!"

It is not intended that all juvenile offenders be broadcast through the news media. However, all offenders who are criminally charged with a violation of serious crime and those who are constant repeaters of minor violations should be made known to the community.

If the juvenile is able to pick up the rock and throw it through a window and knows the difference between right and wrong, he or she should then expect to publicly account for that action.

Dr. Roger Pompeo, chairman of the board, advised the Jacomes to have their engineer establish a water table and have a perc test done, and then to return to the board to ask for variances on the board of health's Title 5 regulations.

In other business, the board voted to accept a septic system on Lot H on Surrey Drive which is owned by Pompeo. Pompeo abstained from the vote. Engineer Thomas Sharry designed the system, with 800 feet of leeching area (660 ft. is required).

The board of health observed the perc in July 1977, in January 1978 ground water was established at 24 inches, with two inches of fill needed to raise it 4 feet above the water table. Test borings hit refusal between 6-7 feet as a result of hitting ledge. The lot size is 32,250 square feet.

It was also voted to direct the tax collector to collect fees from James Tyeryar after O'Brien and Tyeryar establish a rate of payment for past and future dumping at a commercial demolition dump of 3-A.

Pompeo noted that the board had refused permission for the Natural Surface Co. of Methuan to dump asbestos at the town dump.

Salary Increase

following extra compensation appointments were made: Joan Tribeman, senior class advisor; Edward Sheehan, debating; Dawn Henderson, intramural field hockey; Ronna Bingham and William Kite, co-sponsors of the school newspaper.

Maternity leaves were granted for varying lengths to Therese Lynch, Virginia Petitti and Karen Coyne.

School committeewoman Diana Kornet was voted to be liaison to the citizens' advisory committee on basic skills.

The teacher evaluation instrument was approved as it was presented by the subcommittee last week with minor modifications.

The early release day scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 27 was cancelled and changed to Thursday, Oct. 4. The next regularly scheduled meeting of the committee will be held Tuesday, Oct. 9.

Dillon/Farbush Exhibit

Margaret Dillon and Rosalind Farbush, both of Cohasset, are among 48 local artists whose works are on exhibit through Oct. 31 in the lobby of the John Hancock Tower, Copley Square, Boston, in conjunction with a festival of the arts to be held in Copley Square Sept. 29.

The public may view the exhibition from 9 a.m. to 10:30 p.m., Monday through Saturday and on Sunday from noon to 10:30 p.m. Admission to the exhibit is free.

The exhibition, illustrating a range of fine arts, includes the works of some of the more than 100 oil painters, watercolorists, weavers, print makers, sculptors and photographers who will demonstrate their techniques and talents at the Copley Festival of the Arts on Saturday, September 29, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., with Sunday, September 30, as rain date.

☐About a year and a half ago, Kirby Meacham of 47 Black Rock Road decided there had to be a better way to split logs than with a wedge and sledge. A large tree had fallen down on his property which required many hours of labor to cut and split up. So he applied his engineering ingenuity to the problem and came up with the "woodbutcher" — a simple, safe, easy to use, manual wood splitter, which he and his wife Kay are marketing and mail-ordering out of their home.

The "woodbutcher" works this way: a contained 15 lb. sliding hammer is lifted by means of tubular steel handles and then slammed down into the log, like a pile driver, driving the wedge, which is welded to the bottom of the containment tube, through the wood. It is easy; even this typewriting weakling split a log with the Meachams!

☐Perry Harris of Whitehead Road place 9th in the World One Ton Championship (sailing) series recently completed in Newport, Rhode Island aboard "Special Edition," a Tanton design.

☐When Joanne and John Nawn packed up their belongings last week for the move to Fort Worth, Texas, they enlisted the help of Dan Vigneau of Simms Yacht Yard in Scituate when it came time to "pack" their car and boat. Vigneau hauled the car and boat aboard an 18-wheel flatbed truck with the aid of a boat launcher and claims the 'car launching' was the first ever!

IT'S THE WOOD BUTCHER—A Cohasset invention.

☐Guess who's having a birthday?

One candle on the cake, Oct. 4. We're celebrating the occasion in the Oct. 19 issue — love to hear from you!

IMPORTANT!

☐Have you ever been stymied by five columns of Jones in the phone directory when you're trying to locate one 'Mary Jones'? It seems that enough people have, and although it is not widely known, the Telephone Co. initiated the service of dual listings almost two years ago. If you share a surname with someone, the Telephone Co. will list your name, or initials, along with your husband's, wife's, sibling's, or parent's. Only one surname and two first names per line. To add a name to your listing, simply call the local business office.

☐Mary and Henry Brennock of 136 Doanne St., are class coordinators for Thursday night Square Dancing lessons at Kramer's Hayloft in Weymouth, under caller Bill Bean's direction. Mary is a secretary in the High School Guidance Office and Henry is custodian at the Joseph Osgood School. They dance regularly with their group, the "Lofty Squares."

☐John Buckley, son of Raymond and Patricia Buckley of 247 Forest Ave., recently completed training with the Commander, Submarine Group Five, based in San Diego.

A midshipman with the Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps Unit at Maine Maritime Academy, Castine, Maine, he was exposed to all the systems that make up the Navy's modern and sophisticated undersea warships. His training aboard the submarine will provide him with a better understanding of the Navy's submarine force when he enters active duty as a naval officer.

☐Dracula students and fans will be glad to know that the latest, most up-to-date, annotated and illustrated version of Bram Stoker's original novel of 1897, will be out this month. "The Essential Dracula" will be the third complete work by Radu Florescu (of Cohasset) and Raymond McNally, and brings the authors' search for Dracula's historical Transylvanian model, Vlad Tepes Dracula (Vlad The Impaler), 15th century Wallacia ruler, up to the present.

Florescu, a Professor of Balkan and South Eastern European History at Boston College, and McNally, Professor of Russian History, also at B.C., have collaborated on two other Dracula studies: "In Search of Dracula" (1972) and "Dracula: A Biography of Vlad The Impaler" (1973).

Historic Sports Weekend At Cohasset High

By George Fortin

Time ran out on two Cohasset teams but it still was an historic sports week. The football team played traditional rival, Hull (just incidentally, defending EMass Division champs). And the girls soccer team made its first start ever against Scituate.

Cohasset now has a girls' varsity and jayvee soccer team. Originally there was to be only one team, but the response was so enthusiastic two were needed. Over 40 girls are participating.

In their all-time opener the girls were continually frustrated as they entered the fourth period trailing 4-1. Then they almost pulled it out from a stunned Scituate team when they scored two goals quick with only five minutes remaining.

So fans attending, who were mostly parents and incredulous macho types, were treated to a real nailbiter. Nonchalance and light talk turned to riveted attention and cheering as the Skippers continually pressed Scituate in its defensive end seeking the tying goal. But time ran out and Cohasset lost, 4-3.

Cohasset goals were scored by Erin O'Brien in the second period on a rebound from her own penalty kick. Michele Shea scored on a pass to center from Lorraine Carroll. On the third and final goal, Sandy Dalrymple scored on a feed from Erin O'Brien.

The girls' games are held on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. If you have never seen a game you're in for a real treat.

Duffy Scores

The varsity football team in a game rained out from Saturday to Sunday at Hull waited until the fourth period before Bill Duffy scored Cohasset's only touchdown on a pass from Kevin Dooley.

Cohasset, although definitely considered the underdog against the titlist Pirates, managed to hold them to six points at the half. The final score was 18-6, Hull's favor.

But the Skippers muzzled Hull in the first half and Coach John Leone expressed satisfaction with the performance of his troops in view of the calibre of opposition.

"We played well, especially the defense," said Leone. "I wish we had been able to mount a bit more offense."

After a scoreless first period, Cohasset marched to the Hull 19 but couldn't penetrate further.

But the Skippers also blanked the Pirates and they left at halftime the way they began — scoreless.

In the third period, Hull drove to the Cohasset one and scored. The champs clicked for two more touchdowns in the final period, once on a 25 yard run and again from six yards away.

The Skippers kept battling and in the final minutes took over on the Hull 30 after a punt.

Quarterback Kevin Dooley hit Bob Donahue with a 12 yarder, then connected with end Bill Fuffy with a 13 yard toss good for the t.d.

Register To Swim At MDC Pool

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently registering a recreational swim program designed for the entire family.

The seven-week program will be held at the MDC Pool, Weymouth on Saturdays, beginning Oct. 20, from 12 noon to 1:30 p.m. Bus transportation will be provided and buses will leave the Town Hall parking lot at 11:30 a.m. and return at 2 p.m. each Saturday.

All residents who are able to swim are eligible for this program. The pool will be reserved for Cohasset swimmers. Younger children up to Grade 3 must be accompanied by an older sibling or an adult. The Recreation Department will provide a WSI chaperone/lifeguard.

The program is recreational in nature (no lessons) and registrations will be accepted no later than Friday, Oct. 12. A minimum of 45 individuals will be necessary in order for us to conduct the program.

If interested call the Recreation Office at 383-6791 immediately.

LATE REGISTRATIONS

The registration period for Fall Programs has ended. However, many programs have a few openings left and late registrations will be accepted by calling the Recreation Office immediately.

PASS, PUNT, KICK

On Friday, Sept. 28, (rain day, Saturday, Sept. 29) a pass, punt and kick program will be held at Cohasset Motors on Rt. 3A. Pre-registrations are necessary for the national program and you may register at Cohasset Motors until 4 p.m. Friday, Sept. 28.

Obituaries

Philip Larson

Philip R. Larson, 79, a retired salesman for Westwood Cartage Leasing Co., died Friday, Sept. 21 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, after a long illness.

Born in Dorchester, he had been a resident of Dedham before moving to Cohasset 14 years ago.

He was a graduate of Commercial High School and Bentley School of Accounting, both in Boston.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mabel (Pratt) Larson; a daughter, Elizabeth Larson of Florida; a step son, Thomas Culliney of Scituate; a stepdaughter, Elizabeth Hardy of Burlington; and two sisters, Ruth Larson and Ethel Larson, both of Dorchester.

A private memorial service was held Monday in Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. Burial was private.

Donations in his memory may be made to Beechwood Congregational Church, Beechwood.

Anne Paine

Mrs. Anne (Hamilton) Paine, 70, a resident of Cohasset for many years, died Sept. 16 in Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, after a short illness.

Born in Ann Arbor, Mich., she was formerly a resident of Ithaca, N.Y.

She leaves her husband, Arnold Paine; two sons, Thomas Paine of Maine and Dana Paine of Turner's Falls.

Funeral services were private and visiting hours were omitted. A private burial will be in the family plot in Newburyport.

Memorial donations may be made to the Massachusetts Horticultural Society or the Massachusetts Audubon Society.

Monthly Library Series

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will begin its monthly series of films for elementary school children with a Walt Disney movie called, "The Hound That Thought He Was a Raccoon."

This comical animal adventure will be shown on Tuesday, Oct. 2 at 3:15 p.m. in the Children's Room and will end at about 4;15 p.m. Hereafter, movies will be shown to this age group on the first Tuesday of every month at this same time.

Club Starts 59th Season

The Cohasset Dramatic Club begins its 59 season this Fall with Oscar Wilde's classic comedy "The Importance of Being Ernest," directed by Ms. Valerie Lester of Scituate and produced by John Mallon.

Oscar Wilde has received a revived interest in recent years. He was portrayed on Broadway by Vincent Price in a one man show entitled "Diversions and Delights," based on a series of lectures Wilde gave towards the end of his life. More recently, audiences were charmed by Peter Egan's depiction of him in the Masterpiece theatre production of "Lillie" on P.B.S. last Spring.

"The Importance of Being Earnest" is Wilde's most popular and well loved play. The Cohasset cast, carefully selected from a large number of talented entrants, features: Walter Van Diik as Algernon Moncreiff; Felix Van Dijk as Jack Worthing; Ms. Beth Donahue as Cecily Cardew; Sarah de Lima as the Hon. Gwendolyn Fairfax; Ms. Judith Chute as the imposing Lady Bracknell; and two longtime Cohasset members Helen Ketcham and Bob Schultz as Miss Prism and the Rev. Canon Chasuble D.D. The roles of Lane, (Manservant) and Merriman, (Butler) are played by Bennett Driscoll.

It should be mentioned that Felix and Walter Van Dijk, Beth Donahue, and Bennett Driscoll all come to this production direct from the successful and highly acclaimed presentation of Oliver Goldsmith's "She Stoops To Conquer" by The Elizabethan Companie Of Wayts and Players in Hingham. They all played leading roles to an uproarious reception, and Cohasset is pleased to welcome them to their stage.

"The Importance of Being Earnest" will be presented Nov. 8, 9, and 10, at 8 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall. Tickets will be available at the door and from cast members. Don't miss it!

Grid Club To Raise Scholarship Funds

On Sept. 30, starting at one o'clock, the Cohasset Gridiron Club, with the members of the Varsity and Junior Varsity football teams, will be distributing house to house, new window decals and program books for a dollar donation. This money is used for the scholarship fund. This is one of the major fund raisers along with the large Scholarship Dance on Nov. 16, that the Gridiron Club will be conducting this year.

If you are not going to be home on the 30th, you can send your donation to the Cohasset Gridiron Club, P.O., Box 23, Cohasset, Mass., and you will be sent your decal and booklet.

Recital

On Friday, Sept. 28 at 8 p.m., the South Shore Conservatory will present a four hand piano recital by faculty members Gerhardt and Barbara Suhrstedt.

Gerhardt Suhrstedt graduated from Furnam University and received his Masters in Piano Performance from Boston University. He is a member of the piano faculty of Tufts University and is Director of Music for St. John's parish in Newtonville and The Church of The Messiah in Auburndale.

He is also Music Director of the Center for Liturgy and The Arts.

Mrs. Suhrstedt received her B.M. from Oberlin Conservatory and her M.M. from Boston University. She was winner of the Young Artists Competition in piano at Ohio University.

She is a past member of the faculty of All Newton Music School and has been on the South Shore Conservatory since 1970.

The Suhrstedts have chosen music by Warlock, Mozart, Poulenc, Mendelssohn and Bizet for this concert. The public is welcome to attend free of charge. The South Shore Conservatory is located at Cedar Hill, off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham.

Louis Simeone

Memorial graveside services for 28-year Cohasset police veteran Louis J. Simeone Jr. will be held Sunday in Woodside Cemetery.

Simeone, who died earlier this summer, spent much time in the cause of eye research through the Cohasset Lions Club.

Community Center Courses Commence

Mon., Oct. 1 is the opening day for the fall classes and workshops sponsored by the community center. There are some openings in all courses with the exception of tumble tots, which is filled.

The decorators' seminars which highlight the workshop calendar begin Tues., Oct. 2. Jeanne Sorgi and Yvonne Trilsch will discuss approaches to home decorating through paint, fabric, wallpaper and carpet. Next week's seminar concerns furniture styles discussed by Andrew Paraskos from Ethan Allen.

Seminars are held at 7:30 p.m. in the function room on Tuesdays. Pre-registration is required for all courses and workshops.

STRAWBERRY BANKES TRIP

Reservations are still being accepted for the center's Oct. 10 bus trip to the Strawberry Bankes Estate in historic Portsmouth, N.H. Fee includes the cost of the tour, transportation and lunch at an old tavern.

On Nov. 14 the center plans a trip to the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston to view the headline-making Chardin exhibit. Call the center at 383-0088 for details and reservations.

OCTOBERFEST REQUESTS

The center wi" be holding its annual fall fu.. fair Oct. 6. Townspeople are invited to make all donations to the center by Fri., Oct. 5. The committees welcome bunches of your fresh fall flowers (to be sold) by costumed children, baked goods, jellies and preserves and items for the flea market.

Table space is still available. Call Nina Bird at 383-0659 t reserv a table or to volunteer some spare time.

Fuel Assistance To Elderly Proposed

O'Neill asked the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to set aside part of the $247 million Older Americans Act to help senior citizens with their fuel bills. The Act could supplement other federal fuel programs, according to the Lt. Governor.

"The most serious crisis facing elderly people in the coming cold winter months is having too little money to pay the high cost of keeping warm," O'Neill told an HEW hearing in Boston last week. "If we plan jointly today, Older American Act funds can be used to fill the gaps left by other programs."

O'Neill, who coordinates federal/state relations for Massachusetts, noted that new fuel assistance programs in Congress may not be passed in time for this year's heating season. However, O'Neill said the Older American Act does have the flexibility to help meet the problem.

The Act now allows money to be used for "welfare services which assure people's health and well-being," O'Neill said. Accordingly, "fuel assistance is a needed and eligible use of funds as long as it does not duplicate other programs," O'Neill said.

"There are presently no less than a dozen proposals in Congress to address the needs of Americans for fuel assistance," O'Neill declared. "If they are not passed in time, we may be left this winter at the mercy of programs that have served us in the past."

Around Town

Chris Abbruzzese [above] of 90 Old Pasture Road, Cohasset, Mass., is a fullback on the 1979 Bowdoin College football team. A freshman, he is a graduate of Deerfield Academy.

☐Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Bilodeau of Cohasset have announced the engagement of their daughter, Nancy Virginia Marie Bilodeau, to Arthur Robert Roach, son of Mrs. Ann Roach of Weymouth and the late Arthur R. Roach. Miss Bilodeau is a graduate of Cohasset High School and attended Aquinas Junior College. She is employed by Target Industries, Inc., Cohasset. Mr. Roach graduated from Weymouth Vocational Technical High School and is employed by Spencer Press, Hingham. They plan an October wedding.

☐Miss Mary Kay Spahn and R. David Londergan Jr. plan a Nov. 10 wedding, it was announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A.J. Spahn of Indiana. Mr. Londergan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Londergan of Cohasset.

☐Betsy Walsh, Edward Connolly and their daughter Caitlin who was born Oct. 26, 1977 at 2 lbs., 8 ozs., were among hundreds of people attending the Third Annual Intensive Care Nursery Reunion at St. Margaret's Hospital for Women.

The event turned out to be a veritable celebration of life in this International Year of the Child. A celebration of life that might never have happened had it not been for the Intensive Care Nursery — one of two high-rish transfer centers in Boston — at St. Margaret's Hospital for Women and an incredibly dedicated staff of doctors and nurses.

Most parents see their children who have "graduated" from the Intensive Care Nursery at St. Margaret's Hospital as living miracles. In a way, they are right.

The tiny patients are likely to have been either premature or affected by some birth defect. Then, there are a number of cases involving disorders that sometimes accompany multiple births.

☐Dr. Michael P. Equi of Cohasset has accepted the voluntary position of community chairman for Cohasset in the 1979 Campaign of the United Way of Massachusetts Bay. As community chairman, he is responsible for the entire fund-raising efforts in the community.

Educated at Boston College and a graduate of Columbia University School of Dentisty, Dr. Equi is president of the Cohasset Rotary and is a member of the Jaycees and the Cohasset Community Center.

☐Miss Patricia Ann Harrington and Charles F. Dolan III were married recently in Belmont. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Harrington Jr. of North Dartmouth and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dolan of Cohasset. The bridegroom graduated from Cohasset High School, Boston State College and Quincy Police Academy. He is an M.D.C. police officer. The bride, a registered nurse, graduated from Salve Regina College in Boston. They will live in Belmont.

Karen Curelli was among 50 student nurses adding black velvet bands to their caps at convocation ceremonies held August 27 at New England Baptist School of Nursing. The chevron-like band, denoting added responsibility, honors achievement of senior status.

Registration Of New Voters

The Board of Registars will meet Fri., Oct. 12 from 12 noon to 8 p.m. to correct the voting list and register new voters for the special town meeting to be held Mon., Oct. 22.

Energy Meeting

Professor Daniel Yergin, a professor at Harvard Business School and co-author of "Energy Future: Report of the Task Force Project on Energy at the Harvard Business School," will be the distinguished guest speaker at an upcoming event co-sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Cohasset, the League of Women Voters of Hingham, and Reach.

Professor Yergin will talk about "Options for the Coming Decade." This special event will be held Wednesday, Oct. 3, at 8 p.m. at the Hingham High School auditorium. The public is invited.

BRAINTEASERS... ...Round 3

Time once again to do some hard thinking as we present round three of the Mariner Brainteaser contest.

By now you know the rules. Answer the following 10 questions plus the tie-breaking bonus and send your answers to: Brainteasers, Mariner Newspapers, Box 682, Marshfield, Mass. 02050. Be certain they are postmarked by next Tuesday.

TEASERS, PART III

1 — In Homer's living room, there is an old clock that strikes at the hour and the half-hour. Recently Homer called on Schmidt, the local artisan, to install a little wooden bird atop the clock. Schmidt promised a fine bit of craftsmanship, skillfully adjusted to cuckoo twice whenever the clock struck the hour. "Also I will fix it for you," he said, "so that the bird will cuckoo once if it hears the clock striking the half-hour." Schmidt came through as promised. Now, if you've got this far, tell us how many times does the bird cuckoo in a full 24-hour day?

2 — There is a simple everyday word of five letters that contains within itself five other common words. No, you don't have to rearrange any of the letters, nor do you have to skip over any in spelling any of the five words. We've given you more than enough clues; can you give us the word?

3 — There is one "intruder" (word that does not belong) in each of the following sets. Name the "intruders."

a) Sleet Snow Hail Frost
b) Potato Cabbage Onion Carrot
c) Cone Triangle Pyramid Sphere
d) Marbles Dice Soccer Balls Tennis Balls
e) Racoon Squirrel Woodcock Chipmunk
f) Inscrutable Feasable Peaceable Workable

4 — A hound is chasing a hare, poor thing, and the hare is 50 jumps ahead of the hound. The hare jumps faster than the hound, making six jumps to the hound's five. But nine of the hare's jumps carry him only as far as seven of the hound's jumps. The problem is, how many jumps will the hare make before the hound catches up with him?

5 — How can a person tie a knot in a string while holding one end firmly in each hand and not letting the fingers go from the string, even for an instant?

6 — This must have been before inflation. Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Smith who first names are Dorothy, Helen and Mary — though not necessarily in that order — went shopping together. Mary spent twice as much as Helen and Helen spent three times as much as Dorothy. If Mrs. Davis spent $3.85 more than Mrs. Smith, what is each women's full name?

7 — There aren't many six-letter words in the English language that end in the letter "z". We found five and are asking you to go ahead and find four. No proper names please.

8 — If you were given two long steel rods and were told that one was magnetic and the other was not, how would you tell, in a few seconds, which was which. Mind you, you can't use any tools or materials to help you.

9 — Suppose five cats can catch five rats in five minutes. How many rats could 100 cats catch in a hour?

Trip Number Three On The Scale Trail

Saying Goodby To Mr. Goodbar

By Polly Sarcia

This is the third in a four part series following the progress of the author, Polly Sarcia (look that one up!) as she undergoes an intensive weight loss program at Bodyworks in Scituate.

The line on my graph continues to plummet downward.. well, the plummeting has slowed somewhat, as is to be expected, but still, its descent is sure. Fourteen days... eleven and a quarter pounds.

I am indeed able to sit for long periods of time with my jeans zipped up (as promised in last week's article) and have even managed to get into a few things that did not fit at all when this program began. Tomorrow I will face the measuring tape, this time with courage, for I am sure to be as delighted with the loss of inches as I am with the decrease in tonnage.

Last week, my thoughts were mostly of food: what I could have, what I missed, what I could next eat. This week, I find that it is almost a chore to eat and, although I am still spending extra time trying to make the limited choices on my menu even more enjoyable, the actual mechanics of eating no longer occupy prime time in my schedule. I am suddenly aware of the increased mobility in my newly toned muscles. Every day, I start off with an early morning visit to the plant-strewn green and white Bodyworks salon, which has become like a second home to me.

My fellow dieters and exercisers come in many shapes and sizes, and it is rewarding to watch these shapes and sizes change alongside my

Today You're Out In The 'Cold'

By Lois Martin

Years ago it was almost a treat to get the common cold. You knew people would treat you special. They couldn't wait to hustle you into bed, tuck the heating pad under your weary back and brew up something to sooth the hacking cough and runny nose.

No more. You get a cold today and you're on your own. Society doesn't want to be threatened by a germ carrier. I always believed that the person who did curative deeds for the one who was sick was spared infection. And as proof, I can say that I never caught mono or croup from my children.

PATCHES

In fact I stand behind old wives tails. Doctors don't seem to give Vicks Vaporub much word of mouth endorsement. But I say if you lacquer your chest with that stuff, apply Musterole on your back, the scent of recouperation initiates the cure.

And I am a pusher of therapeutic brew. Get yourself a couple good lemons, add them to boiled water, sweeten it to where it's pleasing, and you've got the base remedy for a miracle recovery. Of course if you choose to add a little spirits to the base, you may not notice (or care) if you're cured or not.

My grandmother was big on peppermint tea. That would be in the making at the sign of a sniffle, to be consumed by a person cozied in a feather bed, wearing a long flannel nightshirt.There were peoplewho healed too quickly under her nursing care, some of whom chose to delay recovery just for the side benefits.

Now friends and acquaintances challenge you if they think you have a cold: "Do you have a cold?" they demand to know. If the answer's affirmative, they say "I certainly hope I don't get it," before they move away from you.

Never mind that your eyes and your sinus passages are blocked. People resist any temptation to nurse you back to health. You'll be lucky nowadays to get lemons left on your back doorstep. No one'll come in the house if they think your up sneezing around.

I blame the times. We've grown too cautious about things like airborn germs, general contagions. Seems to me when a neighbor looks more convincing than the people in the Dristan ads, pity would inspire chicken soup. If it did, it would come through the mail. The home of a common cold bearer is treated like the reservation of a leper colony.

And gone is the coddling of the sick person by her family. Mothers who sneak to bed before 5 p.m. are still charged with knowing the status of laundry items, the car keys and supper. We who grew up with little bells to ring from our bedrooms when we felt poorly and required grape juice, are ill-prepared as matrons to have to battle the common cold with guilt as the salve instead of hot tea. Many families have to have complete retraining before they come to realize Mother should be lavished with tender loving care when she's languishing in her flu season. Never mind she was just well enough to cook a meal for herself before the soap operas came on.

Of course, there's another thing that's annoying. People may believe they'd feel better if they could just blow their eyes as well as their noses. But a lot of us don't get temperatures that mean they can lie in bed guiltlessly, sent there by family members with worry written on their faces.

I've got one friend who has told me straight out she won't visit me when I'm sick unless I've got the kind of bug that makes you get sick to your stomach and lose a lot of weight. Apparently I've been well enough to take plenty of nourishment. And, like classic old wives I've clung to the notion that the common cold should be fed . . . a lot, especially things like hot fudge sundaes, french fries and extra butter on bread of your choosing.

Today everybody's an expert. They can tell when you're coming down with something. They're quick to say "You don't look well." "You're getting pale again." Oh, sure they say things that make you sick; but they don't hang around for the cure.

Well, I can tell you I've no intention of denying my responsibilities to sufferers of the common cold. I have a special green tea pot that has carried healing therapeutic brew to many people. Just call me when you get a chill, I can give you the entire recipe, right over the phone.

Car Sticker Inspection Deadline . . . Oct. 15

With the semi-annual motor vehicle inspection period ending Monday, Oct. 15, less than a month remains for owners of 3 1/2 million registered motor vehicles to obtain fall inspection stickers.

Richard E. McLaughlin, Registrar of Motor Vehicles, cautions the motorist to "get to one of the 4,200 Registry approved state inspection stations as soon as possible."

The Registrar said that after the Spring inspection period ended, nearly 2,000 citations were issued to motorists who had failed to obey the law.

The fall sticker, green in color, costs $2 with a charge of 50 cents for trailers.

McLaughlin also urges operators to perform a personal inspection prior to driving to a Registry approved station.

"Turn on all the lights, walk around the car, make sure all bulbs are working. Have someone stand to one side and check the brake lights. Set the hand brake and test it yourself. You may be able to catch minor breakdowns in equipment before arriving at the station and being rejected," McLaughlin added.

Inspection includes brakes, lights, horn, exhaust system, steering, windshield and wipers, number plates, rear window, tires, fenders, bumpers, external sheet-metal and the factory installed pollution control system. Inspection of reflectors, chock blocks and splash guards are included on trucks.

Y Speaker Series Set to Start

The YWCA Speaker Series will begin Wednesday, Oct. 3 at 12:30 p.m. It will be held at the Thurber Barn on Ferryhill Road in Marshfield. The series will start with a luncheon tasting bee. For a fee you can enjoy lunch and receive a booklet of recipes.

The speaker will be Linda Wisner who will demonstrate fabric craft techniques.

Please call the Y for further information and to make reservations.

There are still openings in several Y classes which are slated to begin in mid-October.

The first is postpartum discussion which will be led by Pam Ward, nursery co-ordinator at Boston Lying-In Hospital. The group is designed to help new mothers over the hurdle of the first few months of an infant's life. The group is casual and informative.

Parenting on How to Win the War will be taught by Gerry Martin, an educator in the Milton public school system. Child development in relationship to parenting will be discussed in 10 sessions. Topics include self-image, ego strength, parenting issues and other interesting topics as they arise in the class.

Desserts and appetizers will provide a variety of teachers who will share and demonstrate their favorite recipes.

Fertility Awareness will be taught by Leah Jackson, a counselor at the Brockton Family Planning Center. The class is designed for mothers and daughters in junior high and high school. The goal is to provide basic information on human sexuality and to discuss this as an important part of a woman's life.

Home Landscaping by Deborah Creelman, landscape designer will focus on defining your own landscaping problems, working on them, and developing your own landscape plan.

Being A Single Parent led by Carol Hackett, school counselor and group counselor of single parents will cover issues relevant to the single parent: dating, self image, relationship to ex-spouse, decision-making strategies, coping with loneliness, and advantages.

10-0 Butler, Norwell
10-0 Dahquist, Norwell
10-0 Derochea, Norwell
10-0 James, Cohasset

Note: On the business of states and their metallic nicknames. After proper deliberation, we decided there are many correct answers here, so most everyone has a correct answer on that question. Also, 90 pennies, one dime and nine half dollars is acceptable for question one.

Second note: although the top 10 spots are tight, we have many more contestants who have eight and nine answers correct after round one, and they should definitely be considered in the running.

Price Now THE Issue

Studds On Top Of Energy Pinch

Following is an excerpt from U.S. Gerry Studds newsletter on his efforts at the legislative level to insure home heating oil for our area in the coming winter:

I continued my close monitoring of the home heating oil situation and I remain convinced that we must act im--mediately if we are to prevent the people of New England from suffering great hardships this winter. In order to make sure that the Carter Administratin fully understands the plight we are facing in New England, I will join with other members of the New England Congressional Caucus in a meeting with Energy Secretary Duncan next week.

The primary issue I hope to discuss with the Secretary is the exorbitant price that those of us in New England will have to pay for home heating oil this winter. It is absolutely unconscionable that we should be expected to pay over 80 cents a gallon — nearly double the cost of a year ago — at a time when oil refineries are continuing to increase their profit margin. It is incredible to me that the latest data from the Department of Energy indicates that these refineries have increased their prices far higher than the increased cost of crude oil would warrant. These price hikes are, quite simply, intolerable, and I intend to tell the Energy Secretary that the Administration must take im--mediate action to correct this situation.

In an attempt to halt any further price increases this winter, President Carter did ask the major oil companies to follow the lead taken by Texaco recently by freezing heating oil prices and being flexible in their credit terms to local dealers. While I certainly support this request, I find it most ironic that after leading the effort to decontrol the price of domestically produced crude oil, the President is now asking oil companies to control the price of home heating oil.

Instead of asking the oil industry to voluntarily control these prices, however, I feel very strongly that the President should use his authority to immediately reimpose the controls on home heating oil prices that President Ford unwisely removed several years ago.

But even this action wuld at best provide limited relief; for it by some miracle prices were frozen immediately, they would still be at levels roughly twice as high as those of last year. In any event, it is clear that financial assistance must be extended to needy homeowners across New England. In my next Weekly Report I will discuss legislation now before the Congress which would offer such assistance.

New Gallery of Homes Plan For Marketing

At a recent meeting of the Northern New England Regional Council of the Gallery of Homes, Alexander Rutledge, President of the Gallery of Homes of the South Shore, and Tom Hamilton and Rick Fuller, officers, met with Michael Ramatowski, National Marketing Director for Gallery of Homes, and discussed a dynamic new marketing plan which will result in growth and improved member services.

"Today, real estate brokers want more services and greater support from franchise organizations," Rutledge stated. "Goals of Gallery of Homes, Inc. are to better service member brokers and attract new quality members more quickly and efficiently. Gallery of Homes will continue to recruit only quality brokers."

A primary objective of Gallery's new marketing plan is to increase the membership from 795 member brokers to 1500 member brokers, operating from 4,000 to 4,500 offices, by 1983.

Grant To Set Up Bureau Of Delinquency Prevention

James J. Collins, Chairman of the Norfolk County Commissioners, announced that a grant application filed with the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) calling for the establishment of a Norfolk County Delinquency Prevention Bureau has received initial approval from the LEAA Region V Supervisory Board. Final approval by the full state Committee on Criminal Justice is anticipated this fall.

The $32,800 grant is considered seed money to establish a new innovative program supervised by the County Commissioners and ultimately a Delinquency Prevention Board.

Objectives are to reduce juvenile delinquency by prevention through establishment of a Board to exchange information and ideas with youth service agencies at the regional and state level, local communities, school systems and local business and professional associations. The Board will establish itself as a lead agency in providing technical assistance, organizational development and creation of a long-range plan for future prevention efforts.

The ultimate goal of the pilot program is to establish a viable delinquency prevention network that will be a model for other government divisions to emulate. A monthly newsletter will be developed during the course of project activities.

Pre-natal Program At Jordan

The Jordan Hospital invites expectant mothers and fathers to participate in a free program of Prenatal Care Education.

The intent of the Prenatal Program is to provide an opportunity for informal discussion between class leaders and prospective parents. Attendance of both parents is not required but is encouraged.

A new series of classes will begin Tuesday, Oct. 2, in the North Conference Room of The Jordan Hospital, at 7:15 p.m., with subsequent sessions on October 9, October 16, and October 23. Nancy Borsari, R.N., Obstetrical Nurse at The Jordan, will coordinate this series of classes.

The first session, which will deal with prenatal care, will be led by Dr. Barry Meltzer, Kuina Blackford, R.D., a Dietition at The Jordan will discuss diet during pregnancy. There will also be a tour of The Jordan's Maternity Unit.

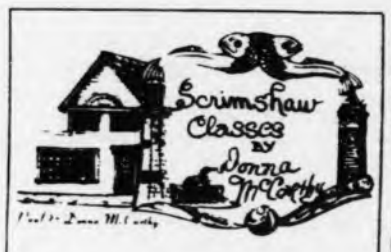
Dr. Ed Stefanski will lead Session #2, "Growth and Development of the Baby." Susan Oxhorn, Family Planning Counselor, will discuss modern techniques of birth control.

Session #3 on "Labor, Delivery, and Prepared Childbirth" will be led by Dr. Joel Baron. Nancy Borsari will also be present to answer questions about prepared childbirth.

For the fourth and concluding session, a local pediatrician will discuss "The Pediatrician's Approach to Childhood."

Dr. Joel Baron, Chief of Gynecology/Obstetrics at The Jordan Hospital, coordinates the program to assure an optimum opportunity to answer questions and concerns of all expectant parents. Dr. Baron notes, "Prenatal care means, basically, regular supervision of the expectant mother by a physician throughout pregnancy. Beyong that, it includes careful attention to the physical and psychological health of the prospective mother and father." By neglecting to seek prenatal care and education, the risk to the mother and baby increases. Neglect can result in a diseased, malnourished child or a premature birth. Any of these conditions can be vitally important to the newborn baby.

All expectant parents are encouraged to participate in the Prenatal Education Classes and to seek prenatal care, for the good health of both mother and baby.



Prenatal Classes at The Jordan Hospital are conducted at regular intervals throughout the year. For more information, call 746-2000. Ext. 351. No appointment is necessary. Classes are open to everyone, and there is no charge.

Tomatoes Just Keep On Coming •

By Joan Pinkham

The apples redden. The grape ripens and still we harvest tomatoes.

Where can you visit without coming away without a crumpled brown bag, a gift of love apples? Should you run out of ideas as the deluge continues we have a recipe from Kay Lombard for tomato juice. Her vegetables, even the celery that is called for, is all home-grown, but you may substitute celery seed if necessary. This makes eight quarts.

KAY LOMBARD'S TOMATO JUICE

1 peck of tomatoes
4 onions, sliced
1 T celery seed, or bunch of celery, chopped
2 T salt
8 whole cloves
Cook for one hour, strain and add

* * *

Hordes of good cooks neither preserve nor pickle. Lest they develop some sort of complex without having a row of jams or jellies adorning the kitchen window sill, not to worry, Myron Litchfield has a recipe for you. Running a close second to the bountiful tomato, is squash and one ingeneous way of cutting back on your supply is to make these Zucchini Puffs which Myron claims are fun to make and go like this:

3 c. zucchini, unpeeled and chopped
1 large onion, chopped
1/2 c. salad oil
1 c. Bisquick, or other packaged mix
4 beaten eggs
1/2 c. grated parmesan cheese
1/2 to 1 tsp. salt, pepper to taste
2 T parsley or dill, chopped

In large bowl place zucchini, onion, oil, Bisquick and beaten eggs. Stir to blend, do not beat. Add parsley, (or dill), salt, pepper and parmesan. Mix well with a spoon. Butter 2 qt. casserole. Pour in the mixture and bake in 350 oven approximately 35 or 40 min. Surface should be lightly browned and golden when finished. A perfect vegetarian dish, or casserole

Now that school has started and Fall is in the air, the kitchen seems much more appealing than on hot summer days. Youngsters love to come in from school and settle down for a snack while showing you their daily spelling or drawing. These Apple Rolls, a recipe from Jean FitzGerald, will show that your day has been creative, too.

APPLE ROLLS

4 c. diced apples
1 c. broken pecans
2 c. sugar
3 c. flour
2 tsp. baking soda
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. allspice,
1/4 tsp. nutmeg
3/4 tsp. cinnamon
1 c. melted margarine
2 tsp. vanilla
2 eggs, slightly beaten

Grease and flour 3 lb. coffee cans. In medium bowl, stir apples, nuts and sugar. Let stand 1 hour, stirring often. In large bowl, sift flour, soda, salt, allspice, nutmeg and cinnamon. Add apple mixture. Stir well, Stir in margarine, vanilla and eggs. Divide batter between cans. Tie a 2" wide band of double aluminum foil around top of each can. Bake at 350 degrees until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean, approximately 1 hour and 15 minutes. Place cans on wire rack to cool. Remove foil and place loaves on wire rack to cool.

Trip Three On The Scale Trail

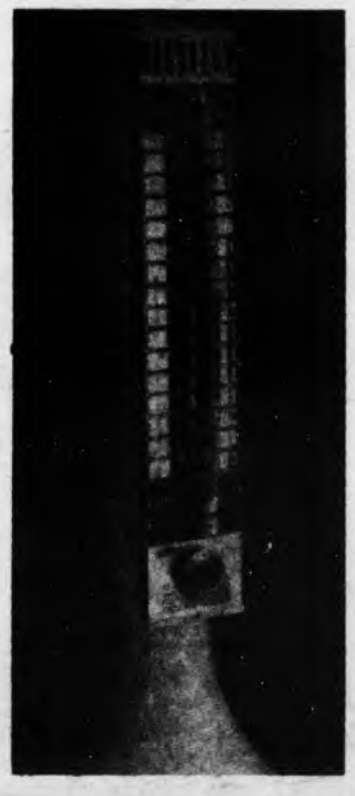
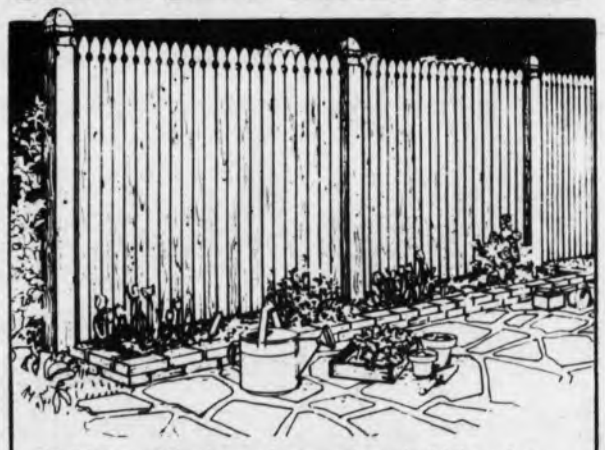
own; uplifting to exchange compliments on dwindling waist lines; comforting to share the universal feelings of winning in a struggle often waged — and lost — before. I wish there were time and space to tell you about at least a few of these other women, whose stories may indeed be more interesting than my own, but it shall have to suffice to say that I am strengthened by their dedication and their victories.

As an alumna of many other exercise salons, I am also delighted with the concern and professionalism of Nancy Sheenan, Betty Grimes and Nancy Lane, who take turns cracking the whip (ever so gently) over my prone and groaning body. Naturally, I pulled a muscle during the first week of exercise (when I make up my mind to do something, I usually plunge right in and do it wrong!) and these three women were right there, with the proper stretches to get things rolling again.



Let's get away from all this serious stuff...because I want to tell you, I'm having a grand time. My husband commented the other night that he used to feel sorry for me when I dieted in past centuries, but now he does not, for I seem to be enjoying it so much.



And I am. It's easy (no calories or carbohydrates to calculate) and I'm having great fun thinking up non-edible rewards for each five pounds that fall away...a long-coveted pair of earrings, the luxury of a manicure, the future promise of a body massage and a wine colored velour jacket...the knowledge that when I finally meet Alan Alda (or Frank Langella) in person, I will be ravishing enough to say more than hello before ducking behind the nearest potted palm.

It may seem to you that I am obsessed with this new way of life, but no more obsessed than I was with eating a scant two weeks ago. Let's just say that this is the preferable obsession. It must be true that when you feel good, you look good, because many friends and acquaintances who are unaware that I am the notorious Polly Sarcia have begun to comment...and what ego can resist the flattery? I am definitely on a high, and that's exactly where I intend to stay.

Believe me, this accounting to you has really kept me on the right track, and I really want to make you all very proud of me. Please keep your fingers crossed (and I'll try to keep my mouth shut), and I'll be back next week, hopefully with my jeans falling down.

KEEP WARM cheap
WITH QUART HEAT.
Quartz heat is revolutionary . . . in fact, it's downright mysterious . . . Other heat sources warm the air and therefore you get warm . . . not so with quartz heat! The people and furnishings of the room are warmed without the necessity (and expense) of heating the air.
Special settings and controls turn the unit on and off in such a way that at just the low setting comfort is achieved.
When the draw on the power source (electric) is computed often the result is heat for just a few pennies per hour.
We will be happy to explain more. Call us at 843-1133 or better yet, drop in and we will give you a demonstration.
And, you'll be pleasantly surpised at the low, low cost.

Choral Art Society Goes Into Rehearsal

The Choral Art Society has begun rehearsals for the first concert of its 22nd season, to be held Saturday evening, Dec. 8, in Norwell High School.

William Sano, the Society's new conductor, has revised the Christmas program which now consists of Holst's choral fantasy on old carols "Christmas Day," Paul Fetler's brass-accompanied "Jubilate Dee: Sing and Rejoice," Praetorius' "In Dulci Jubile," Palestrina's "Hedie Christus Natus Est," Daniel Pinkham's "Christmas Cantata" with double brass choir, and Benjamin Britten's "Ceremony of Carols" with harp, in the four-part chorus arrangement.

Cathleen T. Morrison of Marshfield is the Society's new accompanist; she teaches piano and organ in Marshfield and is organist and Youth Choir Director at the Pilgrim Church in Duxbury.

Soloists are chosen from chorus members, and interested singers are still welcome to attend the next two rehearsals, held Monday evenings at 8:00 p.m. at the Scituate Public Library, 85 Branch St. (lower-level meeting room and entrance).

For information call Robert Kniffen, Halifax, 293-3147; Ellen Brown, Scituate, 545-0637; Ruth Sibley, Norwell, 659-2571; David Norris, Marshfield, 837-0985; or Nancy White, Cohasset, 383-1411.

Riddle Of The Week:
What To Do With The Old News Store

[Ed.'s Note: Recently the Cohasset News Co. moved to the old Cumberland Farm Store on Brook Street. That move caused discontent among villagers because if there's one thing villagers dislike — it's changing their shopping habits. Writer Karin Bartow decided to tell the story from a first person, rather, "first store" perspective.

I'm getting self-conscious. Every day people walk by me and stare through my undressed windows into my drab interior. I imagine they're getting hostile about my prolonged emptiness.

My analyst says I'm taking this recent abandonment too seriously and suggested that I do something about my depression.

Although I hear I'm expensive to rent, I'm large and in a good location with adequate parking, so I don't understand why I'm still sitting idle.

With things getting out of control, I called on a friend at the Mariner to have her ask people what kind of new store they think the town needs. Maybe somebody will read this and move in.

There are a lot of things folks say we don't need, like antique shops, realtors, hairdressers, or gift shops. Okay. What then?

A lot confided, "Well, this is sort of a selfish desire, but I'd love to see..." a good shoe store, or shops offering homemade candy, toys, flowers, running gear, music items,

Commissioners Select Meadow And Circus Sites

Last week the sewer commissioners proposed two sites as their choices for a second wastewater treatment plant in the town.

Recommended by the commissioners in the town land (allocated to the school department) which is bounded by the Music Circus and Smith Place. Whale Meadow was chosen as their second preferred site. That site is in the vicinity of Howard Gleason Road.

The third article proposed by the commissioners is the accompanying money article which will raise the amount to pay for the site.

An additional $295,000 is being asked for to supplement the $265,000 voted by annual town meeting in order that a total amount of $560,000 can be spent on working plans and specifications for "needy" areas of the town.

Any plant designed would be built for a projected 15-year use.

It is expected that the town will take affirmative action on one of the two sites as this special town meeting, as it has been threatened with legal action over its having exceeded effluent limits at the present plant.

According to the Metcalf and Eddy reports now available at the library, the plant is being designed to handle current effluent problems and would not encourage new development.

Suggestions made by Metcalf and Eddy with regard to future standards for on-lot systems which would help the town to retard the pressures for additional public sewerage were as follows:

—A review by the board of health of their current requirement for minimum leaching area. The minimum leaching field area of 600 square feet only applies to a percolation rate of six minutes per inch or less for homes with garbage grinders (four bed-room house).

—A review by the board of health of the suitability of the regulations regarding disposal areas placed in fill.

The engineers also advised that present zoning regulations be investigated. Present regulations allow lot sizes of 12, 20, 0r 30,000 square feet

Experimental Dump Buys Town Dump Some Years

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Cohasset Heights on top of Bear Hill sounds like the name of a suave apartment complex, a tennis club, a residential area of one-acre lots with $200,000 homes tucked into the mountain. But it's not. It's a demolition dump.

Sixteen years ago, James Tyervar (pronounced Tire) moved to Cohasset from Maryland. At first he dabbled in excavation and landscaping. Then he began contracting for heavier jobs.

One of his major jobs was the Cohasset swimming pool. "I did everything but the pool and the building." He also did the excavation and sewage for the South Shore Publishing Co.

As a result of his construction business and his own need to find a convenient location to dump demolition materials after a job, he started thinking in terms of a demolition landfill in Cohasset.

In 1975, he purchased 50 acres on Bear Hill. "It looked like a wilderness when I purchased it. It was a big job to prepare the area and it took three and a half years to get state and town approvals. I gambled with my life savings and more."

And then on Dec. 11, 1978 he opened for business. The operation itself utilizes 20 plus acres and has a projected use of 35 years, with an average daily volume of 100 tons of dump material, although he's not getting that volume presently.

The facility is classified by state and local officials as unique because it's self-

Some Watched The Pope On TV Others Went By Land And Sea!

There's no way to tell how many of us made the trip to Boston to see Pope John Paul, II. But we do know that those who didn't venture out had their TV tuned to the papal news.

Tom Jones, an 8th Grade student and an altar boy at St. Anthony's said, "It was really very exciting, also very wet. It was funny walking back to the boat. We only saw about 20 people on the streets. There wasn't anybody at Quincy Market. Everybody was at the Common."

Alfred Odermatt sounded very hoarse Tuesday morning when we spoke with him about his day spent in the downpour.

"It was just the most wonderful day. The weather wasn't what we expected, but what difference does that make? It was the Pope. I don't think anybody was sorry they went."

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray described the day as "Beautiful, beautiful. Even before thousands and thousands of people he exudes love.

He has a beautiful smile. I hate the word charisma — just say he's beautiful."

hard-cover books, buttons, or fruit for sale. Right, selfish.

One woman had some thoughtful advice that a prospective lessee might heed: "I'd like to see something that's attractive and well taken care of, a store that's an asset to the town."

I concur. I'm in a prime spot and I look shabby enough as it is, especially in comparison with the newly spruced up Gown Museum.

Most people felt one of two things would be best — a family clothing store or a bakery.

They want a clothing store that carries moderate priced, decent quality items, such as underwear (not in the window, please!) lingerie, hose, nightgowns, socks, work shirts and pants, sweaters, jerseys, blouses, belts, and accessories.

The bakery idea has lots of possibilities. It could also offer a coffee shop, sandwiches or a deli on the side. Might be tricky. There are two food stores on the street and the local spa around the corner.

Some newer folks suggested a fast-food emporium, like Burger King or MacDonalds (with the arches — egads!). A Texas Chili Parlor, featuring James' Coney Island Chili, with Willie Nelson music to boot?

Here are some ideas that might fly with the right entrepreneur: a 24-hour movie theatre; an oil collaborative (with a little wood on the side); or an investment conglomerate!

Just think of the people lined up outside my windows peering in at the Dow Jones ticker tape! Investors could haggle over the price of bonds, stocks, gold, stamps, coins, jewelry, maybe even a little commodity trading in the back room.

Now here is an intriguing suggestion — a Selectmen's Shop! Imagine a place where candidates and office-holders can buy campaign buttons, nomination papers, and other literature of the trade. There could be a section for School Committee members with books on etiquette and brevity; and shelves of helpful materials for Board of Health members, assessors, dog officer, and so on.

Could be tough in an off-election year.

Several distinguished commuters and non-commuters said the only logical thing to happen is for the News Company to move back! Unfortunately, they say they've gone for good!

The longer I remain empty, the more the suspense builds up. My fears now include how people are going to accept the new me, whenever that happens. I have nightmares about waking up one morning to find that I am full of strobe lights and boogie blues beating against the walls!

My happiest dreams are of waking to the aroma of steaming hot coffee, fresh baked bread and donuts, the smell of cheeses and meats in my deli, and the clatter of all my old friends coming and going.

I hope my dreams are answered soon because I'm going broke paying my analyst. Say, maybe he might be interested in moving in! Sidewalk psychiatry a-la-Lucy! What do you think?

supporting, it's industrial zoned and it's the only area with good accessibility.

The landfill's surrounding resources aid in the operation of the landfill, located one third of a mile off the state highway, but best of all — it's out of sight. One can't drive down 3A and see it.

If you can think in terms of any landfill operation as beautiful, this one is. He's constructed a pond with 280,000 gallons of water and a fire hydrant for firefighting (selectmen take note).

The town fire department frequently uses the pond for personnel training and testing of equipment. Cells and lifts are constructed between material deposits — "It requires an enormous amount of dirt to cover demolition material." But then all the dirt required is right on site.

Tyeryar charges $1.50 yard as compared to the town dump's charge of $4 a yard. His lower price attracts area contractors and contractors from as far away as Dover and Chelsea. But the real benefit to the town is that he's helping to expand the town dump's life.

The dump takes construction waste, demolition material, brush, stumps and rocks. Car loads of anything are not invited, but residents with trucks can also pay to dump. Loads are landfilled on a daily basis.

In exchange for the dumping fee, he will also stockpile dirt, gravel, loam and fill from contractors — screen it and process it — and then sell it back to the contractors when business is slow.

"If it's handled properly the area could be expanded upon. There's even the possibility of its becoming a regional incineration plant where sludge from sewage treatment plants could be burned and dumped." (In 1981 the state will require that sludge from sewage plants be dried and processed into sludge cakes which can then possibly be used as fertilizer or burned).

Of course there are still problems to iron out. But Tyeryar's not about to let anything dampen his enthusiasm or his dream for Cohasset Heights.

Tyeryar Resents New State Law

Jim Tyeryar, owner of Cohasset Heights, doesn't wish to enter into a partnership with the Town of Cohasset. And yet a new state law is pushing both Tyeryar and the town into that situation.

In June 1976 the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) amended its landfill laws to read that private landfill operators must pay the town 50 cents per ton for material brought to the site.

Tyeryar applied for the dump permit before the ammendment was passed by the DEQE and before his meeting with the board of health in June 1976. He had no knowledge of the amendment until later that year. The amendment was not published until that fall. Had he known of the amendment he said he might not have gone ahead with his landfall operation.

Presently Tyeryar charges contractors $1.50 a yard to dump. If the town charged him 50 cents a ton he estimates he would be paying the town $12,000 annually on top of taxes or $420,000 plus bookkeeping expenses, over the dump's 35-year lifespan.

"The DEQE wrote the law but it is not engaged in contracting with or for the town on the matter. My landfill is considered to be a town benefit and DEQE wishes the town to enforce the amendment.

"The weak part of the law is that it was written with garbage dumps in mind. Garbage dumps charge $13 a ton — garbage is a more lucrative business.

Tyeryar said he has paid $5,000 in sales taxes to the state on his equipment, $44,000 to correct a problem created by the state on his property and the state requires that eight acres of his land be bonded at $5,500 per acre at all times for the dump's useful lifetime.

He feels he runs a model dump, benefits the town by helping to expand the lifespan of the town dump and thinks the private landfill fee is discriminatory.

Although he doesn't wish to get involved with the town legally he feels if he were to pay the town 50 cents per ton "I would be the only businessman in town paying a fee for a private business."

It's possible that he will ask for a superior court ruling on the matter. In any case he is willing to negotiate and hopes the local board of health will act with discretion.

At a meeting with the board of health on June 25, 1979 Tyeryar proposed that the board exempt him from paying any fee until June 1, 1980 in order that he can recover some portion of his start-up costs and expenditures.

Should he agree to pay the dumping fee he asked that his real estate taxes be waived.

In lieu of a cash payment he has also offered to deliver cover material to the town for 25 per cent below bid price. So far the board of health has rejected that offer.

Tyeryar will meet with Health Inspector Kevin O'Brien in the near future to further discuss the situation.

Trial Dates Set For Ptl. Randolph Feola

At a hearing at Wareham District Court Tuesday, trial dates were set for Patrolman Randolph A. Feola, Jr. Both trials will be conducted before a six-man jury at Wareham District Court.

On Oct. 30, Ptl. Feola will be tried on charges of operating under the influence, speeding, failure to keep to the right, operating without a license and being in possession of a dangerous weapon.

On Nov. 6, he will be tried on charges of operating under the influence and operating to endanger.

Merchants Prepare For Xmas

By Larry Fone

Early plans are now being formulated for Christmas decorations in the village. The Cohasset Village & Harbor Association will be lighting a large tree on the Common and organizing a co-ordinate theme for the merchants so our town will have a cheery holiday appearance for Christmas.

The Association has also purchased additional refuse baskets of the new design to be placed around the village and thanks to the Highway Dept. will be installed shortly.

Vandalism in the village area has become a real problem with the unfortunate result of discouraging the merchants from spending money on decorative signing, plantings and special exterior shop improvements.

Hope all you readers will visit the fine new Cohasset news store on Brook St. It is a fresh and bright approach and a pleasure to shop there.

for Residential A, B and C zoning.

"In view of the generally poor conditions for on-lot disposal systems, even the 30,000 sq. ft. classification is marginal in the allowance for continued replacement of leaching fields."

It was stressed that a soil conservation service classification of soils in Cohasset indicates a minimum size of one acre or greater for on-lot systems in areas with severe limitations.

The engineers added that an increase to larger lot sizes of about one acre can have some impact in those areas not yet developed. "The pressures for public sewerage would be lessened and potential growth would be reduced in areas of rezoning."

It was incorrectly reported in the Sept. 27 edition of The Mariner that Robert Crawford was the owner of land at 79 Atlantic Avenue which is being developed by Wayne Sawchuk. In fact the land is owned by the 79 Atlantic Trust. Crawford is the engineer for the proposed development.

The engineers added that an increase to larger lot sizes of about one acre can have some impact in those areas not yet developed. "The pressures for public sewerage would be lessened and potential growth would be reduced in areas of rezoning."

Correction

It was incorrectly reported in the Sept. 27 edition of The Mariner that Robert Crawford was the owner of land at 79 Atlantic Avenue which is being developed by Wayne Sawchuk. In fact the land is owned by the 79 Atlantic Trust. Crawford is the engineer for the proposed development.

FIGHT CONTINUED

According to Attorney William Vernon, former Cohasset police patrolman David Moir will seek to overturn a decision made by the Boston Municipal Court which held that the selectmen's dismissal of Moir in March 1978 was proper.

Moir was discharged from his position on the basis of 11 charges of misconduct, stemming from the fall of 1977 and including two counts of assault and battery and one count of assault with a dangerous weapon.

In seeking to recover his former position, Moir will use a write of certiorare, which provides for an appeal when no other appeal is allowed under statute. The writ was filed with Suffolk Superior Court.

However, the proceedings conducted by the Civil Service Commission and by selectmen will not be contested, although evidence will be questioned.

DISCHARGE OF FIREARMS

The Town of Cohasset has a bylaw which prohibits hunting and discharge of firearms, air rifles and pellet guns within all parts of the town bounded and described as follows:

Westerly by South Main Street; northerly by Elm Street and a portion of Cohasset Harbor; easterly by portions of Cohasset Harbor and the Gulf River; southerly by the Scituate town line.

This bylaw does not apply to the lawful defense of life or property nor to any law enforcement officer acting in the discharge of his duties. Nor does it apply to hunting or the discharge of firearms by any person on land owned or legally occupied by such person subject to the provisions of existing laws.

The penalty for the violation of the bylaw shall not exceed $100 for each offense.

LEGISLATION

Selectmen are supporting legislation which would provide that boat assessments be paid to the towns which maintain the harbor in which they are moored. Boats are now assessed where they are moored as of July 1.

LANDFILL COMMITTEE

Members are still being sought for a selectmen-appointed committee to study the landfill situation.

Early Deadline

Next Monday, Oct. 8 is Columbus Day, a national holiday. Schools, banks, the post office and many businesses will be closed for the day.

Consequently, the Mariner will have an early deadline. All news and advertising copy should be delivered by Saturday at 2 p.m.

Church & State

(The Mariner lifted the following from the bulletin of the First Parish in Cohasset because we thought it was so timely, and so well stated:)

FROM THE MINISTER'S STUDY

"I do not plan to go to Boston on the day Pope John Paul II comes to visit and celebrate Mass. It is not that I would not enjoy seeing the Pope, but courtesy in this instance it seems to me calls for persons not of the Roman Catholic faith to stand aside and leave room for the thousands upon thousands of Catholics who would like to catch a glimpse of their religious leader.

"On one other point I would also suggest a thought. There has been some criticism of the city for allowing public land for the use of a religious celebration. As long as the costs of the celebration are borne by the church and as long as a similar kind of open access to the Common is permitted to all religious groups we are hardly in a position to be critical. After all the First Parish Meeting House stands in the middle of the Cohasset Common and we have been holding services at that location on a weekly basis for over two hundred and fifty years."

Rev. Edward T. Atkinson

Nice and Vague

To the Editor:

Re. your short write up on Doane Street subdivison, page 9, Sept. 20.

I don't know who released this to your paper, but in the writer's opinion it's nice and vague! Drainage is drainage but another cesspool alley due to construction isn't needed in Cohasset until proper facilities have been installed throughout the town to take care of the problem.

The area in question may be one of the better suited areas in Cohasset for building homes at this time, but it doesn't leave out the facts that a three-day rainy northeaster fills every cesspool and septic tank leaching field in Cohasset!

The Doane Street subdivision abutes the Beechwood Ball Park. And this is the real issue not "The quiet neighborhood."

The lower end of this park houses fire house No. 3. That is slowly having its foundation undermined by water pressure under the surface and above in heavy rains.

The fire house is many yards from the area that is the real issue in this subdivision, the area where mothers and fathers bring children in the two years and up category to play at the facilities provided in the park.

The lay of the land and natural surface drainage from the subdivision tapers into this area, and surface waters can transport sewerage as any Cohasset resident knows.

This is the problem! And who ever heard of a QUIET BALL GAME?

The writer would benefit by having 12 more homes in the area as I own a business directly related to consumers needs.

But little children do pick up objects off the ground and put them in their mouths. I for one don't need profits from this type of potential disaster.

Chester W. Magee

Happy Birthday To Us!

Etiquette would be aghast
To know that we had even asked
It's humbling, it's really hard
To have to hint for birthday cards.

The Cohasset Mariner became one year old Oct. 2.

We'll be celebrating that birthday in our Oct. 18 issue.

Of course a lot of people and I was not one of them, helped the Mariner on its way. In our Oct. 18 issue Judith Epstein, former community editor, has promised to relive some of the new paper's trials and tribulations.

But we'd also like some comments from the most important people who kept this newspaper growing month after month, never letting us down.

If you're a town government official the Mariner has probably been guilty more than once of ruining a favorite TV show or dinner in order to get important answers to important questions.

If you're a reader, like Frederick Howe, you've helped to keep us on our toes by pointing out mistakes. We know we tried hard to blame The Globe last week for one of our mistakes. But after checking, we concede that it was us.

We know you already wish us well, Cohasset. But just think of how you would feel if you had a birthday and no one even remembered to send a card.

Never A Successful Perc

To the Editor:

In your Sept. 27 issue, in the article entitled "Health Board Questions DEQE Approval", health board chairman Pompeo advises he has doubts about how the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) operates, referring to "a little technicality on 24 Surrey Drive."

It is presumed by this remark that Dr. Pompeo believes DEQE was being obstructive in the matter of lot 24 Surrey Drive. The board ok'd a variance for a septic system, due to the successful perc of lot 24 and no record of any septic failures in the Surrey-Old Coach area. DEQE denied the variance in a report enumerating nine points, where the variance did not meet the requirements of Title V of the State Code.

They advised the board verbally of their decision within 30 days, but since the board did not receive written notice within 30 days, despite what they knew to be the decision of the state, they granted the variance anyway.

I do not wish to harangue about the 12 days I spent in court because the board would not hear my legal arguments, but at least during the hearings we learned that there were several reported instances of septic problems on record at the board of health having to do with our area, and that lot #24 Surrey Drive has never had a successful perc test.

I leave it to your readership to decide who employed "a little technicality" in the matter of the septic variance granted lot 24, Surrey Drive.

Couldn't Agree More

To the Editor:

I would like to congratulate Sgt. Rhodes on his commentary and say I couldn't agree with him more. I do think all children are entitled to a mistake or two, as that is all part of growing up, but I don't think vandalism should be accepted as "the way things are now" or "what's to be expected of the unsupervised youths of today."

Maybe the parents would take more of an interest in what their children are doing if they had to pay for the damage and/or bear the shame of it being published in the papers.

I'm sure all the parents who try to teach their children to respect the property of others and all the people who have been vandalized would agree also.

Sincerely,
Betty Maree
Parker Avenue

P.S. Happy Birthday to the Mariner. I was one of the first three subscribers and enjoy every issue. Thank you.

So How Come Cohasset's In Norfolk ?

By Peter Barnicle

Elbridge Gerry is given credit (or blame) for the jigsaw piece of Massachusetts now known as Essex County.

That masterpiece of political skullduggery back in 1812 gained him lasting fame and a place in the dictionary. To gerrymander, according to the dictionary, is "to divide (a state, county, etc.) in an unnatural or unfair way, especially to give a political party an unfair advantage over its opponent."

Norfolk County, however, was established twenty years before Gov. Gerry brought into being a county some said looked like a salamander and others termed a "gerrymander."

In 1793 the General Court established Norfolk County and set its southern boundary to conform with the line which divided the old Massachusetts Bay Colony from Plymouth Colony. There is a marker on South Main Street indicating the boundary between the two colonies. The county line follows directly from Cohasset southwesterly to the Rhode Island line at Bellingham. A neat topographical job.

How come then Hingham and Hull, both north of that line, are a part of Plymouth County and Cohasset, hugging the ocean, is part of Norfolk, cut off from the rest of the county?

E. Victor Bigelow in his very informative "Narrative History of Cohasset" (1989) is strangely silent about how Cohasset came to be an enclave.

D. Hamilton Hurd in his "History of Norfolk County," published in 1884, devotes a chapter to each of the towns comprising Norfolk. Cohasset comes in for its share of accolades, but no mention is made of how the town ended up in Norfolk County.

About fifty years ago Elroy Thompson wrote "A History of Plymouth, Norfolk and Barnstable Counties" and came the closest to giving any sort of an explanation.

"It was on March 26, 1793," he wrote, "that the General Court of Massachusetts passed an act incorporating all the territory of Suffolk County, except Boston and Chelsea. The act took effect June 20, 1793. Dedham was the shire town. There was another act passed at the same session which expected the towns of Hingham and Hull and these towns were annexed to Plymouth County."

So much for Hingham and Hull — but what about Cohasset?

According to Thompson, when Suffolk County was established in 1643 it included Boston, Roxbury, Dorchester, Dedham, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham and Hull. At that time Cohasset was a precinct of Hingham and became a separate town in 1770.

Hingham and Hull apparently were not too happy at being a part of Norfolk and requested to re-annexed to Suffolk. The petition was turned down and finally in 1803 they joined Plymouth County.

"Cohasset was satisfied to be in Norfolk County and has remained a part of it ever since," Thompson says in brushing aside any suggestion of political maneuvering.

However, town records disclose that Cohasset was not satisfied.

If you want to dig into the handwritten records of Cohasset, you will find that the first inkling the town had of the proposed division came May 7, 1792, when the town fathers of Scituate sent a letter "respecting forming a new county partly out of the County of Suffolk and partly out of the County of Plymouth." On receipt of the letter Cohasset named Thomas Lothrop as its agent to confer with agents of other towns in the area for discussions on the proposal.

The next mention of the county question appears in the records under the date of May 20, 1793, two months after the legislature set up Norfolk County. At that time Lothrop was instructed to petition the General Court for reannexation to Suffolk "provided the towns from Roxbury along the sea coast petition for the same purpose."

Nothing came of the petition. Mention of Roxbury may seem odd, but in colonial times some of Cohasset's records wound up in the court at Roxbury.

Just why Cohasset opted to remain in Norfolk County, cut off from the shire town, 26 miles away, is still unanswered.

Chairman of Selectmen Arthur Clark has as good an explanation as any.

"I've heard the story," he says "that the people in town preferred to travel overland to Dedham. In those days there was no Route 128 and it was a long tedious trip. The people of Hingham and Hull said it was easier to go by boat to Quincy and then make the trip overland."

John Sullivan, director of operation for Norfolk County Commissioners, agreed with Clark and added "Norfolk was planning to build a new courthouse and Cohasset didn't want to get involved with the cost."

Both good reasons — until another one comes along.

Brookline is also separated from Norfolk — but that is their problem.

Twelve Permits Issued For New Wood Stoves

During the month of September Cohasset residents were issued a number of building permits for a variety of reasons.

It was interesting to note that 12 individuals were issued permits for stoves, one for solar panels and one for solar hot water. Which means as it gets colder we're getting more energy-conscious.

However, Building Inspector James Litchfield is a little concerned about the possibility for there being more stoves out there than there are permits for them. For some reason people feel it might cost them additional dollars should Litchfield be consulted.

Litchfield said "Ninety per cent of stoves are good stoves — some are foreign made and they're beautiful, they just don't have that inspection sticker." That doesn't mean Litchfield will automatically disallow stoves without inspection stickers.

"I'm more concerned about proper installation — not whether the stove is certified or not." He added that he will instruct residents on proper installation for the fee of $5.

The state recognizes five different laboratories aside from "UL," so if your stove has an approval, but it does not say "UL-APPROVED," your stove is probably still a good working stove.

If you're planning to install a stove in the near future, advise Litchfield of that fact. He's interested in seeing that you don't set fire to your home this year.

Litchfield can be reached at town hall by phone at 383-0017 from 8:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. or from 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., or by appointment. The office is open from 8:30 a.m. to 12 noon and from 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday-Friday.

We are happy to introduce you to another brand new trio of residents:

☐Robert and Pauline Byrnes of 39 Elm Court are the parents of a daughter, Jennifer McNeil, born Sept. 24 at South Shore Hospital. The Byrnes also have a son, Gregory, 12. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Malley and Mrs. Frances Byrnes, all of Cohasset.

☐Paul and Joan St. John are the parents of a son, Martin Paul, born Sept. 19 at St. Margaret's Hospital for Women. Martin joins three brothers, Mark, 20, Brian, 16, and Brendan, 13. grandparents are Daniel J. Flynn of Somerville, and Mrs. Paul St. John, Sr. of Quincy.

☐Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Sawchuk are the parents of a son, Aaron Davis, born Sept. 25 at South Shore Hospital and weighing in at 8 lbs. 15 ozs. They also have a son, Ryan, 2. Grandparents are Mrs. Olga Sawchuk of Cohasset, and visiting from Syracuse, New York, Mrs. Marie Davis.

☐Are you still wondering who's having a birthday? We unintentionally forgot to mention that it's us — The Mariner! We'll celebrate the occasion in the Oct. 18 issue — still would love to hear from you!

☐Cohasset's United Way Campaign Chairman for 1979, Dr. Michael Equi of 27 Wood Way, is also the Vice President of the Cohasset Rotary Club. President of the Rotary is Don Harrold. (We incorrectly elevated Dr. Equi to President last week.)

☐John O'Donnell of 72 Old Pasture Road was elected Vice President of the Builders Association of Greater Boston, an affiliate of the National Association of Home Builders.

☐Contributions are still needed to cover the cost of painting the Independence Gown Museum, a Cohasset Historical Society project. The Cohasset Garden Club contributed the recent landscaping and the Cohasset Village and Harbor Association has donated $100 towards the painting. Please help out by dropping some change in one of the cans distributed in stores throughout the village.

☐Despite a time change, cancelled location and picnic, and other unexpected snafuing, the Osgood School Square Dance, held on Sunday afternoon at the High School Gym, was an unexpected and fortuitous success. Four hundred Osgood families, teachers, and friends filled the gym floor and square danced, bunny-hopped, hokey-pokeyed, and did a bit of rocking. Caller Bill Bean of Wellesley knew just how to mix the dancing for the crowd that ranged in age from 6 mos. to adult, with the majority between the ages of 5 and 10.

Mary and Henry Brennock and their square dancing group, the Lofty Squares, demonstrated some fancy steps to everyone's envy. Lis Wyman, Osgood art teacher, and volunteers, Kerry and Donny O'Brien, Leah Palimeri, and Jill Nedrow decorated close to 100 little faces with grease paints. Special thanks to Mr. Bobbie Barrows who managed to find all the needed equipment with only one key!

RICHIE JONES AND SABRE on their way to the animal hospital in a police cruiser. Sabre was struck by a car.

☐Peter Abbott of 427 South Main St., and Patricia Garrity, have cultivated a prize-winning, all-organic garden in Scituate that is one of three finalists in the nationwide "First Annual Crockett's Victory Garden Contest" sponsored by Channel 2. Television viewers toured their garden, as well as the other two finalists' gardens, and will vote by mail to determine the winner. Votes should be cast by mailing a postcard to "The First Annual Victory Garden Contest," WGBH TV, 125 Western Ave., Boston, Mass. 02134. The winner will be chosen in late October and will appear on the Channel 2 show and will receive a trip to Great Britain. Get your votes in for Peter and Patricia!!

☐Winners in the recent Gallery of Homes of the South Shore inter-office sales contest were Claire Shields and Ruth Keefe of the Cohasset office of Dean & Hamilton, for most cooperative sales, and Jane Carr, of the same office, for highest year-to-date totals.

☐Six Cohasset couples spent a beautiful fall weekend in Nantucket a few weeks ago. They bought their "trip" at a Catholic Charities Auction held here in August. The weekenders were Joan and Philip Shockman, Thomas and Leslie Chamberlain, the William Kellmans, Bill and Joann Haynes, John and Peg Murphy, and Betty and Frank Colleton.

The Auction was held for the Catholic Charities of the Old Colony area (south of Boston to the Cape) and proceeds went into the Emergency Fund to help less fortunate people meet their fuel bills this winter.

Alicia Splenlinhauer and Joann Haynes were Chairmen of the evening, which included cocktails, hors d'oeuvres, dinner, and the auction. The Shockmans and Haynes, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Donahue, Mr. and Mrs. William Kellman, Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. John Bradley, Dr. and Mrs. Zigmunt Pozatek, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Conway (Mr. Conway was auctioneer), all of Cohasset, joined the Splenlinhauers and other guests.

☐The Cutty Hunk fish need not have worried when they heard that Messrs. Whorisky, Jordan, Good, and Russell were coming to visit. They didn't plan to catch many fish anyway!

Oktoberfest — It's Saturday!

The second annual Oktoberfest of the Cohasset Community Center will be held Saturday, Oct. 6, on the Cohasset Common from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The rain date is Monday, Oct. 8th. The day includes festivities for all ages.

There will be a special pumpkin judging along with games and rides for the children. Adult games, food table, flea market and beer will be the attractions for the adults. Authentic German food, costumes and a band will provide lots of Bavarian atmosphere.

Those in charge of the festival include Judy Volungis as general co-ordinator; Claudia Story, secretary; Jack Conroy, treasurer; Regina and Jerry Schultz, publicity; Steve Wigmore, electricity.

Also included are Kathy Stevens and Pat Conroy, baked goods; Laura and Jack Doherty, games; Rocco Laugelle, boat rides; Carol Martin, "Chinese-German" auction; John Kuhn, entertainment and pony rides; also Betsy Good, the banner; Nina Bird, flea market organization; Sue Fiore, posters; Joan Curelli, CCC flea market table; Peter O'Laughlin, pumpkin judging; Peg Laugelle, popcorn and penny candy; chief cooks Dan Volungis and John Periera; spirits, Jim Drysdale; Beth Goff, makeup magic; Winnie Kuhn and Diane Periera, fried dough; Carolyn and Dick Horn, cotton candy; Sharon Kilton, guessing games and Helen Snow, German cookies and customs.

Capping off the day will be antique auction consisting of a local partial estate. It will begin promptly at 6:30 p.m. in the Center.

Obituaries

Mildred MacDonald

Private funeral services will be held for Mrs. Mildred (Svedlund) MacDonald, 69, a former secretary, who died Sept. 29 at University Hospital in Boston.

She was a Cohasset resident for 29 years.

Mrs. MacDonald was born in Chicago.

She was a former secretary for Twentieth Century Fox in Boston and the Schaeffer, Pfizenmeier and Kirkland Textile Co. in Braintree.

She was a member of the Cohasset Gold Club, the Cohasset Second Congregational Church, and a former member of the Quincy Neighborhood Club and the Algonquin Club, Boston.

She leaves her husband, Roy C. MacDonald of Cohasset, three sons, Roy C. MacDonald Jr. of Libertyville, Ill., Douglas E. MacDonald of Norwell, and Bruce D. MacDonald of Hingham; a daughter, Jean E. Wichert of Hingham; two sisters, Mrs. Ethel Cedarleaf of Scituate and Lillian Zacheus of South Yarmouth; and nine grandchildren.

The Rev. Wallace Cedarleaf, Boston Harbor Chaplain and Mrs. MacDonald 's brother-in-law, will officate. Burial will be in Woodside Cemetery.

Donations may be made in lieu of flowers to the American Cancer Society, 142 Main St., Brockton.

Mary O'Connor

A funeral Mass was held yesterday in St. Anthony's Church for Mary E. O'Connor, 82, of Cohasset, a retired bookkeeper for Swift & Company of Boston, who died Sept 30 in Peter Bent Brigham Hospital.

Born in Cambridge, she lived in Arlington before moving to Cohasset 15 years ago.

A graduate of Cambridge schools, she worked at Swift & Co. for 42 years.

She leaves a sister, Catherine A. O'Connor of Cohasset; a brother, the Rev. Stephen J. O'Connor, CSSR, of West End, New Jersey; a nephew, Dr. Stephen O'Connor, and a niece, Margaret Keating, both of Cohasset.

The Recreation Report

FALL PROGRAM REGISTRATIONS

There are currently a number of students participating in a number of Fall Recreation Programs. New programs will be added from time to time and many more programs will be included in the winter schedule. Please watch local news media for program information and registration. Also, you may call the Recreation Office, at 383-6791 at any time for additional information.

OPEN GYM

The Cohasset High School gym (downstairs) will be open and supervised for boys on Tuesday evenings from 7-9 p.m. beginning Tuesday, Oct. 2. Open gym for girls will be Thursday evenings, beginning Thurs., Oct. 4 from 7-9 p.m. Open gym is for Grades 7-12.

Participants may drop in to play basketball or other activities of their choice during the indicated hours. There is no fee for this program. Sneakers must be worn, no shoes or bare feet will be allowed. Also, no food or beverage will be allowed in the gym.

Joseph Strazdes will be the Recreation Department supervisor for this program.

YOUTH SOCCER LEAGUE

There are presently over 260 participants playing soccer in the Recreation Department Youth Soccer Program. The program is designed for students from Grades 2-9 and is co-ordinated by Thomas Myers and a staff of adult, volunteer coaches. High School students have been employed to referee games.

Games are played each Saturday morning at the High School, Osgood, and Deer Hill fields.

RECREATIONAL SWIM

Registration will be accepted via phone, until Fri., Oct. 12, for the Recreational Swimming Program to be held at the MDC Pool, Weymouth, for seven consecutive weeks beginning Sat., Oct. 20.

Bus transportation will be provided and buses will leave the Town Hall parking lot on Saturdays, at 11:30 a.m. and return at 2 p.m. Pool hours will be from 12 noon to 1:30 p.m. each week.

The program is designed for all aged residents and ideal for families and seniors. There will be no lessons but rather a free swim period and the pool will be reserved for our group, (45 Cohasset residents) only. Younger children up to Grade 3 must be accompanied by an older sibling or adult who swims. The Recreation Department will provide a WSI Lifeguard and chaperone.

Campaign On To Register Cohasset Bikes!

By Police Sergeant John Rhodes

Did you know that under Chapter 85, section 11C, you could be arrested for refusing to state your name and address if stopped by a police officer for a bicycle rule violation?

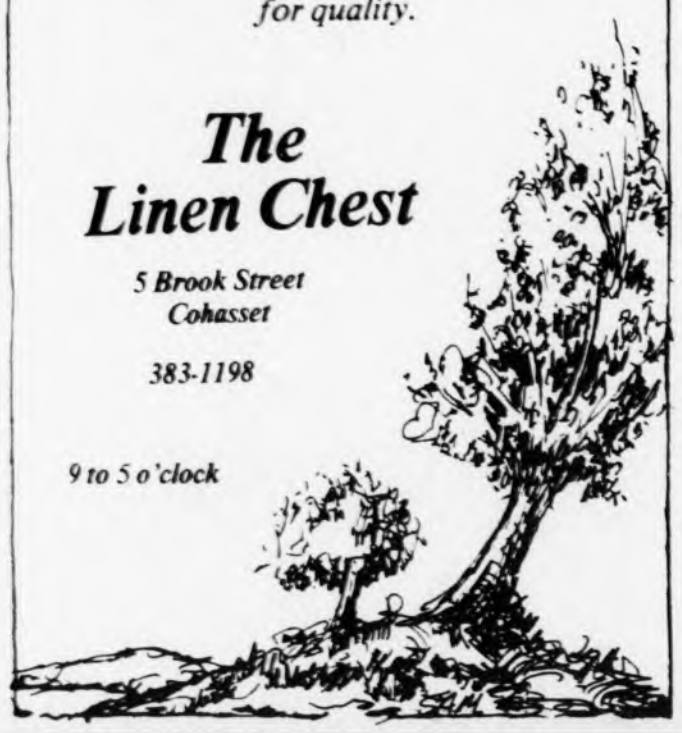
Did you know that at a Special Town Meeting, Nov. 13, 1978, under article 5, the Town of Cohasset voted to accept the provisions of Chapter 85, section 11A which requires that no resident of Cohasset operate a bicycle within the limits of Cohasset unless the bicycle is registered by the police department?

During the months of July and August 39 bicycles were stolen — only seven of that number were registered. Two of the seven registered bicycles were recovered. Six of the 32 non-registered bicycles were recovered. A total of 487 bicycles are registered in the town but bicycle owners in Cohasset are suspected to run in the thousands.

These are just two items of which many people in Cohasset may not be aware. In fact, the operation of bicycles, within the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, is governed almost as strictly as the operation of a motor vehicle. Chapter 85, section 11B, of the Massachusetts General Laws establishes the restrictions on bicycle operation and sets a penalty of up to $20 for each offense.

Further, if the operator is under 18 years of age, the bicycle may be impounded by the police department for a period not to exceed 15 days and any violation committed by a person less than 18 shall not be considered a criminal offense. This section goes on to make any violation non-criminal under certain circumstances.

All fines collected under this section shall be used by the Town for the development and implementation of bicycle programs. However, the Board of Selectmen have never had printed notices or tickets as required by law which makes it quite difficult to implement any type of enforcement.



Registration of bicycles may be done at police headquarters from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on any day which the Safety Officer is working. The fee is 25 cents per bicycle and the registration remains valid as long as the owner owns the bicycle. Make, model, serial number, style and color are required at the time of registration. While it is not required to bring the bicycle to the police station, it is preferred.

Failure to register a bicycle could subject the operator to a fine of $1 for each day the bicycle is not registered. Any additional information may be obtained by contacting Sergeant John J. Rhodes, III, Safety Officer, at the police station, 383-1212.

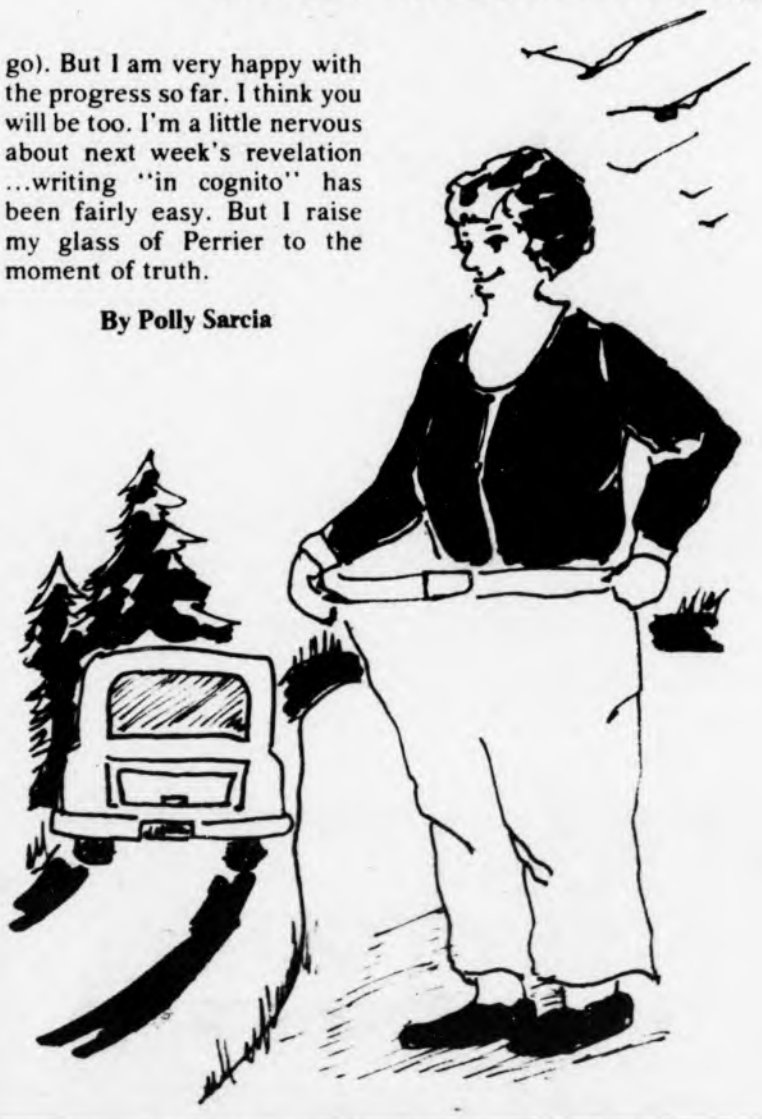
Trip Number 4 On The Scale Trail ...She Is Still Losing

[This is the fourth in what has now become a five part series, following the progress of the author as she undergoes an intensive weight loss program at Bodyworks in Scituate].

You don't have to be able to count to know that you're overweight...I really did plan to reveal myself in the fourth week, until I realized that, deadlines being what they are, my progress reports reach you a week late. Although this is the fourth, I have only been on the program for three weeks... so...rather than break the continuity of this fascinating saga in order to give you the full month's report, we (my understanding publisher and I) have decided to keep you in suspense just a little longer.

Enough of this explanation, you say? Just how much has the kid lost in three weeks? What were the results of the tape measure test? Good news, fellow fat fighters! FIFTEEN AND A HALF POUNDS — TEN INCHES! The high continues. As I sit here, with my jeans falling around my hips (oh joy! rapture!), I am feeling very proud of me...

This has been a week to try even the most dedicated of souls. Cars that won't start (requiring new water pumps and tailpipes), delivery men who keep you waiting all day (and then arrive at dinner time when you're trying to get ready to go out), a work schedule that seemed simple on Monday and impossible by Thursday. All of the aforementioned would previously have led me to an eating binge rivalling even Moll Flanders' most elaborate fantasies. It would have been, in my past life, at least a five pound week. So why was I not hungry? Why did the thought of consoling my frayed nerves with a gallon of heavenly hash and a large bag of popcorn never enter my mind?



I can only guess that it is because Carol and I have finally succeeded in reprogramming my thinking. I have learned that the extra food will not solve the problem. Rather, it will only add to the misery when I jump on the scale again. It would seem that I have at last shed the shackles of using food as a comfort. And, of course, there is the knowledge that I must face you, if not this week then next, and failure has become a fate worse than passing up the scones and champagne at last Sunday's brunch.

I won't try to pretend I don't miss my pack of velamints every day or that I wouldn't really love to pop just one black olive in my mouth while I make my husband's salad. But I can live without it... excuse me, while I pull the chicken out of the oven (so much chicken and fish lately that I have dreamed of sprouting water wings).

I wore a skirt today, for the first time in months. I felt so good. And this week, I did not have to hide behind the fig tree as I exercised. It's fun to watch my waist reappear. I am pleased to tell you that everyone else who started the program at around the same time as I did is doing beautifully too.

And so, dear readers, another losing week begins... I must warn you that the final results will not be earthshaking — or even final (since I have many more pounds to go). But I am very happy with the progress so far. I think you will be too. I'm a little nervous about next week's revelation ...writing "in cognito" has been fairly easy. But I raise my glass of Perrier to the moment of truth.

Presenting round four of the Mariner Brainteaser contest . . .

Answer the following 10 questions plus the tie-breaking bonus and send your answers to: Brainteasers, Mariner Newspapers, Box 682, Marshfield, Mass. 02050. Be certain they are postmarked by next Tuesday.

TEASERS, PART IV

1 — Pythagoras was asked how many students he had. He replied, "Half of them study mathematics, one-fourth of them study geometry, one seventh of them study natural science and there are three who don't study at all. How many students did he have?

2 — Can you name this American? One of eleven children he was a frail, sensitive youth. He was a lawyer, a businessman and served as translator and later minister to a European country. He also wrote biographies of George Washington and Christopher Columbus and stories of the "Far West." He is so well known that a "scene" from one of his stories is pictured on a U.S. postage stamp.

3 — What do the following have in common:

Joe Cotton, Ben Brush, George Smith, Paul Jones, Clyde Van Dusen?

4 — Three identical boxes, one containing two black marbles, one containing two white marbles and one containing one black and one white marble are placed side by side on a table. Originally each box bore a label describing its contents but somehow the lables got mixed up so that each one was incorrect. Now if, for some reason, it is desired to determine the contents of each box by a sampling process, that is by choosing one of the boxes, drawing blindly one of the marbles it contains and repeating this procedure as often as necessary until the contents of each box can be postively inferred — what is the most efficient way to sample in order to identify the contents of each box with the fewest draws?

5 — Reindeer were first spotted by a white man in Alaska in 1892. Can you tell us how they originally got to Alaska?

6 — More state flags!

A. Which state flag has the words Battle Born on it?

b. Which state flag has the words Oro y Plata on it?

7 — Shorty was found shot to death one morning and the police with better than average luck had three red-hot suspects behind bars by nightfall. That evening the men were questioned and made the following statements:

Buck: (1) I didn't do it. (2) I never say Joey before. (3) Sure, I knew Shorty.

Joey: (1) I didn't do it. (2) Buck and Tippy are both pals of mine. (3) Buck never killed anybody.

Tippy: (1) I didn't do it. (2) Buck lied when he said he's never seen Joey before. (3) I don't know who did it.

If one, and only one of each man's statements is false, and if one of the three men is actually quilty, who is the murderer?

8 — Tennis was once a regular event in the Olympic Games. However to amateur champions, winning at Forest Hills and Wimbledon meant much more than an Olympic gold medal and so tennis was discontinued as an Olympic sport. Tell us: in which Olympics did the last tennis match take place and which country won the gold medal?

9 — There is an eight-letter word that has five syllables when pronounced correctly. What is this word?

10 — Three men named Barbar, Cutler and Drake have wives named Beth, Dorothy and Louise. Each couple has a son, the names of the boys being Allan, Henry and Victor.

Drake is neither Louise's husband nor Henry's father.

Beth is neither Cutler's wife nor Allan's mother.

If Allan's father is either Cutler or Drake, then Louise is Victor's mother.

If Louise is Cutler's wife, Dorothy is not Allan's mother.

What is the name of each man's wife and son?

Bonus: Eddie Gaedel created a sensation the very first time he appeared in a professional sports game. Why? (in one sentence).

ANSWERS

Here are the answers to last week's questions:

1. 48. It is an indisputable scientific fact that wooden birds do not have auditory powers!

2. There

3. a. Frost does not fall, b. cabbage does not grow underground, c. Triangle is not a solid object, d. Dice have corners, not curves, e. Woodcock is a bird, f. Feasable is misspelled (ible)

4. The hare will have to make 700 jumps before the hound catches him.

5. First fold your arms over your chest, then pick up the ends of the string and pull. The knot will tie itself!

6. Mary Davis, Helen Jones and Dorothy Smith.

7. blintz, chintz ersatz, kibitz, quartz.

8. Touch the end of one bar to the center of the other. If there is a marked attraction, the one whose end is touching is the magnet. If not, the other one is. Reason: A magnet's power of attraction is most intense at its poles.

9. 1200.

By Joan Pinkham

Breathes there a ladies' aid society, Cub Scout den, or Little League team that hasn't relied on a bake sale to replenish the treasury? Luscious cakes, relishes and crusty breads for sale outside the local market or in the church hall are traditional in each small town, but are now being frowned upon by Big Brother. Into our very kitchen, our government now intrudes as the state legislature urges that a one-day permit be obtained from the local Board of Health for each food sale. Men who should be more concerned with bigger issues now suggest that the good cooks should observe the same rules as commercial bakeries which prohibit animals on the premises. Just think, if your kitten should scamper through your kitchen, these legislators would consider your bake sale contribution contaminated. Just for punishment, if the law is passed, we should deny them all a slice of this prize-winning quiche. Myron Litchfield first tasted it at the Winter St. home of Olive Dawson where he was having lunch one day and asked for this recipe for

ZUCCHINI QUICHE

1 lb. zucchini squash
1/4 lb. mushrooms
2 small onions
2 to 3 scallions, optional
2 cloves garlic
3 T butter
2 T dry sherry, or lemon juice
1 tsp. each of basil, thyme and oregano
1 tsp. ginger
salt and pepper to taste
3 eggs
2½ c. grated swiss cheese

Preheat over 325 degrees. Finely chop vegetables, slicing mushrooms if preferred. Press or mince garlic and saute in butter over low heat briefly, adding vegetables, but don't overcook, as they will be baked later. Add sherry, lemon and seasonings. Remove from heat. Beat eggs. Add cheese. Stir in vegetables. Grease a 9" pie plate and cover bottom and sides with toasted, fine bread crumbs. Pour in vegetable mix. Sprinkle with small amount of crumbs. Bake for 45 to 50 min., until set and lightly browned. Remove from oven and cool 10 min. before serving. This serves 6 to 8 as a main dish, or more as an hors 'douvres.

Bacon for breakfast, hot dogs for lunch, a cigarette with your coffee and boom! You're full of lethal chemicals. A constant chorus warns of poisons in every pleasure, risks in every convenience, peril in every pasttime. We are told to beware of nitrates in bacon, saccharine in soft drinks and cancer in our beer or Scotch. Life seems to be full of risks and we have choices to make at each turn. But when it comes to food such as a nice bowl of soup, surely we can just sit back and enjoy. Now, when orangy pumpkins adorn each roadside stand, Marjorie Jordan's recipe would do more good than harm.

PUMPKIN SOUP CARIBBEAN

8 T butter
6 chopped green onions
1 sliced onion
Juice of 1 lemon
2 cans pumpkin, or 2½ lb. diced pumpkin
2 cans chicken broth, or 5 c. chicken stock
1 c. light cream
2 T sherry
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. sugar
3 T flour

Melt 4T butter in large pot. Saute green and regular onions. Add pumpkin, chicken broth, lemon juice, sherry, salt and sugar. Boil, stirring. Simmer 10 min., or until pumpkin softens. Strain and return to pan. Blend flour with 2T butter. Add gradually to soup. Bring to boil, just until it thickens. Add seasonings and remaining butter and cream. Serve hot or cold with croutons. Serves 8. If possible, let stand in refrigerator for several days.

McKinnon Recieves Overwhelming Response To 3A Traffic Light Study

State Sen. Allan McKinnon reported this week that the response to his petition drive for synchronization of traffic signals along Route 3A has been "overwhelming."

Senator McKinnon said that well over 1000 petitions were distributed to motorists as they waited at red lights on Rte. 3A in North Weymouth last Thursday morning and afternoon. "People were extremely receptive, which indicates to me the high degree of frustration people experience travelling Route 3A every day," said McKinnon.

"We were astounded by the number of drivers who wanted more than one petition and by those who pulled their cars off the road just to get a copy," he said. "One young woman received her petition in the morning and stopped by to return it to us that afternoon — fully signed, and she wanted two more," he added.

In a letter accompanying the petitions, Senator McKinnon asked that motorists circulate them among their friends and neighbors and return them to his State House office. He will deliver them to Governor King.

"If we are to press the State Department of Public Works into action, we need thousands of signatures to present to the Governor, said McKinnon.

"I cannot stress enough how important it is for those who received the petitions to gather signatures and return them to me as soon as possible," he said.

McKinnon says he plans to contact civic and business organizations to enlist their help in the petition drive.

At The S.S. Arts Center

Photographers must enroll now to attend the one-day Photography Workshop with Peter Anderson that is being offered through the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset.

Anderson's career in photojournalism has taken him all over the world on assignments for both Time and Life; he has recorded scenes and people in the Near and Far East and in Mexico, Central America and South America. He has recently settled on the South Shore after working with Cornell Capa at the International Center for Photography in New York.

The one-day workshop is geared for advanced and professional photographers and is designed as a hands-on problem solving session. Photographers should bring prints, slides and negatives of past problems for critique and printing sessions using the student's own negatives.

The day will last from 10:30 to 4:30 with a 30-minute lunch break (bring your own!) and will end with English tea and muffins. It will take place Oct. 20 at Anderson's studio.

To enroll, telephone the Art Center office at 383-9548 Monday through Friday between noon and 4 p.m. for registration information and forms.

South Shore Twin Club In Pot Lunch

The South Shore Mothers of Twins and Triplets Club will hold its annual Pot Luck Supper Monday, Oct. 8 at 7:30 p.m. at the Eagles Hall in East Weymouth.

Featured speaker is Robert Fahey of the Counseling and Research Foundation in Quincy. He will discuss counseling through hypnosis and give a brief demonstration of his techniques.

For further information call Program Chairman June Hopgood at 826-5218.

PATCHES

The Dream Book

Mine came in the mail Tuesday. All day long I eyed it with anticipation. It's a high spot in my life when the catalogue arrives.

People who appreciate catalogues know what it means to get a big fat one in the mail. It isn't that we don't like shopping in person, browsing and sifting through sale items. But a catalogue has inherent qualities that on foot shopping doesn't.

It's a dream book, a wish reference. When a person of moderate means places herself on the couch after supper, dressed in her bathrobe, with a new catalogue in hand, she's got everything. Never mind money has to back up purchases. One can thumb through the book, heedless of costs, desiring and choosing at will.

We can scoff at fashions or admire them, circling a skirt here or a piece of jewelry there that we might like to consider at another time. There's no time crunch on a catalogue browser, no financial limitation because we're free to wish for everything in the idea book. Without going out the door you can see the startling skirt lengths, the off-one shoulder gowns and the return of the cagey black hose.

Frankly I'm grateful our expeditious society hasn't weeded out the book. I only wish Sears Roebuck hadn't eliminated me from their catalogue list. I did something wrong and was taken off. For one thing I went in person for some items. That's bad if you want to stay on the mailing list. Then they must have decided I'd let slip my catalogue purchases or failed to pick up the book at the counter. At any rate, Mrs. Sears, I'm sorry, because I sincerely miss my books from your stores even though you don't miss my paltry orders. And I haven't seen Monty Ward in ages.

The tradition of catalogues goes way back. My grandfather was a dedicated catalogue shopper, though he was admittedly unwilling to fill out the forms as requested. One time he wrote to the company and asked for a pair of undershorts as they were pictured on such and such a page as shown on the man "with a big H on his belly." He received his purchase.

And years before Barbie dolls were around my sister and I used to play catalogue. In those days you relied on your imagination for marvelous things to do and a new catalogue was a toy. The way it worked, you see, was one person had the left page of the book and the other had the right side. And you had to choose one, just one outfit of clothing on your side of the page. The challenge in the game came when you liked all the dresses or none of them. And the other person always seemed to have drawn better choices.

A catalogue seldom gets thrown out, at least not until it's been replaced by a new season's offerings. It's a resource book. One doesn't always want to know what a battery or a faucet or a window shade costs. But now and then we need to look up something to get an idea of goods available.

And it can be approached with different moods. There can even be a time someone fully intends to order something. That sets up a different, more earnest scouring of the book. It's really the hard part because there's the matter of poundage and postage to be dealt with.

The book I got this week is from Spiegel, the Christmas issue, the pretty one with gifts and toys. Personally I like to open directly to women's fashions and I'm not strong on pages of his and her longjohns. But there's plenty to marvel at among the vast assortment of men's gold chains and astounding shapes and sizes of calculators.

It's enough to gladden the heart of any cataloguer. We can swap them for those we don't have, like kids with comic books. And we can look forward to the after Christmas sale issue when they mark the good stuff down a bit.

What's more I got a card in my catalogue to give to a friend "so she can send for" the Christmas book. Isn't that grand? I could give those cards for Christmas gifts. As for myself, I'd like a card from Sears Roebuck, to make amends and reinstate myself on their catalogue lists.

BUYING/SELLING WITH COHASSET REALTORS

Tom Hamilton and Gifford Dean formed their partnership of Dean and Hamilton, Inc. just nine years ago.

This year the partnership grossed $8M in sales - thanks to a talented, hard-working staff of eight women.

Last December the local realtors teamed up with "Gallery of Homes" of the south shore and now they and some 65 associates are able to work out of offices in Hingham, Norwell, Marshfield, Kingston, Scituate and Cohasset - with offices planned to open in Hyannis and Falmouth on Cape Cod.

The majority of the 77 homes sold were in Cohasset, Tom said, but his staff had sales in just about all south shore towns.

"If you read all the financial papers we should have noticed a slow-down this year. But Cohasset has now been discovered by the executive transferee. Eight years ago only 20 percent of our business was from this group. Now it's more than 50 percent."

"We specialize in the executive transfer and are representatives for Home America and Meryl Lynch, so we receive many incoming referrals."

"We're selling them more commuting time for year-round vacation living," Tom said.

Although Dean and Hamilton has always tended towards underpricing, Tom said "Now we have to be careful. Many of our sellers think we're asking too much for their homes, but it's been exactly the opposite. We've been getting the prices."

In just two years Tom said Cohasset residents have realized more than a 40 percent quantum leap - "Which is a lot."

Five years ago the metro Boston market didn't concern itself with the south suburbs. "Now because of a lack of supply we've been able to move the prices of our houses up."

Average home sales at Dean and Hamilton are approximately $103,000. "The peak of the war babies are buying now. Over half of the people who buy homes have the husband and wife working full time with a joint income of over $50,000. They cannot afford to NOT buy a house."

He added that rentals are still in demand among singles, older citizens and young marrieds. But even more and more of these markets are becoming home buyers.

"The Cohasset tax rate is very attractive right now. But real estate prices in Cohasset are just allowing the home-owner to keep up with inflation at 13 percent. Cohasset homes are at 20 percent or slightly in excess of 20 percent inflation - which means homeowners are seven percent ahead of the game."

Tom Hamilton of Dean and Hamilton, Inc. with "$1M Girls" Julie Guild and Jane Carr. Ruth "Boo" Keefe didn't make the photo session but she also hit $1M in sales this year.

Certificates & Letters To Go To CHS Honor Role Students

For the first time in the history of Cohasset High School, students achieving high academic scores will get certificates and school letters, as a result of a suggestion made by School Supt. John Maloney Tuesday night.

The date of the awards cesremony has been tentatively planned for the end of the month. Ninety-two youths in grades 9-12 will be eligible for presentations. Students must have made the honor role each of four marking periods.

Youngsters in grades 7-12 are eligible for the annual assembly awards.

Maloney said a number of other towns have instituted the awards assembly. The school committee quickly voted to institute the awards assembly and congradulated Maloney for having suggested the idea.

The committee briefly discussesd the proosed legislation which would require town officials and municipal employees to disclose their finances to the public.

School Chairman Jack Langmaid said the committee could do one of three things: do nothing, write a letter to the ethics committee stating how horrendous the law would be or agree that with limitations it would be acceptable in parts.

Langmaid said if the law were voted the ethics committee should be concerned primarily with the conflict of interst portion of the issue for local officials.

Ms. Gjesteby said he onus should be on people doing business with the town. Ms. Walsh said "People feel differently. Several persons have said their spouses would force them to resign if they revealed their finances."

"It is an invasion of privacy," Ms. Gjesteby said. "We should maintain our rights."

School Supt. John Maloney said he felt the public's right to know should be balanced by some method.

The committee agreed it would write a letter regarding its feelings on the matter at its

Residents Ask For Sewer Resolution

Residents of this seacoast town appear to agree that a new sewerage treatment plant is a necessary and vital instrument which must be used in solving the town's present effluent problems.

But at least some residents have additional probing questions to ask regarding the sites (Whale Meadow and the Music Circus) which were selected by the sewer commissioners and which appear as articles on the Oct. 22 special town meeting warrant.

In a letter to selectmen last week Dr. Robert Sceery, Arnold Weeks and Prescott Cumner suggested that the Metcalf and Eddy engineer's report be reviewed and evaluated by another engineering firm, suggesting that special town meeting call for a resolution to that effect.

They also questioned the size of the plant as it pertains to areas needing to be sewered. The letter-writers said that in 1977 the engineers proposed a design flow of 1-2M gallons for the plant, but two years later decreased the area to be sewered, but not the size of the plant.

"The question remains — is the magnitude of the solution and its related factor of cost greater than what is needed to solve the problem?"

They also said that in the Fall/Winter of 1975-76 a marine study was done, but that no dye tests were done in the Sutton Rocks vicinity (the proposed general area of outfall;.

"Yet Metcalf and Eddy found the Sutton Rocks area suitable for the outfall location."

The writers also said that the commissioners did not wish to test outfall studies at Sutton Rocks in Nov. 20, 1978 — although Metcalf and Eddy had proposed doing further studies at a cost of $68,000.

Also, the use of biodiscus was questioned.

Still another letter appeared at the Mariner offices this week (see page 4) and the following questions were collected from citizens by com-

Learned Words From The Hermit Of Beechwood

By Chet Ellis

Whitney Woods is truly a beautiful and serene part of Cohasset. Summer or Winter, a stroll through its quiet paths is a welcome change from the usual routine. That is, it was until last week.

Last Thursday afternoon, inspired by the Mariner's recent article on old Henry Whitney's legacy to Cohasset, I decided to recharge my batteries by taking a short walk through the famous woods. Sauntering along the cool path I marvelled at the beauty of the subtle early fall colors and thought about what a terrific town Cohasset is. My euphoria was short lived.

Somewhere between Rooster Rock and Ode's Den I was startled by the figure of an old man crouched low behind a tree and looking straight at me. His gaze was so intense I froze in my tracks, unable to move or turn my eyes away.

"Psssst, hey fella," he creaked. "Are you from town?" With my heart in my throat and my adrenelin at high pressure I managed to squeak, "You mean Cohasset?"

"Of course I mean Cohasset. There ain't anywhere else is there? By the way, where d'ya live?" (a question typical of Cohasset first meetings).

"Tower Lane," I offered, "in Charlotte Tower's old house."

At the mention of such a venerable old Cohasset name his gaze began to soften. He snorted and took a few steps toward me.

Teacher Cuts At All Schools Possible

The school committee may drop four teachers at Osgood — one at Deer Hill, one at the High School and several aides due to declining school population at all three schools, School Committeewoman Patricia Walsh said Tuesday.

She also suggested looking into the spending of more money on the Osgood School library as "The Beechwood mothers are not sending their kids to the town library."

School Supt. John Maloney questioned whether the com-

"I've got a couple of questions for you fella. Have a seat and we'll chat for a bit."

Seeing that I wasn't going to escape this encounter, I scanned the area for a rock flat enough to sit upon, and, trying to act casual, I inquired; "What about you, who are you and are you from town?"

"I'm Bates Lincoln Pratt, otherwise known as the Hermit of Beechwood. I've lived up here in the woods ever since I was thrown out of the Yacht Club for conjuring in 1949. Anyway, I'll ask the questions, what about the new sewage plant they're talking about building?"

"You mean the proposed waste water treatment facility?" I corrected. "What about it?"

"We already got one, what d'ya need two for?" he demanded.

I countered. "We don't need two, we need one with greater capacity. The existing plant is too small for the present flow and quite a few areas in town are experiencing problems with seepage, smell and so forth. It's been a long term problems."

"What areas?" he asked with a squint.

"The Hillside, the Veterans development, Atlantic Ave., and certain parts of 3A."

"Aha! there you see," he exclaimed. "Put in a new plant and 3A will look like 42nd Street North! Then I'll never be able to sleep. I knew there was a catch to it. It's a plot!"

"Plot Schmot," I said. "The plant is to be sized only to handle those areas already approved by voters for sewer lines. However, any new design will permit additional capacity on a modular basis if approved in the future."

"A lot of fancy talk if you ask me. Anyway, it'll probably cost a fortune. Those things always do."

"Not really," I explained. "All we're being asked to approve at next week's town meeting is a site selection and to authorize phase II of the project, which is the sizing and design of a facility. Until we do that, we don't know the total cost. Besides, if we act now, the Feds and the State pick up 90 percent of design and construction costs.

Cohasset is responsible for only the balance of 10 percent and the operating expenses. The effect on the tax rate should be relatively small. Let me ask you a question since you don't seem too well informed. Have you read the Metcalf and Eddy report or the pamphlet the sewer commission has provided for the town meeting? It's all available at the commissions office on Elm St., the Library, or the town hall."

"I told you, I haven't been out of the woods since 1949 and I haven't attended a town meeting since the one in 1947 when they wanted to put a Chinese restaurant in Minot's Light. Fortunately, it fell through."

Feeling as if I had gained control of the situation, I said, "I don't want you to do anything rash, but maybe it's time you came out of the woods and re-involved yourself with the town. Let's face it, if Cohasset isn't able to correct the sanitary problem soon, the State will eventually force us to act, and we'll be stuck with 100 percent of the cost!"

Stroking his beard thoughtfully, he said, "Maybe it is time to get back in the act. You tell Bob James not to holler at me when I get up to talk at the town meeting and I'll think about it. By the way, when is it?"

"Monday night, October 22 and Bob James isn't the moderator these days. David Place does it now and he won't holler at you as long as you behave yourself."

With that he decided he'd had enough talk. As he started to make his exit he turned suddenly and with a look that always accompanies a bright idea he said, "Say fella, I just thought of something. If the town's really gonna have to build a plant why don't they put it over in back of the Music Circus...the town bought the land years ago for a school and it's right near the areas that are havin the problem."

Amazed, I exclaimed, "Would you believe that's..."

"See ya at the town meetin," he interupted, and disappeared into the forest.

Osgood School Needs Classroom Volunteers

The Joseph Osgood School teachers and Communications Council have been working together this fall to organize classroom volunteers for the school year.

Anyone in the community has always been welcome to come work with the children and assist teachers, however, mothers of school children have traditionally been the volunteers.

This year volunteer assistance is being sought from the community, and in particular, from senior citizens.

Volunteers are involved with the children in the classroom, playground, art room, gym, or for special events. Time can be scheduled every week, every two weeks, once a month, or occasionally — whatever suits the volunteer and the need.

Your help is earnestly welcome! If you are interested, please call Dottie Andrade, Volunteer Coordinator, 383-6357, Letitia Jordan, 383-0572, or Karin Bartow, 383-0572.

Other Osgood news: Open House Night at the school will be held on Thursday Oct. 25. Presentations by teachers will be madein the kindergarten and first grade from 7:30 to 8:15 p.m. and in Grades 2 and 3 from 8:15 to 9 p.m.

Teacher Cuts

mittee would cut teachers to any extreme as it would mean cutting elective courses at the high school. "Small classes are due mostly to scheduling conflicts."

Ms. Walsh pointed out that she and school committeewoman Martha Gjestby sent their children to school in classes of 30 plus.

Member Frank England suggested that an in-depth study be made of teachers who are proficient in more than one discipline and that consideration be given to those teachers with dual abilities.

"One of the highest paid teachers is teaching a class in photography," he said, adding that the committee should take a hard look at field trips. "I feel some are unnecessary."

Committeewoman Irene Brown said she didn't feel the high school population would diminish that greatly, but added that she was against spectator busses as they have gotten "Too expensive. I feel those who want to go should pay."

Ms. Gjesteby said she felt the committee should also look into cuttin down on teacher in-house workshops as there are so few new teachers who need the instructin.

School Supt. John Maloney responded to the matter by saying that the committee had held to its budget for the past four years. "We have made cuts in anticipation of a lower school population, unfortunately inflation is running away with us."

Finishing Touches On Horror House

The Cohasset JC's are doing it again . . . creating a horror show at 37 Beechwood Street which will scare the dickens out of everyone.

The Mariner went over to check things out last Thursday and ran into busy busy Jean Salvador, Sophomore Patty Walsh, Muriel Silvia, haunted house builder Tom Cook and JC President John Pereira and more individuals — all too busy to give us a clue as to what they have in store for us this year.

But here's what we noticed . . . lots of blackboard being assembled and Patty Walsh avidly reading horrifying books as "Satanism In America, The Occult Explosion" and "The Satan Trap."

This is Pereira's first Halloween as president of the JC's and his third haunted house. He said the JC's are still looking for helpers. Afterall, putting on a 12-day scare three hours a night could tire any monster.

If you'd like to submonster a couple of nights or can lend a hand now — all you have to do is show up some evening soon. Invariably, someone's always there.

Want to hear something panicky? There are NO MONSTERS at all this year . . . just creepy things.

In the Oct. 25 issue of the Mariner there will be a complete critical review of the house by a reporter who still closes her eyes in the Paragon Park riding funhouse. That should be revealing.

Oh yes — kids and adults alike are urged to donate their times to this horrifying cause which will help to sponsor JC civic activities throughout the year.

The address is 37 Beechwood Street. It will open for business Saturday, Oct. 20 and will run through Halloween Evening, Oct. 31 with the exception of Oct. 22, which is when the town will hold its special town meeting.

House hours are Monday-Friday from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., and Saturday from 6 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

Tickets will be sold at 5 p.m. on the night of the production you're attending. The JC's sell 1,000 tickets a night. The ticket which you purchase at 5 p.m. will give you an estimated time of tour that evening. You come back later, if you dare, for the actual experience.

Ticket prices have not yet been determined.

School Briefs...

Osgood School Principal Jack Creamer suggested to the committee Tuesday that the system-wide mathematics program be reviewed semi-annually on a regular basis.

"We need to look at SRA scores," he said.

Committeewoman Patricia Walsh said at least one teacher felt a review would cause an extra work load for teachers.

Creamer agreed that a review could have an impact on teachers, but said a valid test would show where students were strong and weak, giving the school department a realistic profile.

Although the metric system is used in textbooks, committee members agreed that metrics were still not being used around or in the home.

It was noted that a math club has been formed for competitions and that presently two teams compete.

Also, more computer work is being done in the juniorhigh school.

Next year textbooks will be updated. School Chairman Jack Langmaid questioned what budget implications the update would have.

The Metco program was discussed briefly, the committee expressing concern that it might not be able to keep up with the rising costs of the program.

Frank England said he felt the committee shouldn't be backing Metco with transportation costs rising.

The committee voted to adjourn future sessions no later than 11 p.m.

Only In Heaven

A few weeks ago we asked you how you felt about the proposed legislation that would entend to city and town officials the same financial-disclosure requirements that went into effect for state and county officials last year.

We received one written answer. From Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark.

Most of the verbal answers we received were also in the negative. But then we really didn't hear from more than a handful of you.

Here's how we feel about it.

If the proposed legislation should pass, we don't want the job of chief monitor. We already have that job. It's a tough one. Do you want to be the monitor? We doubt it. You don't even answer questionnaires. In fact the current Cohasset population minus one did not answer our questionnaire.

At any rate what the job of monitor-enforcer amounts to is being a super rat. Over the years the press has assumed that role, more or less. Perhaps what the proponents of this legislation are trying to tell us is that we are not doing our job.

We're against the legislation because deceivers of the general public never put their crimes on paper. People can continue to hide behind trusts, estates, banks, their cousins. It's easy.

But mostly we're against it because if it were to be a law it would be one which would go against the grain of most people. Therefore, most officials wouldn't report everything anyway. And when it was discovered they hadn't reported everything they would be automatically guilty. But of what?

With modification, we think the proposed legislation does have some merit. But we doubt that it could work anywhere but in Heaven. It is pretty difficult to legislate integrity.

We decided to call your attention to National Newspaper Week with an interesting Section 2 of the Mariner. The coarse, yellow paper you see might remind you of the fall spectrum. Actually, it's another sign of the newsprint shortage and all that was available from a supplier. We accepted it gratefully even if we

Looking Back

The Wreck Of St. John

By John Barnicle

The first Sunday I stood on the steps of the old St. Anthony's Church and looked across South Main St. at the rectory and spacious lawn beside it I had the feeling "I've been here before."

I wracked my brain but to no avail. It wasn't until some days later when the name Joe Shields came up in conversation that it all came back.

In the summer of 1949 I had accompanied Shields, then the Irish Consul at Boston, to represent the Irish Government at a mass marking the 100th anniversary of the wreck of the brig St. John off the Cohasset shore.

The mass was held on the lawn and Archbishop Cushing presided. Rt. Reve. Msgr. Thomas F. Delvin was pastor at the time.

The consul's remarks were based on some notes I had hurriedly put together. They must have been very sketchy and general because they were made from several fast telephone calls in a last minute effort to learn something about the St. John which was involved in one of the most tragic shipwrecks off our coast.

The ship, out of Galway, was carrying more than 100 immigrants fleeing the potato famine in Ireland. The vessel was in sight of Boston when it was caught in a raging northeast storm. Rather than attempt to enter Boston harbor the captain tried to follow another vessel along the coast to seek shelter in Cohasset harbor.

The leading ship made it safely, but the St. John, battered by howling winds and mountainous seas sought to anchor outside. The anchor chain dragged and about six o'clock on Sunday morning, Oct. 7, 1849, the vessel was pounded to pieces on Grampus Ledge. Ninety-nine persons lost their lives.

According to Captain Oliver, one of the 22 survivors, there were 120 people on board. However, the Boston Evening Transcript on Oct. 9, 1849, reported one of the survivors estimated that the vessel carried more than 150 people.

Bodies were strewn all along the shore, some still clinging to parts of the wreckage and some women tightly clasping dead infants in their arms.

Henry Thoreau in his "Cape Cod" gives a vivid description of the scene of tragedy. Thoreau was in Boston when first word of the wreck was received. Along with many others he made the trip down here on Monday and viewed the bodies and the pine boxes along the beaches.

The Transcript also reported that "William Elliott, Acting British Consul, went to Cohasset and will make all arrangements necessary for the survivors who, we understand, have found welcome among the hospitable people of Cohasset."

Most of the victims were buried at Central Cemetery and one of the town's ministers officiated at the mass burial. However, since all were from Ireland it was surmised most of them, if not all, were Catholics and surviving relatives and the few co-religionists in town asked for a Catholic service.

On Nov. 4, Rev. John Roddan, pastor of St. Mary's, West Quincy, celebrated a memorial mass in the high school for the victims of the wreck. This mass is said ot have given the impetous for a Catholic church in the town — a project which was finally realized in 1876.

In 1914 a large Celtic cross was erected at Central Cemetery on a knoll overlooking the ocean to commemorate the tragedy and loss of ninety-nine lives. The memorial, erected by the Ancient Order of Hibernians, was unveiled by Miss Theresa C. St. John of Cohasset.

According to Burtram J. Pratt's "Narrative History of Cohasset, Vol. II," Miss St. John's grandfather, James St. John, after the death of his first wife, married Mary Cole, one of the disaster survivors.

There is still some question as to the actual burial place of the victims. Several years ago a caretaker at the cemetery scoffed at the idea they are burried beneath the Celtic Cross.

"That's all solid rock," he said. "If they are buried anywhere it is down closer to the shore."

Credit To Chief

To the Editor:

We love the "new" police log!

Last week a member of your staff told us that Police Chief Feola is not required by law to allow The Mariner to publish his log. She added that many surrounding area police chiefs deny the press access to their logs.

We think it's a credit to Chief Feola for allowing that publication.

The entries are reflective of a small town, its characters, its animal life — and all the rest of us who invariably call the police department with our little snits. Most of those snits, I might add, we could handle ourselves.

Although it sometimes makes us sound like a soap opera, I suppose the police log is really a kind of commentary on us.

By the way — Happy Birthday!

Sewer Alternatives Discussed

Letters

To the Editor:

Are you confused about how or what to vote for — in regards to the sewer problem? The Sewer Commissioners have been unable to unanimously agree on what site or what to do.

Was the Metcalf and Eddy Report so bad that they can't agree? Why has #1 location been changed? Various Engineering Firms, without any studys, have picked Whale Meadow as No. 1 choice, James Brook Plant No. 2 choice, and the Music Circus Site was at the bottom of the list.

Let's look at what happens when we look at each alternative.

A. The Music Circus has the highest cost. The land is the only land left to meet state requirements for any school expansion or facilities use in Cohasset. Taking any of this land, will spoil it for other uses.

Many times Sewer Plants have problems, the Music Circus Site is surrounded by hills on two sides and locks in any odor problems which will stay and go all over the Town of Cohasset. Without this air change we could have problems.

Fig. 9-11 (Metcalf and Eddy report) shows the Music Circus Site that the engineers picked. The Commissioners changed this to the Smith Place Site. We object that the plant location was not the one the engineers picked.

If you look at the report, if the Music Circus Site is chosen, you will have no choice of type of treatment, because of the closeness of the schools. B10 Disk type treatment has been chosen. To our knowledge Metcalf and Eddy has never built one, nor has any municipality had any. There are lots of problems with this type of treatment, and it must have a building over it — the air must be heated that is coming into the plant, and you must have primary setting tanks.

Do you want something no one else has? Do you want to be first? The distance from this site to the ocean is the longest we will have to pump from the present plant to the circus then to the ocean. You have to pay the operation and maintainance cost.

B. The Whale Meadow Site is close to the ocean for an outfall. It is surrounded by water on three sides, has good air movement, can be screened so no one will see it in the event of problems the odor will not go over the whole town, but out to sea. This was the No.. 1 site.

Most important the site is not located near the schools, so we can use the tried andtru activated sludge type treatment that 99 per cent of the plants use in this state.

C. Your third choice is not mentioned — to do something to stop the existing fines of up to $10,000 a day. To stop this, we would have to appropriate money for one, a revaluation of the Metcalf and Eddy Report, which would cost $15,000 to $20,000. Number Two, study the exact location of the outfall, which would cost approximately $30,000. This will have to be done in the next step. Many yachtsmen and fishermen will not vote on the design until they know where the outfall is.

This study would include outfall, plant locations, type treatment, expansion of present plant, or updating of present plant. As long as a study is going on, no fines will be given.

We believe this is unnecessary, but people have lost faith in this project, and the deci-

Ninth Grade Humanities At Cohasset High

By Virginia Burbank

Five years ago, and not a minute too soon, I discovered the futility of the effort of "vacuum" teaching and the devastating effects of courses given and taken in isolation.

It was then, with the support of the administration at Cohasset High School, that we established the "newest of the oldest" programs in the history of education, and called it "Humanities."

A team of two social studies teachers and two English teachers sat down together and dedicated themselves to the goal of teaching the humanities, not only through books, lectures, and films, but through experience.

And teaching the humanities through experience has made all the difference.

Our team sees humanities as the study of man through the study of his creations and his accomplishments: classical literature, history, art, and music. We work together to provide as many opportunities as possible for our students to get to know man (and themselves) by experiencing his creations.

By exposing them to man's finest creations (and his follies as well) they will learn to think, to discern, to communicate, and to act.

In its sixth year, the Humanities Program is truly beginning to mature. There are five members of the team now: Joseph Bouchard and Kurt Rever are the social studies teachers and Maureen Alcott, Frances Cronin, and myself are the English teachers.

The humanities classes are scheduled in such a way that we can concentrate on a reinforcement of learning. They are back-to-back classes, one English and one social studies. In this way, a transfer of learning and of study habits can take place more naturally.

A student could, for example, read a piece of literature such as Oedipus Rex during his English class and then proceed immediately to his social studies class where the teacher might be waiting to teach him about the Royal House of Thebes, (of which Oedipus was a member).

Our chief concern is to encourage our ninth graders to enter into history and literature, and to convince them that reading and studying is not enough, although it must be done first in order to appreciate and enjoy the luxury of experiencing knowledge, or as we call it, "celebrating" knowledge.

Because of this philosophy, there is a great emphasis placed on speaking and on acting. There is also a demand for student talent — all kinds of talent: artistic, musical, dramatic, technical, and of course the most highly respected talent of all — writing.

The course is rooted in the history of Western Civilization, and we travel through the history of Western Man together. The story of Abraham's travels is treated as literature in English class, but the very next period in social studies class Abraham's travels become a geography lesson and out come the maps of the Mid-East.

The psalms as poetry in English class become a lesson on the persecution and cry of the Jews, and later on a combined unit on Man's Humanity to Man Throughout the Ages.

The Book of Genesis treated as narrative literature in English class becomes a history of a family, a clan, a people in social studies.

At year-end we celebrate what we have learned. We might put together an "Ancient Day Celebration" in which each of us participates according to his or her talent, as writer, director, carpenter, technician, singer, dancer, acrobat, juggler, actor, equestrian, or musician.

A ninth grader might choose to create a dance to accompany the reading of a psalm or a sonnet, while another might choose to compose a flute solo to be played in the background.

For many years I was totally unaware of the fact that social studies teacher, Ms. Louise McCue, on the other side of the school, was teaching a unit on Rome, always during the month of October. I, quite blissfully and quite regularly, presented a unit on Shakespeare's Julius Caesar to the same group of students five months later in March.

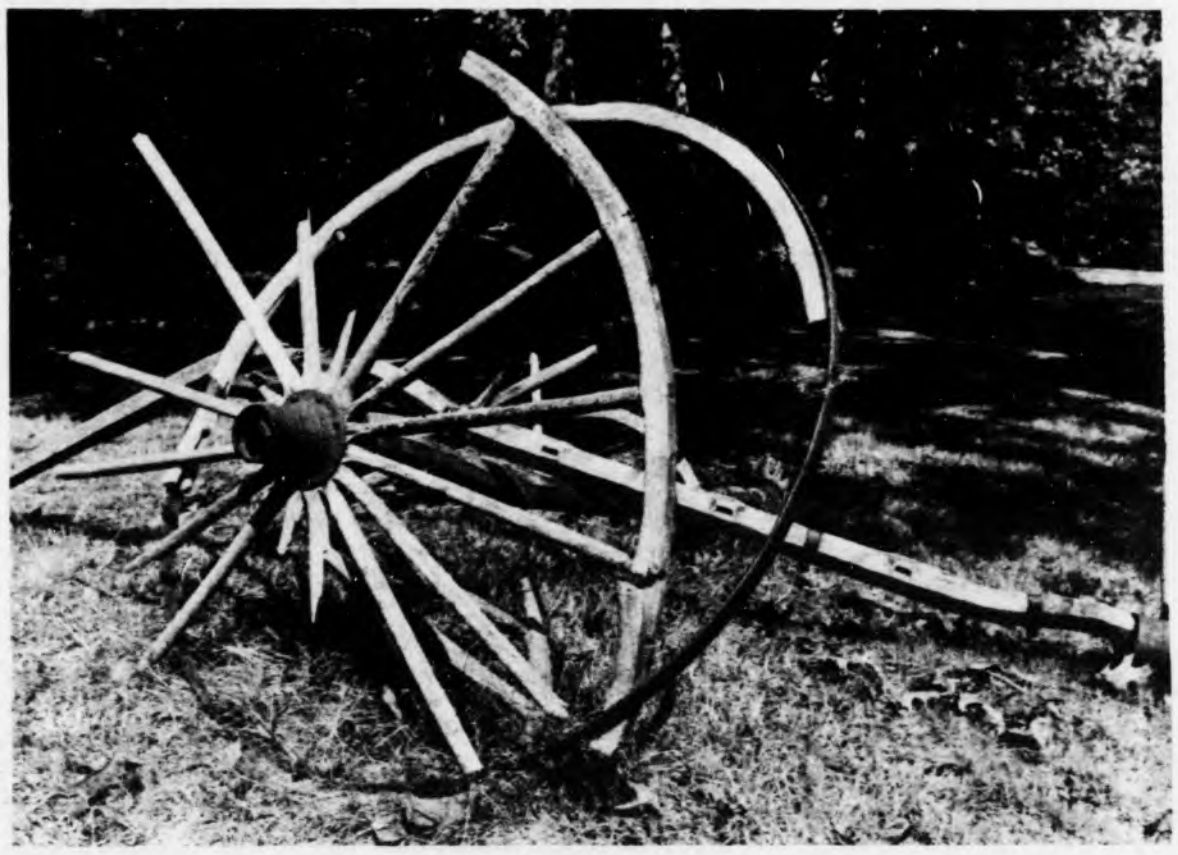
Neither of us knew what the other was doing, let alone what time of year she was doing it, and surprisingly, the students (God bless them) never complained, never even uttered a sigh at the waste of time, the duplication of effort, the needless repetition, or the downright boredom of spending almost half of the school year in Rome. Perhaps they caught up on some much needed sleep!

Fortunately, the story has a happy ending. Ms. McCue and I joined forces, and with the aid of two other teachers, created The Ninth Grade Humanities Program. All four of us put our heads together and began to build units of participatory learning: an Ancient Egyptian unit, an Ancient Hebrew unit, a Classical Greek unit, a Classical Rome unit, a Medieval unit, and a Renaissance unit.

It has been a very exciting experience for me these past five years to be a part of such a living, pulsating, energetic body, and in addition to all of this, look at the time we save! Teaching Rome, now, takes half the time, and we reap double the harvest.

While our students rehearse the play, Julius Caesar, Ms. McCue stops the action momentarily to explain the significance of the scene historically. Viewing the whole scene through the eyes of a history teacher, she can explain the special role of the patrician and the plebian in Rome society.

She can explain the subtle workings of the Roman Senate in order to make the assassination scene more meaningful; she can even help them with the choice of the appropriate and even authentic costumes for their respective social levels.



The history lesson is far more valid in this setting, far more stimulating for a youngster, and far more memorable through drama. It is so deadly to overlap aimlessly; it is so essential to reinforce sensitively. Is it any wonder that our students turn away in disgust at the hollow repetition that echoes throughout the classrooms of the world?

Elementaryschools in general, by the very nature of their internal structure, rarely commit this capital sin of fragmentation of learning and of course whoever heard of an elementary school that didn't encourage active participation of its children?

It is we secondary school teachers that have to take a second look at these two educational maladies. Society in general and secondary teachers in particular are convinced, for some reason, that participation in learning, like recess, is for children — that at the magic age of thirteen, education becomes a sedentary process. It is as if any jarring movement of the limbs might do irreparable damage to the brain.

There is no question in my mind that the humanities can teach us to plan, to think, to discern, and to model our lives after the planners, the thinkers, the discerners that we read and study about in our humanities classes.

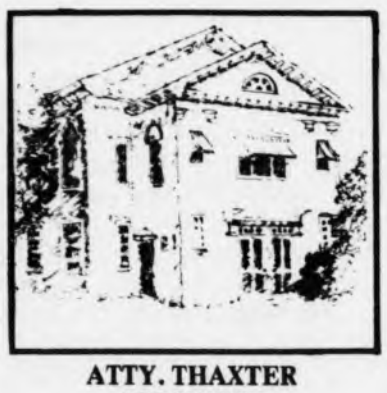
DUCT LINE HEARING

At 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 17 a public hearing will be held the selectmen's office regarding an underground duct line to be installed by Eastern Edison on Atlantic Avenue near Hobart Lane.

J. LITCHFIELD RAISE

Selectmen noted last week that Building Inspector James Litchfield will have to wait until annual town meeting 1980 in order to receive retroactive money due him as a result of reclassification.



The board had proposed putting an article in the special town meeting warrant regarding the same but were advised by town counsel that it could not be included, as the reclassification came after annual town meeting and was not a budget article.

COMPLAINT

Last week Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark said that the week previous he had "nearly choked to death when he took off his undershirt upon retiring. He said it was because of Selectmen Rocco Laugelles's "STOGIES."

AS OF DEC. 1, 1979

Upon the above date, full-time, part time or temporary licensed inspectors of wires will not be eligible for hire within their own towns.

ATTY. THAXTER APPOINTED

Selectmen unanimously voted to appoint Town Counsel Blake Thaxter as negotiator for the town to serve the remainder of the unexpired term of Atty. Charles Humphries, who recently left town counsel's firm. Negotiators are paid $45 - $75 an hour. Selectmen said they wished Atty. Thaxter to handle the negotiations personally.

ENERGY REPRESENTATIVE

High School Business Manager John Raftery has agreed to act as energy representative for the town. Raftery is a Hull resident.

BATES BUILDING

As a result of having found additional deterioration, selectmen voted to paint the Bates building the same color and use the excess money for repairs.

BAY SCALLOP SEEDING

A request to spend $100 to seed bay scallops in Little Harbor, Cat Dam on Nichols Road, Sandy Beach and Back River on Border Street has been referred to the shellfish warden.

According to Richard Barrow who made the request, volunteers have already pledged to seed the areas.

Calling Young Writers

Children need books! The call is out for children of all ages to write a poem or story, draw or paint a picture, or compose music or a song on why children need books.

Winners will be announced during Children's Book Week in November. Prizes for creativity include publication in a booklet and exhibition for the winning work at the library.

The Boston Public Library, the Boston Globe and the Eastern Massachusetts Regional Library System are sponsoring this creative competition.

Entry blanks may be picked up in the children's room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

munity liason Jan Daggett. The commissioners and Metcalf and Eddy plan to respond to the questions at a public meeting tentatively scheduled for Oct. 18.

QUESTIONS RAISED

1. What would be the projected construction costs for a 500,000 gpd sewage treatment plant?

2. From an engineering perspective what is the basic difference or differences between the Whale Meadow site and the so-called Music Circus site? How do these differences impact the costs of building at either of these two sites?

3a. Are there any state and/or federal laws or regulations now in effect or pending which would prevent the building of a new sewage treatment facility in Jacobs Meadow?

3b. Are there any such laws now in effect or pending which could make the approval procedure difficult in regard to building such a facility at this stie? At the Whale Meadow site? At the Music Circus site?

4. Under Step II would further tests be conducted at the proposed outfall site (Sutton Rocks vicinity?). If so, what kinds of tests should these be? What should be the approximate costs? At what time of the year should such testing be conducted?

5. Can an outfall from the Music Circus site go under Little Harbor, under Sandy Beach and then into deep ocean water?

6. Why is not a cost for biodiscus included under alternative 2 on page 1-8-42 of the report?

7. In the report biodiscus are shown to possess risks such as questionable equipment reliability due to their recent development and are said to be affected by low temperatures — a common occurrence in New England.

Further, the report states that biodiscus are recommended due to the factors of electricity costs, equipment noise and a possible aerosol effect. Is enclosure possible?

8. Would boidiscus be the recommended process for the Whale Meadow site?

9. If either of the special town meeting articles pertaining to the siting of the facility are approved by the town does the appropriated money have to be used for designing a plant using the biodiscus process?

10. Why is it necessary to take 10 acres at the Music Circus site when only four acres are needed?

11. Does the 10-acre Music Circus site include the original plant location site laid out by Metcalf and Eddy and subsequently shown at the public hearing on June 28, 1978? If not, why? Is there any engineering reason that this original site could not be used? Is there any environmental reason?

12. The report states that the criteria for a public water supply is met in the Bound Brook basin. Does this statement apply at the present time? Has there been any recent testing of these waters? Are any of these waters being polluted by malfunctioning septic systems?

13. What kinds of soil are best suited for septic systems? How much area is needed for a properly built septic system? How does poor drainage in an area affect septic systems?

14. Specifically, what kind of citizen input if acknowledged during Stepp II?

Parking In Cohasset Village

By Larry Fone

Parking in Cohasset Village is very convenient most of the time. Often you can park in front of the shop you want to visit; some shops have their own parking (The Linen Chest in back, the News and In Stitches in front).

For longer stays in the village our parking way is only 200 feet from Main St. with convenient walkways at Cards & Shards and Stage Coach Way at the Green House restaurant.

For all day parking there is room for many cars at the Town Hall parking lot and for bus commuters we encourage you to use this space. (Cohasset commuters only, please).

The merchants in the village urge everyone to use our plentiful parking with your purchase needs in mind but remember your neighbor too!

Main St. parking is limited to two hours. It is at a premium and I would suggest less time if possible for we have many shops who have customers who want to get in and out quickly . . . the Colonial Pharmacy, Scotts Liquors and Curtis Compact.

Our town is one of the few left with no metered parking. Let's keep it that way.

I urge you all to visit and support the South Shore Art Center with their continuous exhibits and classes. This week the David Sharpe Gallery is having a special reception for Gita Packer, sculptor, Friday evening, Oct. 12th, 7:30-10 p.m. This Gallery is a nice cultural addition to the village. Stop in and say hello to Martha and David Sharpe.

sion making of the Board.

We will have a new Board of Commissioners in April, who will have more common sense and be able to make decisions. Fifteen million dollars is a lot of money.

D. The minutes of the meeting are public records, after signing, and may be read at the Plant Office. A check of these records, will show more time was spent on discussing resigning from the Board of Sewer Commissioners at several meetings, and only one meeting was held on plant locations.

If the Commissioners feel so strong about resigning from the Board, maybe we, as the poor public, should wait until April when we have a new Board, who will have confidence in itself and we will have confidence in them.

E. The ten acre Music Circus Site does not include the original plant location site laid out by Metcalf & Eddy, and subsequently shown at the public hearing on June 28, 1978, why not? The new site is really the Smith Place Site, which was not even in the final report nor was there any meeting held on that site.

Toys For Tots

The Cohasset Community Center has set us a Toys for Tots Christmas Barrel at the center on the Common.

For the past year the Marine Corps, which sponsors the Toys for Tots program, has been donating work time weekends to help improve the center in various ways. The collection barrel is a community center effort to repay the Marines for their services.

New and good used or repairable toys are welcomed. If possible, new toys or clothing should be gift-wrapped with a label on the outside telling what sex and what age child the gift should go to.

☐Fifteen Cohasset High School seniors have received national recognition from the National Merit Scholarship Corp., it was announced by Richard Streeter, Principal. Edward Bear, Christopher Williams, and David Zobel, members of the Class of 1980, were named as semi-finalists and are in contention for further honors.

The other students receiving recognition are: John Ayer, Heather Carroll, Gregg Daggett, Peter Drago, William Duffy, Michele Fahey, Nils Gjesteby, Bonnie McClay, James McNeill, Alexandra Mullen, and Paul Plante. A 1979 graduate in the CHS Early Graduation Program, Linda Ryan, was also a commended student.

☐There is an interesting organization in town that not many people know about and that's just the way its members like it! (No pictures or lengthy story, please!) They call themselves the "Old Goats" — a lively herd of 35 retired fellows — who meet religiously, twice a month for luncheon, conversation, conviviality, companionship, and, some say, to give their wives a break! They have been going strong for about 13 years. Although they are a civic-minded group (regular Town Meeting attenders, in strength!), they don't discuss politics, women, or anything else the President (currently, Fred Howe) doesn't deem appropriate.

According to past President, Paul Blackmur, the President "can do just about anything he wants! In fact, he's stuck with it until he finds a replacement!" (Actually there is a nominating committee that helps him out.)

While some representatives of this informal, friendly group may try to claim secrecy in responding "none of your business" to inquiries about club business and topics of discussion, there is too bright a twinkle in the eye for one to believe that anything more devious than jolly, good fun, takes place twice a month at Hugo's Lighthouse!

Miscues Cost Skippers, Fall To E. Bridgewater

By Rob Tis

The Skippers lost on Saturday to a strong East Bridgewater team. Cohasset was hurt by mistakes and lack of depth. Four fumbles and two interceptions were the real killers. They allowed the undefeated Vikings to streak out to a 28-0 lead. The Skippers had 8 men starting both ways. This put them in a tough situation when fullback/linebacker Jay McNeil was injured (concussion).

Pat Duffy ran under a long pass from Tim Libby. To complete a 64-yard pass play and to attain the Skippers only touchdown. One bright spot was that the touchdown was the first scored on the Vikings defense this season.

As J.T. Price and Joe McCullough, two of Cohasset's sturdy linebackers put it, "Our first good practice was Thursday. We are always getting better. This Saturday we play Norwell at home, it should be a good game."

Although the Skippers lost, which deflates their record to 1-3, some of the younger players showed a lot of promise and a good hope for the future. These were sophomores Joe Becker and Pat Conlan who both played hardnosed games as did junior Sandy Ayer.

THE SCHEDULE

Sept. 15, Martha's Vineyard, won 13-0.

Sept. 22, Hull, lost 18-6.

Sept. 29, Middleboro, lost 47-8

Oct. 6, East Bridgewater, lost 28-6

Oct. 13, Norwell, home 1:30 p.m.

Oct. 20, OPEN

Oct. 27, Abington, home 1:30 p.m.

BOYS CROSS COUNTRY

The lankey long distance runners from Cohasset will soon be getting their glory. On Thursday the Cross Country team lifted its record to 3-0 after trouncing Norwell 33-41.

As Mike Ellis, one of the Skipper's premier runners, put it, "We have a great deal of depth this season. Usually we can get a cluster of 5 or 6 in the top 10." He also added, "This gives us the ability to score very well against good teams."

It is true that Cohasset has a lot of depth this year. Usually the team is scraping casual joggers off the street but this year they have in excess of 15 runners.

Coach Tom O'Neil is the enthusiastic mentor of the team and runs a tough practice. Rarely a day goes by when you don't see a pack of tired runners pounding the pavement.

The meets are on Tuesdays and Thursdays and if you come up to the high school, look for co-captains Scott Benbow and Mike Kearney, and also Chris McNabb, Mike Ellis, David Zobel, Dave McCarthy, Charlie Tebbets, Jamie Replogile, Carl Gandaborn and Nills Gjesteby, all who will finish in the top 10.

I'm sure, as one jovial member of the team said, "That we'll be 'running' up the score quite a bit this season."

Jack MacLean takes a breather.

12 Advance In Punt, Pass & Kick

Twelve Cohasset students and five Scituate students were place-makers in the Cohasset Motors, Inc. punt, pass and kick competition held last Friday.

Three Cohasset students took first place in the 9, 12 and 13-year group and two Scituate students took first place in the 10 and 11 year old groups.

The first place winners competed in a zone competition last Saturday in Braintree. Winners of that competition will be announced in next week's Mariner.

RESULTS

In the 8-year old category Marc Kanton of Marshfield took first place, Cohasset students Michael Meers and Derek Tonneson placed second and third respectively.

In the 9-year old group Todd Fitzpatrick of Cohasset placed first, with Cohasset students Chris Froio and Peter Sandblom coming in second and third.

Eleven-year old Thomas Snelders of Scituate took first in his age group, with Scituate students Michael Cooney and Stephen Griffin coming in second and third.

Twelve-year old David Stover of Cohasset came in first in his group with Cohasset student Billy McKenna placing second and Marshfield student Scott Kanton coming in third.

In the 13-year old group Cohasset student Joe Hoffman came in first, Scituate student Erick Svensen second, and Brian Ramsay of Cohasset came in third.

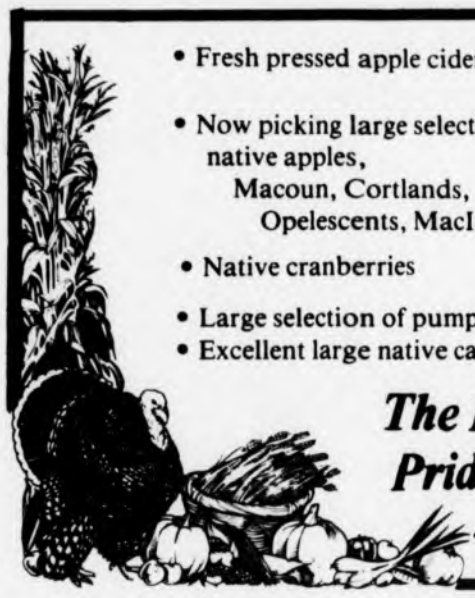
Blind-Raising At Lothrop House



☐Cohasset Historical Society members and friends met at Lothrop House, the Society's future headquarters, on Sunday afternoon to put blinds up on the front of the house and to install a new brass Nantucket knocker on the front door. The blind-raising was rained out, but the group of about 30 moved inside the early Federal building for refreshments and a look at the partially completed interior.

Mr. Arnold Weeks, Treasurer of the Lothrop Trustees, put the knocker into place, with unanimous approval of those present. The knocker is a gift from Robert and Marge Benson.

The exterior of the house has been repaired and painted and the interior is under renovation. A new heating system will be installed soon and after re-wiring, the decorating will begin. Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker Jr., President of the Historical Society, says the downstairs front rooms will be ready for a Christmas party in December, to be sponsored by the Cohasset Village and Harbor Association, as both an inaugural and a fund-raiser for continuing renovations.

The Cohasset Historical Society has owned the house for four years. It was built in 1823 by Caleb Lothrop and remained in family hands until 10 years ago. It will serve as a working museum and a center for all historical activities in town, including a library, archives, and research center.

Crane Has Cohasset Money

State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane announced today that more than ten thousand Massachusetts taxpayers will be receiving $10.8 million in unclaimed monies.

Today the Treasurer's office has published the names of the owners of lost or forgotten checking accounts, savings accounts, cashier's checks, money orders, and other funds in newspapers throughout the Commonwealth. The accounts range in size from $25 to $60,000 with thousands of accounts over one hundred dollars.

"I am pleased that state government has this opportunity to return this record-breaking windfall to overburdened Massachusetts taxpayers," Treasurer Crane stated.

Anyone seeing his or her name in the paper should contact the Treasurer's office at 617-727-1667, 1318, 1598, 1326, or 1-800-632-8144 or One Ashburton Place, Twelfth Floor, Boston, Massachusetts 02108.

Claims will be processed weekdays from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. The Treasurer's office will then direct the owners to the banks, insurance companies, savings and loan associations or other financial organizations that are holding the monies.

All monies remaining unclaimed after Novermber 1, 1979 will be turned over to the Treasurer's office for safe keeping until the lawful owner can be located. These monies are permanently held in trust until claimed. However, all Massachusetts residents receive the benefit of their use since they are kept in the general fund.

As a result of investigations started two years ago by the Treasurer's auditors, unclaimed money reports have increased from $2.5 million to $10.8 million this year. "We are just scratching the surface, tens of millions of dollars remain to be reported," Treasurer Crane said.

Super Pumpkin

FATTEST PUMPKIN IN COHASSET grown by Corrina Minnar.

The Strangest Call Ever Was About Arthur

This story probably never appeared in the Cohasset Police Log. It's the kind of story town officials make sure is hushed up. You know how they are.

Peggy Ramsay, selectmen's secretary, said one day she received a call from a nameless Cohasset resident who alleged she had just observed Arthur Clark disrobing on South Main Street — "And he ought to be ashamed!"

Peggy wanted to laugh, but couldn't.

The woman didn't stop with telling Peggy. She proceeded to call Arthur's wife, and various other town officials who might have had an interest in the incident.

It seems that Arthur, who is also a plumber, was called to a job on South Main. When he arrived there he put coveralls over his street clothes and went to work.

After the job was finished he stood in front of his truck and took off his overalls. From where the woman observed him, it looked as if he were disrobing. Not daring to take a peek closer, she started dialing everywhere.

When we confronted Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark about the incident he said — "Yep, and next time I'm going to wear pink leotards."

We did not lightly decide to publish this story. We discussed the usefullness of the information to the community and whether it was right to carry the name. We weighed the value of a fully informed community against the risk of rumor in the absence of a story. In the end we couldn't decide which was funnier — the truth or the rumor. So we printed them both.

Peggy Ramsay was interviewed this week because she's a selectman/people observer — one of the best.

A graduate of Colby College in Maine, she opted for a family over an airlines career 19 years ago. Then in the early 1970's when her youngest child, Brian, entered school, she was hired by the selectmen. Neither she nor they have ever regretted their decision.

In many towns the board of selectmen has tremendous turnover, in one neighboring town the board had 10 changes of individuals in just 9 months.

However, in over eight years Peggy has had only one change — that's when Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray left the board to run for the legislature and Selectman Rocco Laugelle took over the seat.

Peggy takes basic, factual minutes. The selectmen have never asked for complete transcripts of anything but public hearing type of things which might be necessary for court.

"If they want complete transcripts they'll have to stop telling funny stories and jokes," she said.

Peggy's job at Town Hall is 25 per cent telephone calls from the state, and business as usual.

"I get one call a day from someone who is displeased with a decision the selectmen have made, who feels they haven't done enough, or says they have neglected to do anything.

"There are always the chronic complainers — you know who they are. You need a tremendous amount of patience when dealing with the public," she admitted.

In this town she said "The noisiest issues, the loudest most heated ones, are over dogs and fishermen. Tempers can flare over a bitten child. But I've never yet heard one dog owner say he's sorry . . ."

Peggy recalled the time Arthur and Henry Ainsley decided to make a motion for no smoking in the selectmen's room. The motion was directed against the entire press (who all smoked at the time), Peggy herself and then selectwoman Mary Jeanette Murray.

When we called Rep. Murray to verify the story, she said "The no smoking lasted three weeks. I told them at the time: 'You may think I talk a lot now, wait 'til I can't smoke, I'll talk a lot more.' After three weeks, they couldn't stand it and voted smoking back in."

The previous incident made Rep. Murray recall the time, years ago, when selectmen met in the morning. "George McLaughlin was chairman of the board. One morning a woman walked into our meeting, shut off the lights, pulled the venetian blinds up, then sat down and lectured us on energy saving.

"George said: 'My dear woman, get up and put that light on immediately.' The woman did so, then proceeded to ask us to purchase lady bugs and praying mantises to eat other bugs."

One night Rep. Murray and Henry Ainsley got calls about a loud concert on the common. Henry volunteered to go down, then proceeded to walk into a motorcycle group.

"Hey, great, man — huh?" the leader said.

Henry said "Yes."

The motorcycle leader said "Some guy just said we have to turn down the music — WE'LL FIND HIM."

"It was me," Henry said weakly.

The Henry explained why he was there and went into a long dissertation about his job, all the things he has to do in the town as selectmen and why the volume had to be turned down.

The group leader said: "Man, what a rotten job."

As the motorcycles revved up their cycles in preparation to leave, Henry thought to himself, 'Oh no, more noise.' But just then the group leader yelled to the others:

"Everybody go out of here quietly."

Aside from all the above, Peggy said there are also the town characters, which include the press, who pop in and out of Town Hall. "Every day is different — that's what makes the job so interesting."

When Peggy first arrived on the scene "I was very nervous and thin-skinned, but I've learned how to develop thick skin, and take criticism. I've learned from Arthur not to let things bother me. Now his thick skin's rubbed off on me."

Peggy Ramsay

What To Do About School Closings

The School Supt. John Maloney, has been confronted in the past by a number of early morning decisions regarding the need to close schools due to inclement weather or adverse road conditions.

Such decisions, which are difficult to make and controversial at best, must be made by 6:30 a.m., to that a NO SCHOOL announcement can be made. This is an early hour and does not always allow an opportunity to fully determine the effects of a pre-dawn storm upon the town or school department.

In an effort to maintain our published school calendar and to afford the highway department an opportunity for additional time for either plowing or sanding the roads, we are designing a plan for a one hour delayed opening of schools.

This plan was designed last year and never used. Therefore, it could result in some confusion on the first or second time it is implemented. If it is determined that this plan can be safely used, rather than cancel classes for the day, the Superintendent of Schools will notify all appropriate personnel and the radio stations by 6:30 a.m. that a one hour delayed opening of schools will take place on that date.

This simply means that the high school will open at 8:45 a.m. with the first bus children being picked up at approximately 8:15 a.m.; the Deer Hill School will open at 9:15 a.m. with the first bus children being picked up at approximately 8:40 a.m.; and the Joseph Osgood will open at 9:40 with the first bus children being picked up at 9:15 a.m.

All schools will close at their regular times on that date — high school at 1:54 p.m., Deer Hill School at 2:20 p.m., and Joseph Osgood at 2:40 p.m. All non-teaching staff employees will report to the schools at their regular time, and meals will be served in the schools at the customary time during the noon lunch period. Please note that all times used in this notice are prevailing local times on date of use.

I am asking parents to remember that a delayed opening of schools will be specifically announced as such. Please listen carefully to any of the following radio stations starting at 6:30 a.m. for announcements either to cancel classes for the day or for a one hour delay in opening: WJDA; WBZ; WCVB; WEEI; WOKW; and WBCN.

Please do not telephone the Superintendent, building principals, school bus contractor, police department, or radio stations to ask about NO SCHOOL announcements. Each of the foregoing must make and receive many important telephone calls of an emergency nature, and your telephone call only interferes with the performace of their duty at a critical time in the morning.

Once again, I am making a strong plea to ask you to condition yourself to listen to the radio/T.V. stations for possible NO SCHOOL announcements.

Should you have any questions regarding the contents of this notice, please feel free to contact the building principal of the school your child attends for further clarification.

Community Center Report

Cohasset proprietors Mr. and Mrs. Robert Turner of Carousel Antiques and Jane Flynn from the Wicker Valise will address the community center decorating seminar to be held 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 16 at the center.

They will speak on antique finishings, collectibles, primitive rugs and current market trends.

A small admission fee will be charged for these seminars. The topic for the final presentations are "Oriental Rugs" displayed, described and discussed by Al Methune of Araby Rugs in Boston and "Wall Stenciling" illustrated and presented by Nancy Clapp in the stencilled function room of her own creation at the center.

The later two seminars will be presented Tuesday, Oct. 23 and Tuesday, Oct. 30, respectively. Call the center at 383-0088 from 9 a.m. to noon to register.

BREAD WORKSHOP

"Breads of Several Nations" is the theme Liz Glasfeld will present in her ample country kitchen at 35 Rust Way on Thursday, Oct. 18 from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

Working in teams of two, participants knead dough, leaving it ready to rise and bake at home. Tea is served, and several of Liz's baked creations are sampled.

This is the third time Liz has graciously agreed to present this workshop for the center. A few openings remain. Call 383-0088 to register.

The Oktoberfest Was Festive...And Productive

It was designed to have something for everyone and it did. Boat rides (a 10-speed bike was rescued from the Common Duck Pond, anyone missing the same should call the Cohasset Community Center), pony rides, an auction for the older crowd, food, wine, beer, flea market tables, popcorn, cotton candy.

"I wouldn't miss the Oktoberfest," Kevin Kimball of Saratoga Springs, N.Y. said. His response was typical of those in attendance from both near and far.

Community Center President Jack Doherty said the center earned over $2,000 with receipts still coming in from the day-long event. "Over 100 persons donated their time to make it a success."

Liz and Philip Holtaus and Miss Amanda (with her face painted white with lively Indian V's) said they've been coming to the Oktoberfest for three years. "We came when it was nothing," Liz remarked. Young Matthew was trying to catch a mid-morning nap in his stroller and usually has nothing to say anyway.

Peter O'Laughlin, also known as "The Great Pumpkin" judged the pumpkin contest. Peter has a fantastic garden and also plays baseball. He arrived at the scene of the contest, as he does every year, in overalls and a straw hat.

The following awards were given to kids with exceptionally-decorated pumpkins (actually, everyone who enters wins).

Best carved, Sara Bishop; Best Decorated, Julie Hougavine, first and Nichole Gamft second.

Best Home Grown, Karin Minnar, first and Tara Volungis and Dean Volungis, second and third respectively.

Pumpkin With The Most Heart, Laurie Doherty. Peter was able to tell because he listened to its heart with a stethoscope.

Pumpkin Which Most Resembled A Cohasset Selectman, Meka-Mari Laugelle, first and Allison Doherty, second. Both pumpkins looked exactly like Selectman Rocco Laugelle. He does have a zucchini nose.

Most Happy Fellow, Bert and Ernie pumpkins by Tara and Dean Volungis (they tied).

Best Shaped Pumpkin, Karen Story, first and Tom Stevens, second.

Most Original, Mary Hurley, first and Elizabeth Hurley, second. Both of these pumpkins were imaginatively colored with crayons.

Special Awards were given to Heather Doherty and Kristina Stevens for sensitivity in design.

John Wagner holds oriental rug as auctioneer Bob Turner calls for a higher bid.

Three Riding Club Members Compete

Three riding club members competed at the state 4-H show held in Spencer recently.

Jen Hanlon on her horse Gaye Sur received eighth place in the fitting and showmanship class and a fourth and fifth place in two pleasure classes. Lisa Powers on Bay Bailey's Doll received a second place in fitting and showmanship, and a second in hunt seat equitation. Julie Hoogeveen on her horse Danny Boy received an eighth placein trail pony.

Four riders competed at the New England Dressage Association's fall show in Medfield. Christine Rowe on her horse Jacob competed in training level dressage tests one and two.

Marley Rabstejnek on her horse Shabon received a third in her training level two test. Amy Murphy on her horse Dhakhmar's Sultan won second place in first level test one and fifth place in training level test one.

Sally Davenport, president of the club, won a third place in training level test one on Rasunn Shalif and a fifth in training level test two. Resident Elizabeth Conklin on her horse Chester won first place in the training level one test, sixth place in training level three test, and sixth place in first level test one.

Around Town

☐At a recent annual sponsor's meeting of the Ponkapoag Pony Club Elizabeth Conklin, C-2, C-3 level was given citations for best attendance record and best top score on a written test.

Rating certificates were given to Lee Pfaffman, D-2; and Elizabeth Conklin, Amy Murphy and Marley Rabstejnek, all C-2. Instructor Kristine Bobo received a national rating of A.

Belated congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Kennedy of 44 James Lane who celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary on Aug. 21. About 60 of their close friends and relatives joined Henry and Elinor on Sunday, Aug. 19 at the Second Congregational Church for an afternoon reception and tea given by their son and his wife, Donald and Mary Kennedy of 41 Stevens Lane.

☐A surprise guest was 87 year old Miss Patience Bowen of Hyde Park who recalled how, as a young girl of 11, she had waited anxiously "by the front stairs whil Elinor was being born upstairs."

As a boy of 16, "Grampa" (as he is affectionately known by all his young friends), joined the U.S. Infantry and fought in France during World War I. Elinor, a graduate of Wheelock College and a retired Cohasset elementary schoolteacher, met Bunny — "townie" — shortly after her arrival in Cohasset some 55 years ago.

Many more years of happiness to you both!

Gerda Cahill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cahill Jr. of 24 Button Wood Lane, and Barbara Curelli, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Curelli or Cohasset arrived at Simmons College Aug. 27 for a week of orientation before classes began Sept. 5. New students participated in such activities as a picnic on the Boston Common and disco roller skating, as well as advising sessions and campus tours. Both girls are graduates of Cohasset High School.

Goodby To Mr. Goodbar... The Revelation

By Polly Sarcia a.k.a. Nancy Young

Well, folks, this is it — the moment of truth. I have spent the better part of this evening doing a myriad of insignificant chores, calling several friends for half hour conversations and generally trying to avoid sitting down at this typewriter — it is so difficult to express just how I am feeling as this journalistic confession comes to an end.

Some of you who know me well have been living through this experience with me on an almost daily basis — no doubt you will be relieved that the series is over; many of you who have seen me racing around Scituate or hanging out at the laundromat may be surprised at my identity — at least now you know why I have been spotted recently in baggy pants; and to those of you (the vast majority) who still have no idea of who I am, I will simply say — 'thanks for taking an interest'.

I am amazed at the response to these articles; it has been interesting, to say the least, to have anonymously heard people talking about Polly Sarcia in public places. One woman was convinced that Polly did not really have a weight problem, that she was just one of those naturally thin women who always wanted to lose another 10 pounds; in fact, she was sure that the whole thing was just a very poor joke perpetrated by a six-foot-tall size eight with a low opinion of chubby ladies.

As you can now see, however, the problem is very real, and still not completely solved.

And yet, the results after a month are joyously encouraging — 17 pounds have gone the way of all flesh (I hit a plateau last week, and it took five days to fall off); the total inch loss, overall, so far, is 19½ (my son was 19½ inches at birth, if you can see the connection) — I am not quite ready for the horizontally striped shirt yet, but the goal seems so much more attainable now.

Lots of nice things have been happening to me since I started this liberation of the real, skinny me — I've gotten a new hairstyle (thank you Barbara); I've purchased a new, smaller car to go with my (almost) new smaller image (thanks mom and dad and the bank), and I'm looking forward to a super weekend at the Sheraton Ocean Park Inn in Eastham, where they've opened a new resort health spa.

This was suggested to me by the Bodyworks staff - a sort of mini-vacation where I will still be supervised eating-wise and be able to take part in an exciting new program of exercise, swimming and general fitness — the first vacation that will not spell culinary disaster for me. (now if I could just stop smoking.)

I want to repeat here that there is a whole group of very lovely women who are working very hard to get themselves back in shape, and their success has been at least as great as mine. Their motivation and encouragement have been invaluable, and I salute them all.

To Carol and the two Nancys and Betty at Bodyworks, I must say thanks for the concern and guidance — they, however, must put up with me for still longer, as I push on in the quest for a slimmer silhouette (can you take it, ladies?) And I also want to say a big thank you to my patient publisher (he could use a little body working himself. Ed.) for his enthusiastic support of this first "Lois Lane" effort of mine (not to mention the whole Mariner staff, who have had my daily progress reports crammed down their throats ad nauseum). At the risk of embarrassing them, I have to include my family in these sentiments of gratitude — it hasn't been easy eating chicken six times a week.

And lastly, I have to thank you readers (both of you!) — for without the necessity of reporting to you, I just don't know if I could have maintained the willpower. Writing

Group Ice Skating Lessons

Group recreational ice skating lessons for adults and young adults, ages 12 and up at 15 M..D.C. rinks under the direction of the Bay State Ice Skating School, Inc. will offer classes for beginner, intermediate and advanced levels. They will meet once a week, 7 to 7:50 p.m. on Tuesdays or Thursdays depending on the rink location. Students may wear either figure or hockey skates. The nine week series, with instructional guide, is $37.50, payable at registration which is held in Weymouth, Tuesday, Oct. 16, first class Tues., Oct. 23, 843-5707, and Quincy, Thurs., Oct. 18, first class Thurs., Oct. 25, 843-5707.

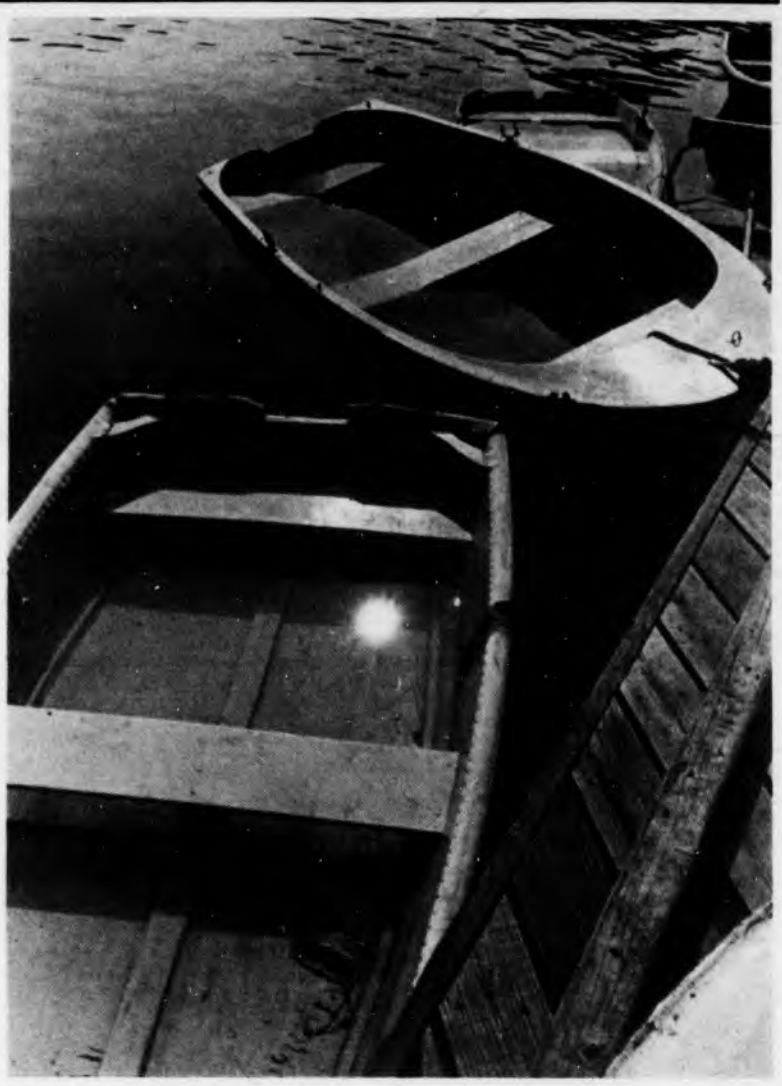
"Diamond Studs" At Massasoit

'Diamond Studs,' a whimsical musical comedy set in the old west will be the second production of the Massasoit Community College Little Theater Company Nov. 2, 3, and 4.

Curtain call on Friday and Saturday will be 8 p.m. with the Sunday show starting at 7 p.m.

The entire play is set in a western saloon during the escapades of the notorious Jesse James gang. When not singing and dancing, the James family with their cohorts the infamous Younger Brothers, exchange quick, witty dialogue.

Tickets are available at the Student Activities Office on the Massasoit campus and box office.



License Plate Regulations

Motor Vehicles Registrar Richard McLaughlin has ruled as illegal the decorative license plates being sold which carry various names or designs, and on which the word "Massachusetts" appears.
of the law, if the name "Massachusetts" appears on it.

The illegal plates are usually printed in green or white background, similar to the current series, which is displayed on the rear of the vehicle.

McLaughlin said he has determined the use of the non-registry issued special decorative plate is in violation

Motor vehicle owners are free to use the front space for a decorative plate if they wish, the Registrar said, but they may not attach a plate which can be mistaken for an officially manufactured and issued plate.

By Joan Pinkham

There's nothing quite as pleasant as a rainy Saturday when the house fills up with luscious odors. Since sunny weekends seem to be few and far between lately, baking a few beautiful loaves of bread gives one a real sense of satisfaction. Kneading is a great way to work out frustrations, for when you're wrist-deep in dough and surrounded by savory smells, you forget the weather outside. Any type of weather usually finds Leila Imbrogna in her kitchen, her favorite place to be. Though she has over a hundred recipe books, most of her creations are original, as is her

SAUSAGE BREAD

1¾ 1¼ c. warm milk
1/2 c. margarine or butter
3 room-temperature eggs
2/3 c. sugar
2 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. mace
2 pkg. dired yeast
5¾ to 6¼ c. King Arthur flour

Warm milk. Add sugar and yeast and let sit in bowl you are going to knead in for 10 min. Meantime, mix melted shortening, eggs, salt, mace and 1 c. flour. Beat for 2 min. with electric mixer. Slowly add rest of flour. Knead 15 min. Place in greased bowl, cover and let rise until double in size. Punch down and divide in two pieces. Roll out on floured surface about 13 x 9''. Brush surface with mixture of egg and milk. Filling:

8 sweet Italian sausages, remove meat from skin
1 green pepper, chopped
1 small onion, chopped
3 cloves garlic, optional

Saute until sausage is done, but not too dry. Spread sausage mixture on dough and roll up as in a jelly roll. Cut into six 3'' pieces and stand up in tube or bundt pan, greased. Cover, let rise until double and brush with metled butter. Bake 20 min. at 350 degrees. This makes two loaves. When baked, turn out on serving plate and each of the six pieces is like a large, individual roll.

If you're one of those hardy souls who is up with the birds, so well organized that while the coffee is perking, you're planning what you'll serve for Sunday lunch, then give a thought to Virginia Fisher's latest hit with her family. Beer bread is a recipe she clipped from the Los Angeles Times, billed as "the latest rage in California." This makes two loaves, which is good, for Ginny says one was gone long before lunch ever arrived. The recipe goes like this for

BEER BREAD

12 oz. can beer
3 c. self-rising flour, mixed with
2 T sugar

Add beer 1/3 at a time, mix and turn batter into two 7 x 3½'' pans. Drizzle 1/2 c. butter over top before baking in a 240 over for 50 min. If self-rising flour isn't on your shelf, add 3 3/4 tsp. baking powder and 3/4 tsp. salt to your regular flour.

* * *

White flour, white sugar and white bread are the three worst offenders in our diet and do nothing for us nutritionally. More and more people apparently want flour that is without additives, unbleached. not enriched and complete with the fiber contained in entire wheat kernels. Here is Edith Mitchell's

SHREDDED WHEAT BREAD

2 c. boiling water
2 shredded wheat biscuits
2 tsp. salt
1/3 c. sugar
1/3 c. molasses
3 T of shortening

When above mixture is lukewarm, add 1 yeast cake dissolved in 1/2 c. warm water. Add approx. 6 c. flour. Mix, but don't knead. Let rise until double. Punch down. Knead and shape in biscuits or bread. Let rise again. Bake approx. 35 min. at 350 degrees, depending on size of loaf, or biscuits.

BUYING/SELLING WITH COHASSET REALTORS

COHASSET VILLAGE REALTY, INC.

Cohasset Village Realty, Inc. was founded in 1968, and has been located at 5 South Main Street since 1971. In 1973 John Hobbs became the principal of the firm ably assisted by a full time staff of five.

Cohasset Village Realty, Inc., long active in the residential sales market of the South Shore is particularly proud of its success in assisting first time buyers in their quest to own their own homes. "All too often potential buyers feel unnecessarily discouraged either about their own purchasing ability, or just as importantly about the perceived lack of smaller homes in our area.

This concern is shared by the more mature, or 'empty nester' buyer as well," said Hobbs. "With two such properties in Cohasset under agreement in the last ten days by Cohasset Village Realty the all too common perception of only homes which are very expensive being available in this area is put asunder," Hobbs continued.

John Hobbs

By the same token, the smaller home has achieved a much higher appreciation rate, due largely to the fact that such homes have rarely been built in recent years, among other reasons because of high land costs. Yet it is the smaller home today that is in greater demand due to energy costs and smaller families as well as the great number of buyers who simply prefer a smaller home.

It is this fact, says Hobbs, that has lead in part to rapid growth in another area of Cohasset Village Realty's business, namely the sale and management of income producing and investment property. In, fact, over the last few months in particular, buyer's have been investing in smaller single family houses to rent out, as well as other types of property, not only as an investment vehicle which has stayed well ahead of inflation, but for operating income, and the many tax advantages that are available to the owner as well.

John Hobbs and Cohasset Village Realty, Inc. extend a warm welcome to all, whether actively seeking or selling real estate or simply desirous of exploring possibilities.

EUGENE K. PRICE REALTOR

As a former "corporate dropout" in 1972, realtor "Gene" Price knows the disappointment a corporate executive feels when told he must transfer from the south shore area. He also knows that he'll get many of those transferred executives back as customers.

"People who move to the south shore area don't wish to leave. There is a large movement ot houses within south shore towns — residents changing from smaller to larger homes as their needs change and vice versa."

Price came to Cohasset from New York in 1970. In 1972 he was told that his field would require returning to New York. "But the kids were entrenched here. I'd always been a saleman and I wanted to eliminate the transfer possibility for all time. So at 35 I started Lamplighter Realty in Norwell," he said.

"I bought the complex from Walter Hall." Then in 1978, upon discovering that much of his realty business was in his hometown and immediate surrounding areas, Price moved his offices to Cohasset and South Main Street. He now leases the Norwell complex to various businesses.

Price, along with his schoolteacher wife Marie, who sells real estate in the summer months, Joyce Hoffman of Cohasset and Kay Gaetani of Scituate sell the image of a small, caring company offering personal service, and individual attention to a buyer's needs.

Although according to his wife he swims "like a washing machine," Price is nonetheless president of the Cohasset Swim Center and a member of its board of trustees. He is also president of the Cohasset Village and Harbor Association, a member of the recreation commission and the Grid Iron Club and out-going president of St. Anthony's sociables.

"We sell from Hingham to Plymouth, but we try to specialize in our own area which is Cohasset, Hingham, Scituate, Norwell and Cohasset."

Brainteasers... ...Round 5

As we round the stretch, here is round five of the Mariner Brainteaser contest.

TEASERS PART V

1 — Three missionaries and three cannibal s have to cross a river. They can't swim but have a small boat with an outboard motor which will carry only two persons. Each of the missionaries can operate the outboard motor, but only one of the cannibals can do so. A missionary can be alone with a cannibal, but if one missionary is left with two cannibals, the missionary will be immediately killed and eaten by the cannibals. How can they cross the river so that all six are safely delivered on the other side of the river?

2 — The earliest date on which Easter Sunday can fall is March 22. In what year did this last occur?

3 — Who are the following better known as?

a. Margaretha Zelle
b. Giovanni de Seingalt
c. Richard Starkey
d. Charles S. Stratton
e. Edward Teach

4 — Here's how the members of the Girls' Softball League stood at the end of the season: The Daffydowndillies were four games ahead of the Minervas. The Pandas were five games behind the Daffydowndillies. The Minervas were seven games behind the Wolverines. The Wolverines were two games ahead of the Tanagers. The Minervas were tied with the Sprites. The Sprites were two games behind the Larkspurs, who were a game behind the Phoenixes. In what order did the eight teams finish up?

5 — Change CHOW to MEIN in four steps. At each step change only one letter to form a new word. (Example: work to play in 4 steps — prow, warp, pray, play).

6 — What do the following have in common:

Maio, Sal, Fogo, Brava

7 — In the following multiplication each letter stands for a different digit. This can be deciphered with no further clues but when the letters are arranged in the numbers they represent they spell out a phrase which makes a very keen observation on the art of puzzle solving:

8 — How many times can you subtract 77 from 59,829?

9 — In one of the famous resort towns of Europe where tourists from a dozen countries may always be encountered, four travelers struck up an acquaintance. They were of different nationalities and although each man could speak two of the four languages, English, French, German and Italian, there was still no common tongue in which they could all converse. In fact only one of the languages was spoken by more than two of the men.

Nobody spoke both French and German.

Although John couldn't speak English he could still act as an interpreter when Peter and Jacob wanted to speak to each other.

Jacob spoke German and could also talk to William although the latter knew not a word of German.

John, Peter and William could not all converse in the same language.

What two languages did each man speak?

10 — Name two words in each of which all the vowels plus the letter Y (aeiouy) fall in proper sequence.

Bonus: What is the significance of the "Zero Factor" (as it refers to presidential elections) in the 1980 elections? In one sentence, please.

Chemicals

By Lois Martin

Last night I watched NOVA. It was a frightening revelation. What I learned most was how little I know about chemicals, how they're used, what they're doing, why they're used. I concluded I better start learning. My ignorance may be my undoing. Indeed unawareness of the consequences of uncontrolled, unmonitored, unsafe chemical uses will be the death of us.

Trouble is I've never understood nor been interested in chemicals. I use words like polyester or pesticide but I've never understood how they're made. And the uses of common chemicals have been merely a routine action on my part. I've never questioned them. We better start asking.

PATCHES

NOVA was on channel 2. There were three words, terms that seemed to be the bad guys, the accused chemicals. Heribicide, dioxin, TCDD.

Apparently those chemicals have been used in spraying forests in the northwest. As I understand it, the herbicide killed off small growth of all kinds, leaving open space in which to grow trees. But according to the report, after the spray hit the ground, it was absorbed into the trunks of some trees; it got in the water and killed the fish; the animals ingested or absorbed it and were unable to reproduce or died; the residents drank it or touched it and got sick.

In short, if that information was accurate, the spray managed to produce ill or fatal effects in every link of nature's chain. We ought to find out about this.

In the forest area were residents who'd chosen the rural life for its inherent purity. One woman pointed to her neighbors' houses and said cancer had struck each household. Her own daughter had a blood disease, from, doctors said, from the presence of this chemical in her body. She was moving away. About 100 miles from that town a woman compiled a list of 500 miscarriages in the sprayed area, that officials correlated to the spray. As a result the Environmental Protection Agency put a temporary ban on spraying in 1978.

What's more unsettling, though, is that eight years earlier, in 1970, things like D-Con and defoliants (used in Vietnam) were banned because of proof of injury to humans. But in the ensuing years, despite pleas for keen investigation of the use of herbicide, the spraying continued.

...Because it's difficult to oust a chemical that plays an important part of moneymaking. People from Weyerhauser were interviewed on the program. One man said there'd be severe economic repercussions if the spraying ceased. Another argued this is the time of expedience, that we can't wait for trees to grow without the hastening help of the chemical spray.

One forest service man said he used to believe in herbicides but now considers their use "immoral." He was in charge of what's called "a stand" of trees. He said he used men to clear the brush, not chemicals. But also from that service was a fellow who said his office had no information indicating the chemical was harmful. I hope he watched the program. He'd have received information.

Another chemical proponent called the attack on TCDD/dioxin/herbicides "chemical McCarthyism." He said it's safe as aspirin. That comment was quickly challenged by a man who said aspirin doesn't build up in the body. Thus far in one experiment a doctor said he'd not yet found a level of the chemical that was NOT harmful. He kept lowering the amounts given the poor tests monkeys and each time physical impairment of some sort resulted.

Around here we've heard a lot about the disposal of chemical or nuclear wastes. And we're familiar with swelling arguments about the safety of nuclear power.

The thing is, it's apparent to me, that when there's a lot of money/profit to be made with a substance or a method that is of questionable safety, we'll have a devil of a time stopping the substance or method. Money talks louder than people, animals, trees and water put together. Profit could be bigger than life. We forget we won't also be around to enjoy it. And now I wonder if nature will be around for others to enjoy.

I hear the kids at the high school have been talking about NOVA this week. That's a relief. If herbicides have their attention, we can have hope.

I'm not unalterably opposed to all chemicals. But it's like fire. Either it is used to serve or it is not used at all. We can't allow fire to harm, to burn down houses or people or forests or businesses. We either make good use of it or no use at all.

...Same with chemicals. We've got to find out how they're being used. If it's only for money, to the detriment of society/nature, we've got to do something about it. NOVA's production was not a panic button, but it is a shrill, commanding alarm to which we must respond.

New "On Our Own" Chapters

On Our Own, a non-profit organization for the single adult is announcing it's two additional chapters to be opening soon.

In answer to the great response in the Bridgewater and Marshfield areas new chapters will be opened.

The group offers weekly discussions meetings and social activities including dining/dancing, brunch, bowling and theater parties. It is a comfortable way to meet new people and grow. For more information and a complimentary newsletter call 826-8903 or write, On Our Own, Box 564, N. Pembroke. Ma. 02358.

Pro Arte Program

The Pro Arte Singers, a South Shore choral group under the direction of Walter Chapin, are pleased to announce their 1979-1980 Concert Season. The group has begun rehearsals in the lovely new music room of the Gates Intermediate School in Scituate, where they are preparing three major concert programs for the year.

The November concerts will be presented on Sunday, November 4, at 5:00 p.m., at Derby Academy in Hingham and on Friday, November 9, at 8:00 p.m., at First Parish Unitarian Church in Scituate. The program will include Bach's 'Missa Brevis' in G Major, performed by the full concert chorus with soloists and chamber orchestra. As stated by director Chapin, "The words of the liturgy live and breathe through Bach's dancelike rythms, inexhaustible counterpoint and sheer beauty of choral sound."

Also offered by the full chorus will be Brahms' 'Gypsy Songs,' exotic and romantic themes based on poems by Hugo Conrat; and Copland's 'Promise of Living,' from the opera 'The Tender Land,' beautifully suited to the Thanksgiving season. The Pro Arte Consort, an ensemble group drawn from the full membership, will perform 'Trois Chansons,' in french, by Claude Debussy.

The world's best known Christmas piece, and certainly its favorite oratorio, the 'Messiah' by G.F. Handel, will be performed on three evenings: Sunday, December 9 at 5:00 p.m., at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Hanover; Friday, December 14 at 8:00 p.m., at First Parish Unitarian Church in Scituate; and Sunday, December 16 at the Swain School of Design in New Bedford.

Beethoven's Mass in C Major, Op. 86, and Bernstein's 'Chichester Psalms,' are planned for performances the weekend of April 19-20, in Hanover and Scituate.

For information on subscription rates, please call Walter Chapin, 547-1798, Barbara Lane, 545-0238 or Sally Keefe, 545-0260.

The Rockland Credit Union Marshfield office celebrated its first anniversary this month with a large chocolate cake for employes. On hand for the festivities were (L-R): Joseph Forti, treasurer-manager; Theresa Baldwin, Marshfield office manager; Edward Lelyveld, president; and Robert Forti, assistant treasurer-manager. The credit union, which has other offices in Hanover and Rockland, reported enrolling over 2500 new members in the Marshfield office, while making $4 million in loans during its first year.

Parkinson Workshop At S.S.Hospital

Workshops for patients with Parkinson's disease and their families will be given at South Shore Hospital in November.

The workshops will be presented by the Department of Neurology of the Boston University Medical Center/University Hospital and the Parkinson's Disease Referral Center. They will be held on Thursdays, Nov. 1-15 at the South Shore Hospital Board Room from 5:30 to 7 p.m.

Purpose of the series is to help the Parkinsonian patient and his/her family in setting reasonable goals in reaching a maximum level of independence and functional ability. Topics will be, What is Parkinson's disease, Mobility Training and Activities in Daily Living, Communications in PSarkinson's Disease and Social Support for the Parkinson's Patient. Each session will consist of a presentation, discussion and workshop.

S.S.Arts Center Shows Fuller and Koopman-Wyman

The public is invited to meet Ben Fuller and Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman at the opening reception for their exhibit of Paintings and Drawings on Friday, Oct. 19 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center Gallery, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

Their work will be on display from October 15 through Nov. 9 and may be viewed during Gallery hours which are from noon to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturdays.

Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman's figure drawings and portrait studies are done in conte crayon and pastel in a free-flowing style. A graduate of Massachusetts College of Art, Ms. Wyman has done post-graduate study at the De Cordova Museum School, Cambridge Center for Adult Education and the South Shore Art Center.

She currently teaches art at the Joseph Osgood School in Cohasset and has previously taught courses at Newton College of the Sacred Heart. Her portrait of "Robert" recently won first in Drawing at the 1979 South Shore Art Festival and she also took first prize at the Art Center Blue Ribbon Show.

She has exhibited in juried shows at the De Cordova and Cambridge Adult Education Center and also in juried festivals on the South Shore.

Ben Fuller's watercolors are noted for their atmospheric rendition of sea and sky of the New England coastline. He is a graduate of the Art Institute and the Museum of Fine Arts School, both in Boston. He has exhibited at the Boston Center for the Arts, Boston City Hall, the Art Institute, the School of the Museum of Fine Arts and in juried festivals on the South Shore.

He was the first prize winner in watercolor at the Duxbury Art Complex in 1977 and was the Design Contest winner in 1978 at the North River Art Society. His teaching experience includes the Museum School and classes at the North River Arts Society. His paintings are in both private and corporate collections.

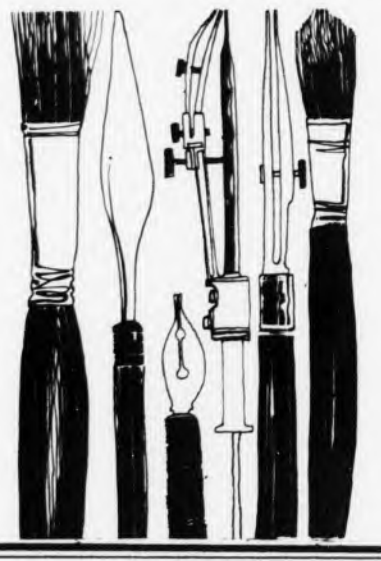
Farley At Woman's South



How to conquer risk taking and manage change will be the message of Marjorie Farley to members of Women South when they meet Tuesday, Oct. 16.

Ms. Farley, who is Director of Conferences at Tufts University, will speak on Breaking Barriers' at the business and professional women's monthly dinner meeting.

As a consultant to organizations and educators on program development and management, she directs both public and in-house programs, organizes training sessions and presents keynote addresses.

The members of Women South meet at the Neighborhood Club, Quincy, with a social hour at 5:30 p.m. followed by dinner at 6:15.

Sewer Commissioners Plan For Meeting

Two sewer commissioners held a brief meeting Monday with Metcalf and Eddy Vice Presidents Frank Sampson and John Chalas regarding presentations to be made at Thursday's public meeting and Monday's special town meeting.

The town has two site options, that of the Music Circus and the Whale Meadow sites. Theoretically, the town also has the option of expanding the existing facility. However, Sewer Commission Chairman William Monturoi said if that course of action were to be recommended by voters the costs would be in excess of $3.5 million which would be born by the town in its entirety.

In addition, Monturoi said the town would not be able to increase the capacity of the plant to take any additional sewage or to deal with the three areas of the town which need attention. Nor, he said, would that alternative eliminate legal action which could be taken against the town.

Chalas said one requirement of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is that a facility be able to handle liquid flow and leeching and septic systems. "It might be difficult to prove that it (the expansion of the existing facility) could do that," Sampson agreed.

"The law has political realities built into it," Sampson added, saying the expansion of the present site would be difficult and might require unusual techniques."

If the town takes no action Monday, Sampson said that would not necessarily mean that the town would lose its funding. "The eligibility is always there. It's a matter of satisfying the budget. There are always enough towns on the list to satisfy that need. Several massive projects could easily use the entire Massachusetts allocation."

Montuori said he was still concerned that people are misunderstanding what is happening; he noted that few town officals had attended any commission meetings.

Commissioner Hobbs noted also that "People are concerned with the location of the outfall. Sutton Rock is the general zone of the proposed outfall, not 'the' location," he noted.

Montouri said the town would of course have to extend the outfall to meet environmental needs, whatever they were, but that this would be under consideration until Step II.

Hobbs noted that there have now been 10 studies on the wastewater treatment facility

Sewer Meeting Thursday Night

A public meeting will be held Thursday, Oct. 18, at 8 p.m. in the High School auditorium, to discuss and review the sewer system expansion as proposed in Articles to be presented at the Oct. 22, Special Town Meeting.

Fat City T-Shirts. . . Cohasset Needs Them

Cohasset fishermen need them — lots of them, with lots of different messages.

The Log and Line needs them.

The Cohasset Highway Department needs them. A resort in Puerto Rico couldn't operate without them.

The Cohasset Strawberry Parfait needs them — but spelled correctly. The First National Bank of Boston needs them. Ocean Bay Nurseries needs them.

Even Dr. Roger Pompeo needs them. His T-shirts say: "This person is physically fit and free of all contagious disease, signed Roger A. Pompeo, M.D." He gives them to patients who have passed extensive physical exams.

Realtor Eugene Price gets paid his rent in them. He's different. He has been taught to need them.

Realtor Wayne Sawchuk needs frisbees.

BIRTH

Ron Goodwin IS Fat City T-shirts. He makes the silk screen, prints them, dries them, sells them and delivers them. "Say I believe in small businesses and stuff like that — you know what to say. I hate big business!"

Ron got into the T-shirt business somehow. See if you can follow this: a sculpture and fine arts major at the

Music Circus Applies For License

Selectmen tabled action on an application from the South Shore Music Circus for a weekly performance license for next year (mid-June to mid-September).

The board said it wished to have more information on the number of performances planned to be given. Ron Rawson, Music Circus director, said the application was being made without prejudice, as counsel for the Music Circus continues to question whether the license is technically required.

Last year a number of residents residing in the neighborhood of the Music Circus said they felt the Music Circus should have a license and the selectmen granted one. The citizens are involved in litigation over the question of whether the Music Circus has expanded a non-conforming use.

Cohasset Told In Error Over Jury Proceedings

Recently, attorneys handling a criminal trial questioned the legality of Massachusetts towns' jury selection proceedings.

As a result, various Massachusetts town officials were questioned about their jury selection process.

Selectman Arthur Clark said he and Selectmen's Secretary Peggy Ramsay testified last week as to Cohasset's process and were surprised to learn that in at least two proceedings the town was in error.

Clark said: "We discovered that if anyone asks to serve on a jury that person could be fined $500. Peggy told the Dedham Court judge that people had requested to serve over the years."

In addition Clark said the town had inadvertently not realized that persons 18 years and older are eligible to serve on jurys. "We hadn't been taking anyone under 25," Clark said, explaining that the law had been changed several times regarding age limitations.

Aerospace Engineer President Of Hugo's

By Tanna Kasperowicz

The day after Labor Day the Boston and national newspapers announced to the world the award of the government's $165M Mobile Missle Project to Avco Systems Division in Wilmington.

The man who had been instrumental in the project for the past three years was changing lightbulbs at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant that day. He was not bombarded by reporters asking for his comments. He was not even briefly quoted in the newspapers.

It's possible that he might have fleetingly wondered if he had made the right career decision. But after talking to Theodore Vallas last week, more than likely he had no second thoughts at al .

After 20 years, he had simply decided to change careers.

Vallas came to Cohasset last June to temporarily manage Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant and Kimball's Motor Inn when the late John Carzis was first taken ill.

He had no premonition that he would end up with the job of president of the Shore Restaurants, Inc., the Carzis' estate.

A nephew by marriage to

Carzis, Vallas was only able to accept the temporary position from the estate because the Mobile Missle Project specifications were at that time under consideration by the government. A leave of absence was easily arranged.

Carzis died in August. The estate was then forced to take a long look at the situation which confronted it, scrutinizing the relatives for a take-charge person.

"I happened to be one of those relatives who appeared to be management orientated," Vallas said, adding "The timing was precise. I was ready for a change. It was a family business and the idea of being an entrepreneur attracted me."

Of course Avco expected Vallas to be back on the job. "I had worked three years on this. But I told my boss I wanted to take a crack at Hugo's. He said I was out of my mind. But I went back to Avco and signed out completely."

Asked if he discovered his new situation relaxing he said "No. It's just a different kind of organization. I'm still dealing with the motivation of people."

In his former job Vallas travelled a lot, being one of those executives who could be directed on a moment's notice to spend nine straight weeks in practically anywhere in the world. "I knew every captain and stewardess on American Airlines." He doesn't really miss living out of a suitcase.

THE BEGINNING

Because John Carzis had no children, many of his relatives and his relatives' children worked at Hugo's in the summer months.

Vallas also worked at Hugo's when he was courting Carzis' niece, Christine, who cashiered summers.

"John got angry when I started taking his niece out after work. One day he sat me down at the service bar and had me checkout the drinks. Now that you mention it, it might have been a make-work job."

Vallas and his wife maintain a home in Lexington, but he stays at an apartment complex at Kimballs. This summer he had the experience of becoming acquainted with various Music Circus personalities in Kimball's dining room. He met Roy Clark, said hi to Tom Jones and met in the flesh for the first time favorite performers such as Bobby Vinton and Lena Horne.

He also had the unique experience of living on the second floor of Kimball's with the Osmonds for a week this summer. "It was like the Swiss Family Robinson."

Although he appears to be pretty unflappable, he says that's mostly due to the expert direction of Steve Teixeira, manager of the motor inn, and Joanne Winters, functions manager. "They really run the place."

Ted Vallas

Changes effected by the new president so far include a change in the Smith Room from a dance floor that was "a postage stamp" to a more expansive dancing floor which was discovered only after the removal of the old carpet.

Vallas is planning to completely upgrade the physical plant and will concentrate on Hugo's as a year-round business and not just a seasonable trade.

In addition, Vallas said Carzis' dream of a facility at Boston Rowes Wharf is still being actively scrutinized from all aspects.

Fat City

Maryland Institute College of Art in Baltimore, he also studied philosophy nights at the University of Maine while working on a farm during the day.

Then he went to Nantucket and worked as a carpenter, and started selling T-shirts for a shop, when he had his first brilliant idea.

"There were two competing bars on Nantucket. Prestons had a T-shirt which everybody wore which said 'The Summer of '74 — The Word Is Boogie.' I came up with an idea for their competitor which said: 'The Chicken Box — The Word Is Sleezy.' I had 100 printed in Boston and they were an instant success."

Based on the above success, Ron then took some screen-printing courses at Massachusetts College of Art. After which he returned to Cohasset for the winter and worked as a carpenter.

He worked on the Harbor Tower paint crew and built Tom Chamberlain's office in the old train depot downtown. Then three years ago he started screen-printing his own T-shirts. "But I haven't made it through the winter yet. I still have to pick up the hammer."

BAD STRAWBERRIES

Early-on in his business he was offered a job from the Boston Strawberries Record Store "Because two other guys did it first and spelled it STARBERRIES."

Ron ran into a similar bad experience with strawberries when he got a job from Cohasset Strawberry Parfait. "I forget the R on the aprons and spelled it PAFAIT. I had to eat those."

This year had been an exceptionally problemless year because of the recent purchase of a four-color printer "Built by a guy who makes race cars in his spare time," and a $3,000 dryer — "That cost me more than my truck."

Ron cuts all the screen designs himself, although some are done photographically.

The Greenhouse cooking school once ordered T-shirts for their graduates which said: "One French Chef" in French. It was signed by the Greenhouse chef. Paul Pratt Library ordered shirts for their volunteers. Osgood School needed "Snappy Sneakers" shirts for their Groundhog Day race. The Red Lion Inn had to have shirts. A group of wheelchair-bound people ordered shirts saying "Things Go Better With Spokes."

Building 19 recently ordered 1,000 aprons which said "Good Stuff Cheap," but Ron said he heard many of the female employees refused to wear them.

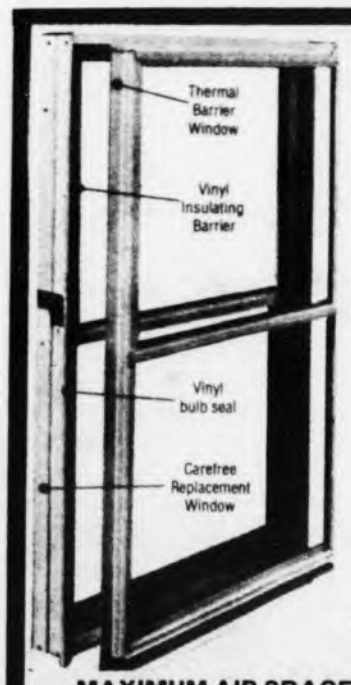
Printed aprons, tote bags, log carriers, sweat shirts, long and short sleeved shirts and NO PARKING covers for meters are available.

Asked if he got some artistic satisfaction from his clever designs — perhaps not quite as fulfilling as sculpture, Ron, who pulls no punches said "I don't look at it as art. I look at this as a job."

[Ron Goodwin is a former director of the South Shore Art Center.]

Calling School Volunteers

The Cohasset Public Schools are presently in the process of developing a Basic Skills Competency Program to be implemented in the next school year. As mandated by State law, each school system in the Commonwealth will be required to test students in the areas of Reading, Mathematics and Writing skills.



Students will be tested three times during their school years. The first testing will take place during the early elementary grades (K-3), the second testing during the later elementary grades (4-6) and the last testing while the student is in the secondary grades (7-12).

The School Department wishes to invite any member of the general public as well as any potential employers of Cohasset students to serve on a General Steering Committee which is being formed. Any individual interested in joining the Steering Committee should contact Mr. Stephen E. Hart of the School Department at 383-6104.

Around Town

☐David and Martha Sharpe, owners of David Sharpe Gallery, 3 South Main St., hosted a reception on Friday evening for Gita Packer, a sculptor whose work has been on display there for several months. Ms. Packer, of Fort Worth, Texas, does miniature animal bronzes of both domestic and wild animals in peaceful, sometimes humorous scenes, often with children.

She studied journalism and had a career as a reporter and photographer with three Texas newspapers, before turning to animal sculpture six years ago. Her work is on display in Kenya, London, and througout the U.S. The Sharpe Gallery has a fine representation of her work.

JOY PLACE IS A DEAD END — Only after jogging past this scene time after time did resident Peter Wood finally realize the irony of the above. He snapped this picture for us. Thanks, Pete.

Recreation Dept. Report

To date, there are 453 residents of all ages enrolled in a variety of Fall Recreation Programs. Other programs will be announced shortly, those will include ski lessons, gun safety program, gun qualification classes and of course a variety of winter programs including basketball clinics, basketball leagues, street hockey, as well as second session registrations for many of the current fall programs.

SWIMMING PROGRAM

A minimum of 45 individuals were needed to conduct the swim program at the MDC Pool-Weymouth. Only 23 individuals have registered precluding our ability to conduct the program at the present time. However, names onn the current roster will be retained and the program will be re-registered during the winter.

YOUTH SOCCER LEAGUE

Aside from interruptions due to weather factors, youth soccer is progressing well with 265 students from Grade 2 thru Grade 9 participating. We will follow the game schedule as indicated and all make-up games will be played after the season.

Newcomers' Dance

The Scituate-Cohasset Welcome Wagon Newcomers Club will hold a Fall Dance Saturday, Oct. 27, from 8 until midnight.

The dance will be held at the St. Francis X. Cabrini Parish Center, Hook Road. Scituate and will feature Jon Peters' Light and Sound Show and disco lessons by Claire and Roger Vaka.

Hors d'oeuvres, sandwiches and lots of door prizes are included in the price of the tickets. Tickets are now available and may be obtained by calling Kris DiBenedetto at 545-5685 or Jayne Nussdorfer at 383-1753.

9th Grade Sociables

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Nott have announced that registration for the 1979-80 Cohasset Senior Sociables has begun.

Parents of eighth graders may call Mrs. Clifford Mitman; parents of ninth graders may call Mrs. F. Allen Weisenfluh.

Three dances have been scheduled for this season: Nov. 2, Dec. 21, and May 16 from 8:30 until 11 p.m. with music by "Mack's Trucks." Each dance is preceded by a dessert party.

Subscriptions are limited and will be accepted in the order in which they are received.

Community Center Food Talk

"I can save you a minimum of 20 per cent on your average food bill," promises Paul Cifrino, Cohasset resident and guest lecturer at the Cohasset Community Center.

Cifrino will speak Tuesday, Oct. 23 from 7-9:30 p.m. Please note the schedule change from Oct. 25 (Osgood School Open House is scheduled for that night).

Cifrino speaks from a strong background. For 25 years he owned Supreme Markets which became Purity Supreme. In 1969 he participated in the White House Conference on Food and Nutrition under Dr. John Meyer.

He was in India from 1970-71 with the Aid to Human Development Program. Since then he has taught at Harvard in the areas of public health and food management. He serves on the Massachusetts Nutrition Board and currently teaches a nutrition course at the Boston Center for adult education.

It is this course which he will summarize Tuesday. He plans to present "a practical guide to nutrition." He combines both science and the marketplace and comes up with food choices and ideas "guaranteed to save the average consumer 20 per cent on foods readily available to him."

Cifrino's talk is being sponsored by the Nursery School Parents Committee. Coffee will be served and a small admission fee will be charged.

Looking Back

Inspired Oratory

By Peter Barnicle

A special town meeting will be held Monday and the warrant includes several articles which will undoubtedly lead to heated debate. Who knows, somebody might even make a speech that will sway the vote.

When was the last time you heard a soul stirring speech? A speech in which the advocate moved you to agree with his premise — not on the logic of his argument, but on the sincerity with which he presented it?

Marcus Porcius Cato aroused the Roman Senate by concluding every speech with the phrase "Oraeterea censeo Carthaginem esse delendam." And eventually Carthage was destroyed.

Daniel Webster's "Reply to Haynes" is memorialized in the painting hanging in Faneuil Hall. And one can hardly forget Winston Churchill, hand grasping the lapel of his jacket, addressing the House of Commons.

The actual words are faded but the power with which they were uttered echoes down through the ages.

The floor of the United States Senate of the hallowed halls of Parliament may be a far cry from a Cohasset town meeting discussing a local problem and the chances of hearing inspired oratory are meager. Those who do make speeches all too often become infatuated with their own voice and go on talking long after the speech is finished.

There have been occasions however when a speaker has been inspired to oratorical heights that have captured the audience. Without prepared notes and only a sincere conviction in the justice of his cause a citizen can sway the entire hall.

One such speech was made at a town meeting in the Ripley Road School back in the late 1950's. The meeting had been urged to be cautious with all articles calling for expenditures and was jogging along quietly until it came to two articles dealing with a proposal for repairs to the roof of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

One article proposed removal of the cupola and weather-vane and just slapping some shingles across the top of the roof. That would cost the town $1,500. The second article called for repairing the cupola. That would cost $2,500.

Any lethargy in the hall was suddenly shattered by Howard Bates. The usually calm Bates who was then Tree Warden, charged up to the front of the hall and indignantly denounced the very idea of suggesting that the weathervane be relegated to the junk pile.

Lobster-faced, his voice choked with emotion, Bates called the removal of the gilt mackeral weathervane a sacrilege. He pointed out that the mackeral fishing industry had been the backbone of Cohasset's economy for more than a century.

He called on the townspeople to show some reverence for the symbol of the fish which had sustained many of the town's families in bygone years.

He knew whereof he spoke since his family was among the first to settle in town back in the seventeenth century. And they had contributed to the purchase of the weathervane years previously.

Most of the newcomers hadn't the faintest notion as to why he should be so upset. They did realize that he was speaking from the heart and that he was giving them a lesson in the town's history.

When the Moderator called the question, the meeting voted to retain the cupola and weathervane — by acclamation.

What's a thousand dollars when a sacred symbol of the town is involved?

Answer To Mystery Writer

Letters

To the Editor:

As both a concerned citizen of Cohasset and as an individual Cohasset Water and Sewer Commissioner, I wish to respond to the letter published last week without identification as to its source.

That letter states erroneously that the Sewer Commission has been unable to agree on what site to select or what to do, . . . and then chides the Commission for not being unanimous in its site selection!

The fact is that the present makeup of the Sewer Commission is and has been unanimous in its opinion that Cohasset must face up to its sewage problems, but so have past Commissions!

Many public sessions, regular meetings, and meetings with special interest groups have taken place over a number of years, to say nothing of at least 10 separate studies starting in 1906, virtually all of which have recommended positive sewer and pollution abatement action.

Your Commission has been and continues to be unanimous in its opinion that Cohasset must "clean up its act." This opinion is now pointedly underscored by deadlines given the Town for minimum action by the State, failure of which to act upon will make our Town subject to daily fines.

Recognizing that Town Meeting rejected the Commission's article at last Town Meeting, the Sewer Commission has this time come back with its prime recommendation but with an alternative site selection as well.

Rather than the consulting engineers report being so bad that agreement cannot be reached as to a site, the fact is that in many categories of ranking, the various sites rate very closely to each other. Upon closer examination however, certain facts become apparent. Chief among these to me are the following:

1. The School Facilities site is the only unused site available which would not involve land taking and the ultimate unknown cost of such land taking.

2. While the land, which comprises nearly 70 acres in total, was originally designated for school expansion, Cohasset enrollment has been steady to declining, with talk of closing the Osgood School in the next few years. Even so, this use, while designating ten acres so that there is adequate buffer, will only utilize three to four acres.

The mystery writer of last week asks why the #1 location has been changed, why the School Facilities site was so far down the list earlier on in the course of the study. What may I ask is a study all about but to examine and re-examine all possibilities, and this was done out in the open for everyone to see. The purpose of the study was not to pick one site and then justify it despite all considerations.

Obviously all locations will have pluses in some categories, minuses in others. One very large factor is that by locating the proposed plant site at the bottom of Deer Hill, pumping up the hill is avoided. That was the largest factor in my mind for, not a change in location within the School Facilities site, but a final decision to recommend the location of the ten acre parcel. Phase II, if approved, and which results in nothing being constructed, only plans

'Not' Beechwooders

To the Editor:

I'm writing today to the Mariner because of an article that appeared in the last issue.

As it turns out, the school committee woman was misquoted by this paper.

But nevertheless, the comment made seems to be the feeling of many local people.

"Beechwood mothers" was the expression used in regards to transporting our children to the town library (which may I add, we do quite regularly).

The old adage, "Beechwood farmers," has been over used to the fullest. Our children do wear shoes now, and are as educated as well as anyone.

Because our children do live quite a distance from the village and library, they are driven back and forth. But may I add, they are never left idle to roam around the town and get into mischief.

The new reservoir and state park add more beauty to our peaceful area. The new homes are lovely as are the charming old ones. The streets are safe and quiet, and the children happy and content.

The people here like to be considereda part of Cohasset and not grouped as "beechwooders."

Ellen Gentile

Fairly And Accurately

To the Editor:

In a front page article in last week's issue, your reporter quoted Mrs. Walsh, a school committeewoman, as saying "the Beechwood mothers are not sending their kids to the town library."

I would like to address my comments to two issues. First, the responsibility of a newspaper to report the facts fairly and accurately. A quick phone call to Mrs. Walsh received a vigorous denial of the statement in the article.

Mrs. Walsh told me that she was taken totally out of context and that she never said that the mothers were not taking their children to the library.

She also said that this was not the first time that the school committee meetings were not accurately reported in your paper.

Second, and this has been a sore spot with me and many of my neighbors for years, we greatly resent being grouped as one, separate, and, unfortunately, slightly lower class part of Cohasset, namely "Beechwood." Beechwood is a street in Cohasset, just like any other. It has large homes and small, new and old, well-to-do and not so well-to-do.

There are several different neighborhoods, areas and types of inhabitants. We have blue and white collar workers, laborers, farmers, older families and new comers.

I think we have a delightful atmosphere in which to live and raise our children.

I am aware that in years past, this part of Cohasset was known as the "disadvantaged" farming section of town but I assure you, it is a far cry from that stereotype notion now.

We are citizens and taxpayers of Cohasset and would appreciate being referred to and recognized as such by "townies" and others in our community.

Good Wishes

To the Editor:

Happy One Year Old.

Wouldn't miss the pleasure of remembering the day and sending you good wishes in the very warmest way!

Thank you ever so much for a wonderful paper. I look forward to every week of reading — can't wait for the mailman to deliver.

Please keep up the tremendous work.

Apologies

Our apologies to School Committeewoman Patricia Walsh and mothers of the Beechwood area for our having not fully explained Ms. Walsh's statement in last week's edition of the Mariner.

Ms. Walsh's concern was with possible future energy crisis, a return to the gas lines, etc., and the inability of mothers not living within walking distance of the two town libraries (village and west corner) to get their children to reading sources.

She was also putting in a plug for more money to be spent on books for the Osgood Library.

BID AWARDS

Clene-Heat, Inc. of Quincy, low bidder, has been awarded the contract for town fuel delivery at a net cost of 77.9 cents per gallon.

Wayne Sawchuk was awarded the bid for refurbishing the practice football field at Milliken Field for $17,990. Sawchuk was the only bidder.

SCHEDULING PROBLEMS

Selectmen agreed last week that town boards and committees will have preference for the use of town hall when a conflict arises with the recreation department.

Director Jack Worley, through written correspondence, advised the board last week that there had been problems with scheduling. The recreation department uses the town hall two afternoons and three evenings a week.

WHEELWRIGHT PARK

The selectmen have received plans from the Cohasset

Riding Club for oiling the riding area at Wheelright Park.

JESUIT EASEMENT

The Jesuit Order has granted an easement to the town to cross over its land (adjacent to the Yacht Club) for breakwater repairs.

DENIED

At its meeting last Thursday the planning board denied an application of Mrs. Grace Happenny of 179 Hull Street to subdivide land at that address because one of the lots did not have the frontage necessary for a public way.

Commissioners

and said he hoped the town would recognize that the state has committed the town to a facility.

Hobbs said while some element of the community has suggested waiting for a new board of commissioners this spring, he felt the town can not afford to wait. "The same questions will be there."

Montuori said the town's new permit calls for no discharge into James Brook and outfall from James Brook by 1981. He added that in his judgment a new facility would insignificantly affect developable lands. Metcalf and Eddy projects a population increase of 12,850 as opposed to 10,800 without the facility.

It was also stressed that the new proposed facility will replace the present facility and not be in addition to it.

Correction

School Committeewoman Martha Gjesteby's statement made last week about cutting down on teacher "in-house workshops" was incorrect. It should have read teacher "orientations."

Village Shop Talk

By Larry Fone

A welcome to two shops in the Cohasset Harbor area: The Velvet Pony operated by Linda Cuff. Wonderful decorative animals, pillows, fabulous gift items, etc. Next door is Cohasset Harbor Liquor Shop run by John and Mary Muncey. They have a fine selection of wines, liquors and beer.

Unamious Opinion

and specifications for construction, will determine the best three to four acre site within the ten acres. Then and only then will the Sewer Commission come before the Town to seek funds for construction.

As to other uses for that portion of the School Facilities land, ie, the ten acres, the School Committee has mentioned their desire for additional athletic fields. Upon looking into this the Sewer Commission found that for very little additional cost such a field or fields could be, and would be included at the discretion of the School Committee. If we are concerned about future school requirements which seem remote now, then we should not consider giving up the Osgood School for educational purposes.

Possible odor problems were mentioned by the mystery writer at the School Facilities site, and that question was not lightly regarded by the Commission. Indeed, even at our present overloaded facility odor problems have been virtually non-existent. In fact, we learned that there is no record ever of airborne viruses from such treatment plants being transmitted and some plants are located next door to restaurants as in Plymouth!

Another critical factor in last week's letter was the pumping distance from the Town owned School Facilities site to an ocean outfall. Yes, it is the furthest from the ocean, but common sense will tell you that if the distance from Whale Meadow to an ocean outfall is shorter, so then is the distance to Whale Meadow longer. Further, the recent experience in Hull with a brand new oceanfront treatment plant under water on multiple occasions causes me to question the wisdom of such a location. Further, I feel that Cohasset has only a limited amount of coastline, and that if we must acquire it by force, then we can certainly utilize it to higher and better use than for a sewage treatment plant!

As to the third alternative, which is really to defeat both the School Facilities site and the Whale Meadow site, this really is the worst course of action of all. If no action towards a new plant is taken, and the present plant, even if it could be expanded which is questionable because of present environmental laws and technological considerations, is what we are stuck with, then we would in another decade find ourselves faced with the same situation as today, namely a plant that cannot effectively be expanded because of environmental considerations; a plant that rather than qualifying for upward of 90 per cent of funding from outside the Town would have to be paid for almost totally by the Town and would only be a bandaid fix up to meet minimum state requirements that most agree are less palatable than either the School Facilities site or Whale Meadow!

But what about the outfall location; the letter made no mention of that. The concern of many citizens when Sutton's Rock is mentioned is well known. What is less well known is that there is an entire zone within which Sutton's Rock is located; that Phase II plans and specifications will determine the best outfall location within that zone. What we do know, is that the outfall will definitely not be at or on top of Sutton's Rock!

NO FINES

The mystery writer says that by simply studying the study the Town will " . . . stop the existing fines of up to $10,000 a day." Make no mistake about it. We are not yet being fined anything. This will most likely occur only if we do not go into the next phase, ie Phase II. To the extent that this next phase only causes specific plans and specifications to be drawn up, it is in my opinion a "Study." The results of which must come before the Town's voters for approval before building is started! The cost of this Phase II is not 15 million dollars, it is $295,000.00 to the Town.

The mystery writer impunes the common sense of the present Board, saying that more time was spent discussing resignations and only one meeting on plant locations. The Board of Sewer Commissioners has been discussing plant locations for at least three years, and the reason resignation was discussed was concern by the Board over the very reason raised by the mystery writer, namely that there was some merit in giving the new board a head start on the problems we have been wrestling with for years. The Selectmen and the present Board in joint meeting decided against the merits of such action, at the direct urging of the Selectmen.

I urge each and every voter to give the sewer articles long and careful consideration. Remember please, that your Board is not seeking to sewer undeveloped sections of Town, only to have you vote affirmatively for plans and specifications for a modular plant and those problem areas already voted favorably upon by overwhelming vote on two pervious occasions.

Sincerely,
John W. Hobbs

Boys' Soccer Team Shows Championship Potential

By Rob Tis

Friday the Cohasset boys' soccer team boosted its record to 3-2-2 with a comeback win over Abington. This is a rather dim record compared to their hopes for the season.

"Our hearts are set on the state finals," stated the enthusiastic skipper fullback Joe Whelan, "and if we can win the rest of our games excluding Duxbury, we'll make the states."

Duxbury is traditionally the undisputed winner of the South Shore League. In fact it has been close to three years since Duxbury has lost a league game.

Cohasset is definitely the second best team in the league and possibly the state. It has tied Duxbury three times in the last two years -- truly an amazing feat. In fact the hearty skipper team was beating the undefeated, previously unscored upon Green Dragons at the end of the first half last week. Unfortunately Duxbury revived and won in the waning moments of the game.

Last year the second place Skippers were chosen for the state finals and faired pretty well. This year they hope to make the finals and beat Duxbury.

The Skippers' coach conducts a finesse style of soccer. This means keeping the ball on the ground and passing to the open man.

As fullback Steve Donotrio said "I think if the team can continue to play our style of soccer, we are capable of beating anyone, even Duxbury."

The captains this year are seniors Craig Langford and Phil Tye, who are both high scoring forewards.

John Muir, the Skippers lightning-fast goalie was injured against Duxbury. He eight stitches and quite a few loose teeth after he was dealt a brutal kick in the head by a Duxbury opponent.

Pat (the Cat) Duffy bravely stepped in as his replacement. Ron White and Philip Drago are the strongholds of the Skipper defense.

Soccer in Cohasset is becoming a extremely popular sport. A successful youth soccer program is now in existence. They have also initiated a girls soccer team at the varsity and junior varsity level.

The Skippers now play on Milliken field because there was not enough room for the capacity crowds on the field behind the high school.

The following years promise to be just as good if not better for Cohasset soccer players. The varsity has some fine juniors including Ed Booth, Pat Duffy, Dean Brown and Joe Whelan. They also sport a fine lot of promising sophomores namely Andy (Trashman) Pottenger, Steve Donotrio, Gordon Ricketts, Jim Leiverd, Mike Nedrow and Bill Dancomb.

The junior varsity team is learning and gaining experience and should turn into a powerful team in the future. The youth soccer programs are giving kids experience where in the past they were not formally introduced to soccer until high school.

In the future, some people think that because of the high cost of football and with the growing popularity of soccer, football will be eventually phased out. This I am sure will not happen in the near future but look for, in the near future, the Skippers to crush Duxbury and win the state championship!!

FOOTBALL

The Skippers lost a regular game Saturday to the previously winless Norwell Clippers. Cohasset received the kickoff and drove to their 49 yard line before punting.

Norwell took over on their 25 and pushed steadily down the field until 5:33 of the first quarter when Co-Captain Andy Sennet plunged into the end zone.

The scoring by the Norwell team continued and by the end of the third quarter, the score read 25 to 0 in Norwell's favor.

One extremely bright spot for the Skippers was the passing game. Tim Libby, the Skipper's junior quarterback passed for a total of 81 yards on a 6 for 11 day.

On five occasions, he hit senior tight-end Bill Duffy. Bill's amazing hands along with the running of Joe McCullough, Mike Jones and Jack McNeill produced a fourth quarter touchdown. Then quarterback Tim Libby rolled right on an option play and dove into the end zone for the two-point conversion.

The Skipper's defense certainly gave the offense a chance. Three interceptions, two by linebacker Jay McNeill and one by Joe McCullough stopped Norwell drives.

The hearts of the Skippers were not totally deflated as tackle Robby Whelan put it, "We are just starting to work as a team. We are now doing some hard-nosed hitting and we will soon start to get our act together."

Robby also explained that the three new Cohasset football coaches under the tutelage of John Leone are emphasizing a new style of football.

"They try to encourage rather than discourage," said Rob.

The Skippers should have a much better team in the future. Last year's exceptional freshmen team was one of the best in a long time and this year's freshmen team is sending some strong men up to the varsity also.

GILRS FIELD HOCKEY

Friday, the Skippers field hockey team played to a deadlock with Hanover, saved by a last minute goal by Janet England.

This improved their record to 2-1-4. This is a great improvement over last year's one-win season.

The Skippers are gaining experience and skill with every practice. When they last played Hanover they lost 2-0.

The Skippers are led this season by Co-Captains Linda Whitlow and Heidi Brown.

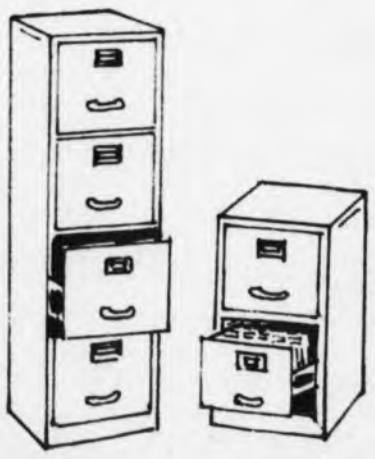
With a strong starting defense of Anne Bear, Linda Whillow, Bridget Farren, Heidi Brown, Karen Froio and a strong offensive attack sparked by Janet England (high scorer), Brenda Whitlow and Linda Curly and Alicia Gurnis, the Skippers should have a winning season.

They have a strong group of sophomores coming up this season and a good lot of freshmen will be joining the team nest year. Look for the Skippers to dominate the South Shore League in the next few years.

BOYS CROSS COUNTRY

The Cohasset Cross Country team uplifted its record to 4-1 when it inched passed a strong Abington team 28-31 on Friday. The Skippers are tied for second place with Duxbury right behind the Sachems of Middleboro.

Placing in the top ten for Cohasset were Scott Benbow, Chris McNabb, Mike Kearney, Mike Ellis, Nils Gjesteby, Charlie Tibbets and the unyielding Dave (the Antelope) Zobel.



FLEET-FOOTED Annie Abrussese's on her toes for the JV team.

Answers From Metcalf & Eddy Consultants

The questions presented herein are from you — the answers are from Metcalf and Eddy Engineers, consultants to the town on the proposed wastewater treatment plant.

We felt the questions were provocative and the answers straight-forward. We also feel the complete packet is well worth reading before 7:30 p.m. Monday when special town meeting will convene at the high school auditorium to decide this issue and other sundry matters.

1. What would be the projected construction costs for a 500,000 gpd sewage treatment plant?

About $3 million versus about $4 million for a 1 mgd plant. The smaller plant would represent a decrease of about $100,000 in the Town's share. Both plants would have duplicate units for reliability.

2. From an engineering perspective, what is the basic difference or differences between the Whale Meadow site and the so-called Music Circus site? How do these differences impact the costs of building at either of these two sites?

A plant at the Whale Meadow site would require a seawall, as protection against flooding. A plant at the Music Circus site requires a longer effluent force main, due to its great distance from the ocean.

Overall, the construction cost of the Music Circus site is about seven per cent higher than at Whale Meadow. The Music Circus has greater operation and maintenance cost and potential odor complaints because of there being more homes nearby.

3. Are there any State and/or Federal laws or regulations now in effect or pending which would prevent the building of a new sewage treatment facility in Jacobs Meadow?

There are presently no State and/or Federal laws or regulations which would prevent the building of a new treatment facility in Jacobs Meadow. Although the site is completely within a coastal wetland, there is no State wetland restriction order on the site which would in effect compel the Cohasset Conservation Commission to deny a permit for construction.

The site, however, is still under the jurisdiction of the act and the Conservation Commission still retains permit authority, subject to State and judicial reviews and public hearing.

The existence of specific protection criteria under the act, however, would make it difficult to the point of preventing the issuance of State and consequent Federal permit.

In addition, the eligibility of the site for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places provides another means through which construction would be prevented.

3b. Are there any such laws now in effect or pending which would make the approval procedure difficult regarding to building such a facility at this site? At the Whale Meadow site? At the Music Circus site?

Inland and coastal wetlands are rigidly protected by both State and Federal regulations. Wherever practical, activities in wetlands are discouraged. Where there exists no practical alternative for construction in wetlands, measures must be taken to minimize adverse effects. As indicated above, protection criteria for coastal wetlands make construction at Jacobs Meadow unlikely.

The construction on the Whale Meadow site involves activity in a freshwater or inland wetland, and although it is next to a coastal marsh, the quality of the site and the extent of potential impact is such that adverse impacts can be mitigated by restrictions assigned to the Conservation Commission 's wetland permit.

The Music Circus site is within 100 feet of a freshwater wetland and thus falls within the Inland Wetland Act. As in the Whale Meadow site, a wetland permit which indicated restrictive measures may be issued.

4. Under Step 2, would further tests be conducted at the proposed outfall site (Sutton Rocks vicinity)? If so, what kinds of tests should these be? What should be the approximate costs? At what time of the year should such testing be conducted?

Further studies are proposed under Step 2. These studies would include analytical dye studies, a series of soundings and further current studies to pinpoint an outfall location.

Subbottom soil borings are also proposed. Normally, such studies would be conducted in the summer. These costs would be about $75,000 and would be grant eligible.

5. Can an outfall from the Music Circus site go under Little Harbor, under Sandy Beach, and thence into deep ocean water?

Yes, but such an outfall route would be prohibitively expensive and would probably constitute a significant environmental impact on Little Harbor and Sandy Beach during construction which would have to be evaluated.

6. On Page I-8-42 of the report, why is not a cost for Biodiscs included under Alternative No. 2?

The cost of $350,000 has been included in the total, although it was not typed on the table. The total should read $4,371,000.

7. On Page I-8-46, biodiscs are shown to possess risks — such as questionable equipment reliability, due to their recent development, and they are said to be affected by low temperatures — a common occurence in New England; further, on Page I-11-10, biodiscs are recommended due to the factors of electricity costs, equipment noise and a possible aerosol effect.

Would not the conventional activated sludge process be more desirable if combined with whatever enclosure is necessary to counteract noise and aerosols?

In the past three years, a number of additional RBC units have been installed in Maine and Massachusetts. More than ten installations are operating or planned in Michigan. More than 25 installations are operating or planned in Canada.

The newer installations have shown better equipment reliability. Covering the aeration tanks would add significant additional cost to conventional activated sludge, making them less cost-effective than the RBC units.

8. Would Biodiscs be the recommended process for the Whale Meadow site?

Yes, most likely. However, the same concerns of power cost, noise, aerosols, and general aesthetics which prompted the RBC recommendation at the Music Circus site are present at the Whale Meadow site as well.

Detail design of the site development and aesthetic considerations will influence the final process selection.

9. If either of the Special Town Meeting articles pertaining to the siting of the facility are approved by the Town, does the appropriated money have to be used for designing a plant using the Biodiscs process?

No. Since conventional activated sludge and the RBC process were found to be equivalent, activated sludge could be selected by the Town.

The EPA and State Division of Water Pollution Control would have to approve the selection as part of their Facilities Plan review. The EPA may choose not to participate in the extra cost of covering the activated sludge process.

10. Why is it necessary to take nine acres at the Music Circus site when only four acres are needed?

The addtional land is necessary as a buffer zone between the plant and the residences on Smith Place. The buffer zone provides screening of plant operations and further reduces potential for noise and odor in the residential area.

11. Does the ten acre Music Circus site include the Original plant location site laid out by Metcalf and Eddy and, subsequently, shown at the Public Hearing on June 28, 1978? If not, why?

Is there any engineering reason that this original site could not be used? Is there any environmental reason?

No. The site shown as Lot A on Figure 11-3 is the extent of the proposed site. This site is about 600 feet northeast of the original site.

The site was shifted at the request of the Board of Sewer Commissioners in order to minimize the amount of School Department land disrupted and because the original site upon field investigation was found to lie in a wet area. It also provides additional natural screening.

12. On Page II-3-8, the report states that the criteria for a public water supply is met in the Bound Brook basin. Does this statement apply at the present time? Has there been any recent testing of these waters? Are any of these waters being polluted by malfunctioning septic systems?

The Board of Sewer Commissioners may have the answer.

13. What kinds of soil are best suited for septic systems?

Well-drained, gravelly soils in areas of gradual to moderate slope are usually best suited to on-lot disposal. In addition, the groundwater table must be at least four feet below the bottom of the leaching field.

13a. What area is needed for a properly built septic system?

The area required for a septic system varies with the permeability of the soil. Poorly-drained soils require more area than well-drained soils.

Presently, the Board of Health requires a minimun leaching field area of 80(square feet. This was recentl changed from 600 square fee With a septic tank and reserv leaching field area, abou 2,300 square feet of lanc would be required.

It should be noted that mos areas of Cohasset would re quire significantly more leach ing field area.

13b. How does poor drain age in an area affect septi systems?

Poor drainage reflects the inability of the soil to absorb water. Clay soils, hardpan, and bedrock, which are found extensively throughout Cohasset, are examples of soils found frequently in areas o poor drainage.

Division champions were as follows: hunter division, Jenifer Hanlon first, Tammy Ehrstein second; fitting and showmanship, Jenifer Hanlon first, Tammy Abromowich second; equitation division, Jenifer Hanlon first, Tammy Ehrstein, second.

Also, adult division, Sally Davenport first, Chris Rowe second; pleasure division, Debbie Osborne first, Sally Carr second; beginner division, Anne Marie McKenna first, Kerry Anne McGovern second.

Moderator Addresses Committee

Moderator David E. Place recently made the following statement to the Police Chief Selection Committee:

Dear Sirs and Madame:

I appreciate the opportunity to be heard during your deliberations, both as your Town Moderator and as a citizen of the Town of Cohasset.

You are working up the procedures that you believe your Committee should follow in carrying out the mandate of the Town Meeting, our legislative body, by which you were created, and you are preparing a job description, or standards, for the selection of our next chief of police.

First, I see these general elements: Cohasset is a beautiful small New England town . . . its population by and large concerned, conscientious, intelligent, law abiding community of 7600, and its grand natural terrain and climate and proximity to a great city. We who live here have a heavy responsibility to preserve and nurture it. It is a very special opportunity to be the police chief here.

The position of chief enjoys substantial pay, combining dollars with prerequisites and work near home benefits. A town such as Cohasset does not need, nor would he do the job well, a person qualified to be head of the F.B.I.

Second, to consider the qualities which I believe your Committee and the Board of Selectmen should look for in serious candidates for chief, as a preface I wish to emphasize that my thoughts below do not constitute criticisms of the present personnel or practices in our department, which I believe is generally run diligently. I believe that the motive to do a good job exists throughout the force.

My further belief is that there is a substantial misconception as to what type operation by the police is desired and is appropriate for our town. Over all, I think it should be low key, friendly, family-oriented, men enjoying respect of one another within the organization, and mutual respect between the force and townspeople, as well as an operation having the professional skills needed for small town police work.

Specifically, justice should come naturally to the officers, i.e., even enforcement of the laws, common sense application as a father or mother handles his child. We wish to strive for equal treatment, be it of stranger, town resident, young, old, families of Town officials, black person, owner of large businesses, small home owner, etc.

We are concerned about the example set for the young and for us parents. The more significant areas appear to be handling (a) conduct of the young, (b) drinking and driving in all ages, and (c) property invasion and theft. We have hardly any city type major crime.

Some miscellaneous examples: If we need rifle sharp shooters, they may be drawn from the state police. Loud sirens are not in order. Single officer in a patrol car suits our needs. Conservative operation of patrol cars is desired.

I believe that these practices are what a large majority desire in the Town. In choosing a chief, the qualities of honesty, professional training — with assurance that he has achieved the skills and has the capacity to continue to learn — orderliness, are basic requirements.

The need for brilliance does not seem important to me. I hope he will, above all, have an extra measure of common sense; that he will be a sound and loving family man, that he will aspire to good professional training and a happy ship for his men, and seek fair pay and good conditions for them as opposed to sheer size of force, quality not quantity.

In your position, I would like

Major citizen input could be used for the final process selection, the outfall study and tests, the architecture of the buildings, and the final siting of the structures.

FROM ENGINEER'S REPORT

In June 1978 samples of water were taken at 23 locations, 7 of which directly effect the water supply. All 23 samples, tested by a private laboratory, showed both coliform and fecal coliform too numerous to count (TNTC).

In March 1979, again 23 locations were tested. Some location different from the previous testing. These samples were tested at the Mass. D.E.Q.E. Laboratory of the Lawrence Experiment Station, Lawrence, Mass. All samples showed fecal coliform count of 5 or more.

Of the 23 locations, 7 directly effect the Water Supply. Fecal counts ranging from 5 to 2500 per 100 ml. It has to be assumed, that this is directly related to malfunctioning septic systems.

Kids Put It Together At Paul Pratt

By Richard E. Hayes

"Put it together with summer reading" was the theme and 135 Cohasset children did just that at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Nearly 3000 books were read in the annual program designed to instill in children a love for books and reading that will last a life time. One hundred-eighteen children earned reading certificates and 87 children read 20 books to qualify for a paperback book of their choice.

The paperbacks were donated by the Friends of the Library, a group which aides the library in many worthwhile projects.

Parents were asked to sign each child's reading tally card affirming that the books read were appropriate for his or her reading level. Three children each read over 100 books.

All participants helped each other put it together by adding their names to puzzle pieces that created an optical design on a wall-sized puzzle in the children's room. The huge puzzle was planned by Liz Glasfeld, a library volunteer.

Congratulations to all 135 who put it together at the library while having fun this summer:

you to know of final candidates: what is the spiritual habit of his family — what does the pastor have to say, what do his neighbors say about him as a neighbor, what do the school officials say about him, does he have children of his own and are they well thought of as citizens, what do fellow officers have to say, how was he regarded by his own teachers when he was in high school and by his peers?

When the Selectmen are considering the finalists for this post, it will be wonderful if the type investigation has occurred which addresses these issues. Your task is of the highest importance, with long-range effect, to our town. Thank you, for all Cohasset, for your labors.

Fall Fishing:

Angler's Last Chance

By Lindy Blaisdell

Okay, so it's a little nippy and your dreams of a giant striper have been put away for another year.

This is a time for football games and falling leaves and wood-burning stoves. Right?

Half right. This, for the hearty souls with foresight, is also the time to go fishing. It is, in fact, a prime time to fish because species of all kinds are preparing for the winter and feeding heavily in anticipation of the cold to come.

Fresh water game fish such as trout and bass are moving back to the shallows. Striped bass and bluefish are foraging their way south along the coastline. Flounder are moving into the estuaries to spawn and Coho salmon are ascending the rivers in hopes of nesting before they die.

With cooler water here smelt are showing up in harbors; cod are moving in close along the beaches and pickerel are only a cast away.

This, then, is the best time of the year to fish. So grab an extra sweat shirt and let's see what is available and where it's available.

SALT WATER

Stripers went by us almost without notice earlier this spring. Their return trip to Jersey and points south has been hastened by an abundance of squid, menhadden, mackerel and fishermen.

Stripers have been caught off Scituate and around the mouth of the North River. For the past six weeks, they've also been taken in Plymouth along Brown's Banks, Plymouth Beach and Bug Light. Some are up to 40 pounds. Live lining with pogies and trolling pogies or mackerel (if you can still get them) by boaters is the trick that works best. If casting from shore, use cut bait or plugs.

Bluefish didn't show up in the devastating numbers of other years, but they are still around and can be caught by trolling umbrella rigs or casting with surface or sub surface plugs. A recent lucky trip for me was out in front of Pilgrim Power Plant.

Flounder should show up any day. We almost filled my boat with them two weeks ago in Quincy Bay. Check the floating bait barge in Weymouth for flattie information. We found ours on the north side of Grape Island. Slate and Bumpkin are other good spots. Sea worms work best but night crawlers are much cheaper and almost as good. Look also for flounder in the Kingston Bay channel, around Clark's Island and in the North River.

Jigging for Cod offshore should pick up after a few frosts and cold days.

Sweet little smelt, the smallest of all salt water fish actively sought by fishermen, bring more people out than all other fish combined. They are in. Scituate Harbor has been unbelievable. Plymouth Harbor is always good. Marshfield at Green Harbor comes in third with Duxbury Marina fourth. We recently filled a bucket using garden worms for bait. Some use shrimp or sea worms while others (especially in Plymouth) use chunks of sperling flesh.

One evening on the Driftway docks (Scituate) produced several three-inch flounder along with an assortment of crabs; however, on a good tide smelt are numerous.

Have you noticed all the small pollock around lately? I found some pleasure in them one evening along the Driftway with a fly rod and hares' ear nymph.

FRESH WATER

For those wanting one last trout supper, my advise is to travel to Cape Cod. Last week, over 9000 nine-inch plus rainbow and brown trout were released in Plymouth and Cape ponds. For those interested in brookies, try almost any small clear stream in Mariner territory. This is the time of year the brookies leave small ponds to spawn in the numerous creeks throughout the South Shore. Brookies are usually small, five to ten inches, but tasty. Bound Brook in Scituate and the South River Watershed area of Marshfield are two good spots. Use worms drfited down stream.

Little and Ferring's Pond in Plymouth are close to home for some good rainbow action. Worms or salmon eggs should fill your creel. If you are energetic, try casting small spoons or spinners. We proved the trout are hitting at Ashument Pond a few weeks ago with a nice stringer, including one at just under three pounds. I used corn for bait.

Bass and pickerel can be found in the shallows among pads and grass. Live bait such as shiners or chubs work well. Plugs, spoons, and spinners, cast near cover or plastic worms worked slowly over the bottom close to shore, will also produce.

Now that the weeds are out of Jacob's Lake in Norwell, you should get some good fishing near the Island.

Any of the small ponds locally have bass...Stump in Pembroke, Muddy in Carver, Chandler's in Duxbury to name a few.

Perch, sunfish and hornpout, better known as panfish, are abundant. Most anglers use light equipment with worms and a bubber. You may be surprised to find good yellow perch fishing in the slow moving streams along the expressway in Duxbury Marshfield, Norwell and Hanover.

Look for deep-water pools under cut banks or dams. Drift a garden worm and spinner combination for action. Hornpout are usually active at night; however, they can be readily caught during daylight hours this time of year. Worms or small chubs on the

How often the past and the present meet here on the South Shore. Old houses facing south to catch each precious ray of run, are neighborly with today's angular, squat ranch house. Horses clopping along our country roads give way to the honk of a car, while youngsters whirl by on their 'wheels,' no longer content to just meander along on foot. The giant fireplace where the housewife did her cooking and the family warmed their feet, has been replaced by our modern fixtures. But, today, as then, we are still looking for ways to make life even more simple. Carol Virtue to the rescue! This muffin recipe makes enough batter so that it may be stored in the refrigerator until your family is ready for the next batch of

COLORADO BRAN MUFFINS

2½ c. sugar
1 c. of Crisco, plus 3T margarine.
1 qt. buttermilk
2 c. 100% all-bran
2 c. boiling water
4. bran buds [a cereal]
6 c. flour
5 tsp. soda
2 tsp. salt
4 eggs

Pour boiling water over bran. Let stand, while creaming sugar, shortening, eggs. Add buttermilk and other ingredients. Mix all together. Bake at 400 degrees for 16 to 19 min. Store remaining batter in covered container in refrigerator.

When Indian Summer graces our towns, spirals of smoke curl upwards from cozy fireplaces, perfuming the air. As temperatures plummet, appetites rise and in each of our homes, the kitchen light goes on just a little earlier as we prepare yet another meal. Just imagine greeting our harvest season with these hot, buttery

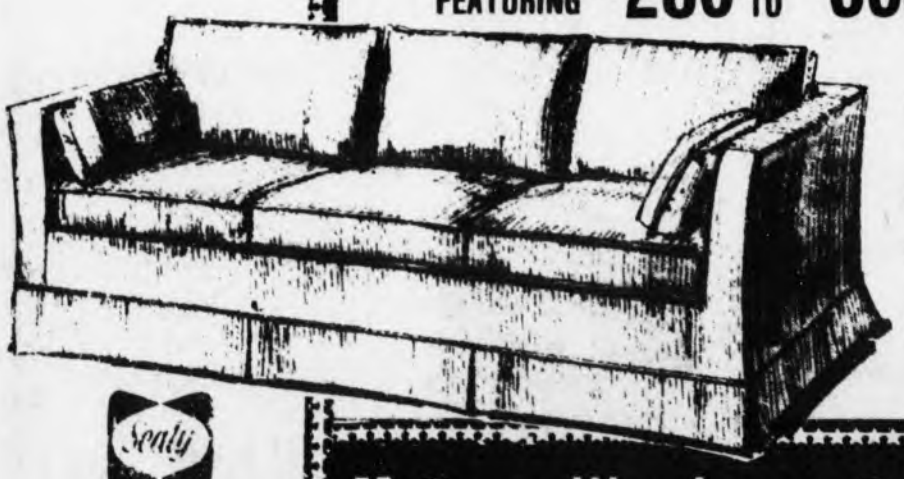
PINEAPPLE NUT PUMPKIN MUFFINS

1/2 c. pumpkin, cook, mashed
1 beaten egg
1/4 c. melted margarine
1/2 c. well-drained crushed pineapple
1/2 c. sugar
1/2 c. milk
1 1/2 c. flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. baking soda
1/2 salt
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 tsp. nutmeg
1/2 c. chopped walnuts

Combine first six ingredients in mixing bowl. On a sheet of wax paper sift rest of ingredients, except nuts. Combine both mixtures, then stir in nuts. Spoon into 12 cup muffin tins. Bake in 400 degree oven for 20 to 25 min.

To the Indians of our area, they were "crane-berries," because they used to see thousands of cranes in those days busily pecking at little red berries which grew in great abundance. When the Pilgrims arrived, the Indians introduced them to the little red berry we know as "cranberries." Before machines took over, the bogs in our area were harvested by workers with their weird looking wooden scoops and we can make Esther Klitsch's relish yearround, thanks to the booming industry we know now.

NEW ENGLAND HOLIDAY CRANBERRY RELISH



1/2 c. lemon juice
1 envelope plain gelatin
1 c. boiling water
2 c. fresh cranberries, chopped
2 oranges, including skin, chopped
2-4 packets of Sweet 'N Low

Mix lemon juice, gelatin and hot water until gelatin is dissolved. Mix cranberries, oranges and Sweet 'N Low together. Fold cranberry mixture into gelatin and refrigerate till thickened.

Brainteasers... ...Round 6

Growing weary? Here's the finale of the Mariner Brainteaser contest.

BRAINTEASERS PART VI

1 — A certain boy has as many brothers as he has sisters, while one of his sisters has twice as many brothers as she has sisters. How many boys and girls are there in the family?

2 — The wife of which president was nicknamed "Lemonade Lucy?"

3 — Name a four letter word without a vowel.

4 — As I was going to St. Ives,

I met a man with seven wives.

Every wife had seven sacks,

Every sack had seven cats,

Every cat had seven kits.

Kits, cats, sacks and wives,

How many were going to St. Ives?

5 — There is a male entertainer whose first name is Merle and also a female entertainer with that same first name. What is the last name of each?

6 — There is a colorful word of six letters that is spelled the same backwards as forwards. This word contains only three different letters. What is the work?

7 — bozo-bat plus ball. Assuming that this is true and that 5 bo's make 1 zo, what digit does each letter represent?

8 — At a certain cocktail party there were a certain number of couples and four women without escorts. The hostess divided the guests into groups of three, two women and one man in each group. How many couples were there?

9 — What do the following have in common:

Suerige, Helvetia, Hellas

10 — Just before the end of the term four high school students were discussing their chances for certain grades. The following remarks contain the gist of their hopes and fears:

Jack: We'll all get different grades. If I get an A, then Lucy will get a D.

Jean: If Lucy gets a C, then Jack will get a D. Jack will get a better grade than Paul.

Lucy: If Jean doesn't get an A, then Jack will get a C. If I get a B, then Paul won't get a D.

Paul: If Lucy gets an A, then I'll get a B. If Jean doesn't get a B, I won't either.

When the final examinations were graded and the terms marks made out, each of the four passes and strange as it may seem, each received a grade that checked exactly with all the ideas they had previously expressed. What grade did each receive?

Bonus: Who was this woman?

1. Born of wealthy parents but took up the cause of the oppressed.
2. Died at age 38.
3. Was a poetess and translator.
4. Was influenced by Emerson.
5. One of her poems has been read by more people than any other work (outside of the Bible).

ANSWERS TO PART V

1. If we let M-1, M-2 and M-3 represent the missionaries and let C-1, C-2 and C-3 represent the cannibals, with C-3 able to operate the outboard motor, then this is how they crossed the river:

1. C-1 and C-3 cross, C- returns.
2. C-2 and C-3 cross, C- returns.
3. M-1 and M-2 cross, C- and M-2 return.
4. M-2 and C-3 cross, M- and C-2 return.
5. M-1 and M-3 cross, C-3 returns.
6. C-1 and C-3 cross, C-3 returns.
7. C-2 and C-3 cross.

2. 1818

3. a. Mata Hari b. Casanova c. Ringo Starr d. Tom Thumb e. Blackbeard the pirate.

4. Wolverines, Tanagers, Daffydowndillies, Phoenixes, Larkspurs, Minervas and sprites tied, Pandas.

5. Chow, echo, home, omen, mein (or any other acceptable answer)

6. They are all islands in the Cape Verde Islands.

7. no sure path

Kennedy Meeting In Cohasset

South Shore citizens who are interested in becoming actively involved in the growing movement to support Senator Edward M. Kennedy for President in 1980 are urged to attend a meeting to be held Wednesday, Oct. 24 at 8 p.m. in the Cushing Room, Cushing Plaza, Route 3A in Cohasset.

The meeting, which will be co-chaired by State Representative Philip Johnston (D-Marshfield-Scituate) and Donna McGee of Cohasset, will be the kick-off to an organizational drive to gain support for Senator Kennedy on the South Shore.

Draft-Kennedy activity in Massachusetts is coordinated by Citizens for a Democratic Alternative, a statewide group which is sponsoring the Oct. 24 meeting in Cohasset. Rep. Johnston serves as a member of the Steering Committee of C.D.A.

In a statement, he said, "The steady growth and proliferation of the Draft Kennedy movement across the country is a clear sign that voters are looking to Senator Kennedy for leadership, direction and inspiration. Grass roots activism is the key to any successful campaign and it is for this reason that we hope many South Shore residents will attend our meeting on Oct. 24 in Cohasset."

Fishing

bottom are their preference.

Saving the best for last... sunfish are my favorite eating of all fish. Filleted, rolled in pancake mix, then deep dried, they are sweet and tender. Just toss a worm into any water and chances are the little kivers will be there waiting for you.

It's Chilly

By Lois Martin

Decent Americans everywhere are freezing to death. Even as we speak, chilly people are resisting turning on the heat. Not since Nathan Hale's stirring comment have we made such sacrifice in saying, "I regret that I have but one thermostat to turn down."

And for the next month or so we stand steadfast in our pledge to survive without heat coming up from the cellar through the pipes. Nice residents have silent pipes that don't click as warmth flows through them. We've set our standards. No fire till the pipes freeze. We plant shrubs inside. Storm windows and doors will stay intact right through August next year to contain dog day's heat wave until Halloween.

PATCHES

Just the other evening the old boy came home and sat under the quilts beside me on the couch. "It's snowing in Maine," he said, "and the temperature's dropped to 40. Do you think we could put the heat on just to take off the chill?"

I was appalled, taken aback, that a person so close to me should have weakened albeit momentarily. Together we counseled, reviewing our commitment to goose bumps, the trademark of country over comfort. "Remember," I said, between chattering teeth, "we agreed to use the furnace as a planter through Thanksgiving."

It's true children could catch pneumonia after watching a soaking JV football game in the rain. But we lead people with blue-tinged lips to the edge of the toaster and keep making toast for warmth. We save leftover baked potatoes to place at the foot of the bed. We huddle by the hot water heater and stand under warm pipes. And we dress by the pilot light in the morning.

There are many rewards for surrendering warmth. I've promised the children individual snug sacks for Christmas in which to hop to classes. We have the fireplace by which to take our meals, a cozy flashback to days of yore. We make hot meals which retain heat for the first 30 seconds of eating before ice crystals form on the meatballs.

Why, time was we'd turn up the heat in the morning before taking a shower. It's invigorating this way. You lie still in the bed and concentrate on how you'll dash to the bathroom, fill the enclosure with hot steam and plunge in. The scurry in running through rooms heated up to 47 degrees is comparable to calisthentics.

And we're getting so innovative. What other nation boasts wool panty hose? Where else are people so energy wise that they sit in their cars until the heat fades from a trip to the store? For the first time our afghans are being used as shawls. A few are considering zipper winter coats of insulation fabric to wear inside buildings.

The true patriot flicks off the main furnace switch so the furnace won't come on even when the temperature falls below the minimum setting. I admire that ilk. You've seen them, the three-sweatered people who waddle around not because of weight but because of clothing. They make soup out of everything for the heat — hot dogs, fruit in season, whatever.

But they tend to develop personality quirks. They like to sit very close to you at school functions. They go to all of the events for the heat and count on spectactor body warmth for survival. Their noses are redder than those of the energy wasters. And they're just a month or so short of wearing the lifesaving thermos around their necks like the famed St. Bernards. They say it's hard to make salad with their mittens on and the families do complain about the fuzz in the hamburg patties.

But I commend them. They've set goals for the rest of us. It's going to be a long winter and with a setting of only three allowed on the electric blanket (under the pledge of energy allegiance code), it'll be tough sledding still spring.

But we can do it. Choose your friends by the size of their woodpiles. And, if the opportunity arises, invite an oil executive for dinner, make him a hot meal, and see to it that he shares his snug sack with the dog.

BUYING/SELLING WITH COHASSET REALTORS

The Century 21 office in Cohasset will be two year old this coming February. The young office now employs two full-time realtors and two more are about to join.

Wayne Sawchuk, owner of the local franchise, projects a staff of ten sales associates by this time next year.

Sawchuk is a native of Cohasset who entered real estate via the construction business and as a direct result of his background in commercial real estate with a New York firm.

Sawchuk said he bought the Century 21 franchise because he saw a need to provide buyers, sellers and sales associates with the type of professional services a national corporation provides.

Century 21 has the largest referral network in the world. Over 8,000 offices throughout the U.S. and Canada participate, he said. "This assists each office in helping the homeowner sell his home as quickly as possible with the least amount of inconvience."

He added: "At the same time, it enables us to offer professional guidance to the home buyer whether he chooses to buy property locally or to relocate."

Century 21 advertises extensively in every medium. With this support each office is capable of gaining better results then any single office could hope to accomplish.

Still, the backbone of Century 21 is the hometown individual like owner-manager Wayne Sawchuk, who knows his community well and has a fierce pride in it.

Jazz Improvisation Thursday

The South Shore Conservatory of Music in Hingham will offer Jazz Improvisation workshops for teens and adults beginning Thursday, Oct. 18.

Open to all instruments and voice, these evening sessions will be conducted by Tim Kelly, an instructor of Jazz Piano at the Conservatory.

Three workshops will be available for pupils from those who have only a basic knowledge and are able to read music to those who have had some experience with improvisation and finally for advanced musicians who would like to perfect their ensembles technique.

For information call 749-7565.

Puppet Show At Lamplight

A puppet show, presented by the Boston Lamplight Theater, will be held at the Hingham Public Library on Sunday, Oct. 26, at 3 p.m.

A Halloween special, the show is called 'The Mystery of the House of Spirits.'

This is a show for family members ages 5-10 and adults.

Tickets at $1 may be purchased in advance in the Children's Room. Those who choose to purchase tickets at the door should call to be sure tickets are still available.

South Shore Birders Honored

The South Shore Bird Club will be among those honored by the Massachusetts Audubon Society at its annual meeting, Friday, Nov. 2 at 6 p.m. The meeting will be held at the Museum of Our National Heritage in Lexington.

The Club has been chosen to receive the Audubon "A" award for its major contribution in the completion of the statewide Breeding Bird Atlas project. Wayne Petersen of Whitman, President of the Club will accept the award.

NOVENA TO ST. JUDE

O holy St. Jude, Apostle and Martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles, near Kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need, to you I have recourse from the depths of my heart and humbly beg to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance and help me in my present and urgent petition. In return I promise to make your name known and cause you to be invoked.

Say 3 Our Fathers, 3 Hail Marys, and 3 Glorias.

St. Jude, pray for us and all who invoke your aid. Amen.

Publication must be promised.

I have had several petitions granted. Publication promised.

This prayer should be said on nine consecutive days.

First NOW Meeting

The Plymouth County Chapter of the National Organization for Women will hold its first general meeting of the season on Thursday, Oct. 18 at 8 p.m. in the Cushing Room of the Rockland Trust Company, Cushing Plaza, Rte. 3A, Cohasset. The guest speaker will be Sarah Traston-Barao, who is on the staff of the Governor's Commission on the Status of Women in Exile.

Ms. Traston-Barao is especially well qualified to ask the question, "Why is the Governor's Commission in Exile?" since she has been associated with the Commission during portions of three governors' terms. She was appointed to the Commission in 1974 as a high school student, and later served as a staff assistant to the Commission under Dukakis. When the Commission was fired by Gov. King earlier this year, Ms. Traston-Barao resigned in order to continue to work with the Commission in Exile. She will share with N.O.W. the background of the Commission and the goals of the exiled Commissioners.

All general meetings of N.O.W. are open to the public.

S. Shore Folk Concert

On Friday, Oct. 19 the South Shore Folk Music Club will feature in concert New England's best folk singer, Bill Staines.

This is Bill Staines second concert at the South Shore Folk Music Club. At the first, he performed to a sellout crowd.

The concert starts at 8 p.m. at the Beal House, Rte. 106, Main St., Kingston, Ma. Tickets are $2.50 per person, $2.00 for members. For more information please call 837-0932 or 746-9120.

Town Meeting Voters Favor Sewage Plant

Voters at Monday's special town meeting agreed that Cohasset needs a new wastewater treatment plant.

But whether voters will be able to agree on the site for the proposed facility when special town meeting reconvenes Monday night is anyone's guess.

Much of what happens this Monday will depend on action taken by the school committee this week.

If the school committee is unable to free 10 acres of the Music Circus site from its educational encumbrances and should the mood of last Monday's meeting carry over to this Monday, then it is doubtful that voters would act with only the Whale Meadow site before them.

A great many of the bugaboos about the proposed facility on either site may have been put to rest. For instance, should the facility eventually be located on the Music Circus site it will still afford 70 acres for a new school at a future date.

Odors from the plant at either proposed location would be objected to, but they may cease to be a main issue by the time Monday night arrives.

Like a black cloud, the threat of a suit if the town should not act soon, hovers over voters' heads.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark again warned voters that the state has threatened if a plan is not approved it intends to prosecute the town for violations of the clean water act and of the discharge permit conditions for the existing plant.

The town's cost for the $12M plant would be $3.9M, with the possibility of a $1M grant for the construction of lateral sewage becoming available sometime in the summer of 1980.

The project would take four years to accomplish.

DATES

As of Jan. 1982 the town will no longer be allowed to discharge into James Brook. By Oct. 1, 1980 the town must

Chief's Job To Be Advertised

Advertisements for a new police chief will be placed in three professional police journals in December and will be made available to all Cohasset police officers as a result of a vote of the selectmen last week.

However, it is felt by at least some town officials and police officers that the individual selected will probably not be from the Cohasset force.

Chief Randolph Feola will retire from the position which he holds under Civil Service in July, 1980. His successor will not be under Civil Service as 1979 annual town meeting voted to remove the chief from the status.

Selectmen said last week they like the wording of the advertisement for the $20,000-$24,000 range salaried position, which will allow a wide range of individuals with different types of experience to apply. A bachelor's degree will not be required, but supervisory experience as a law enforcement officer is stipulated.

The selectmen will make the final selection of police chief from a field of three candidates who will be selected by the police chief selection committee. Terms will be subject to negotiation, but selectmen said last week they would be inclined to offer a three-year contract, the maximum contract allowable under law.

The deadline for returning the application for the position is Jan. 31, interviews will be scheduled by the police chief selection committee, which meets on the second Monday of the month at 8 p.m. in the Congregational Church office.

The elderly woman from Hanson who lost control in last year's Cohasset JC's haunted house did not do so this year, but she came out the back door shaking and said the Cohasset house is still the most frightening experience in the greater Boston area — and she goes to all of them.

A few more Cohasset and Hull residents agreed.

In order to prepare for my first walk-ever through anybody's haunted house I went over to the Beechwood House late Saturday afternoon and met the ghouls. I thought this might take some of the tingle out of the tour later that night. Ha.

Multi-Use Septic System Approved

A board of health hearing last week was packed with both proponents and opponents of a variance, granted by the board, which will give 79 Atlantic Trust the option to serve four or six homes with a multi-use septic system.

One opponent to the variance said he will consider appealing the board's decision. State Title V regulations prohibit the use of subsurface systems for more than one lot.

Heralded as the "first-of-its-kind" in the town, abutters in the area appeared to have problems with not just the multi-use septic installation but with any new building in the area and its effect on drainage and the environment.

There were so many complaints of flooding and septic problems in the area that the board of health is seriously considering doing dye testing of homes along Atlantic Avenue.

Wayne Sawchuk, agent for the trust, said the multi-use system would provide more environmental protection than any individual system could by utilization of a common collection chamber and by affording the trust the option of adapta-

'Stabbed'

Hell via an elevator. This is no illusion. The elevator really goes to Hell. Anne Gilman and Philip McGee operate this machine from behind the scenes but may show up in other areas of the house in later days.

In Hell John Kuhn, Sr. is torturing people, among them his son, John Kuhn, Jr. Under the pendulum is Barron Salvidor who gets sliced down the middle just as we leave. "I can't do this next weekend because it's homecoming," Barron said.

According to very reliable sources, John Kuhn, Sr. can sometimes get very carried away and will especially frighten and grab people he knows. Last year Regina Schultz took her dinner party on the tour and when Kuhn recognized her he grabbed her and threw her to the floor. The dinner party was horrified.

Randy Salvidor was a zombie in that first room, but we passed through as quickly as possible and didn't dry to find him.

A MURDER

Unfortunately, one person in every tour group gets murdered by Jack The Ripper (David Reynolds). Everybody is informed upon entering that they do so at their own risk, so it's legal. Julie Vita plays a very seductive lady of the night, but she just kind of hangs around under the strobes and the lamp-post. It's one of YOU the Ripper wants.

THIS COULD HAPPEN TO YOU AT HAUNTED HOUSE

Suggestion: cling to the fringes of that room and hold hands. People with long blonde hair should detour that room.

HEAD TOSS

After one of us is murdered, we find ourselves before Robert Whelan, who is about to cut off Pete Carlson's head. Pete has been known to lose his head over many things before, among them women, but this is the first time he's gone this far. Cute, the way Bob throws Carlson's head, dripping with blood, to our group. Wear old clothes.

IN THE FOYER

Now we know why Rob Tis, Mariner Sports Reporter, had such sloppy copy last week. He's been at the haunted house, doing his thing. More blood. Poor Bonnie Whittemore. Last week his copy was only sloppy, this week it will probably have blood all over it, I think, as we continue the tour.

In the next several rooms you will be horrified beyond your wildest imagination. We never promised to tell you everything. Dracula, graveyard ghouls and a sacrifice ci.mber await you. Unfortunately, Mr. Lucas met his end here. His tombstone is in one of the rooms: "Here lies the body of Mr. Lucas, murdered by his 5th Period Art Class." Unemployed art teachers take note.

At the conclusion of this madness, we respectively suggest that a new town census be taken.

Student Enrollment Decreased In All 3 Schools

Shortly after School Superintendent John Maloney told the school committee last week there had been an overall decline of 99 students in the school system this year, selectmen received a letter from Continental Wingate Co. which specializes in converting school surplus buildings into condominiums.

School officials have recently commented on the matter of the shrinking school population and it is possible that there will be a layoff of teachers at the end of the school year should the trend continue, especially at the Osgood School.

Predictions have also been made that the Osgood School, an old plant, will eventually be closed. But to date no one has suggested what number of students would trigger that move, although Dr. Maloney has given the Orwellian 1984 as a target date.

Total enrollments decreased at all three schools this year with the most dramatic decline being at the Osgood School which lost 62 students this year. Deer Hill lost 27 students, the high school, 10. The total school population is presently 1,622.

School Supt. Maloney told the committee last week there could be a slight increase in those numbers based on the number of homes which are presently for sale in the town.

A quick check with a realtor showed 24 homes on multi-listing, with a number of other exclusive listings throughout the town. However, one agent said she felt many of the homes on the market were put there by speculative sellers who are testing their price.

Man Guilty On Lobster Charge

If you enjoy eating undersized and illegal lobsters, the going price may have climbed a few dollars as the result of the all night work of three Natural Resource Officers and the findings of the Dedham Superior Court.

Officers John Comeau, James Hanlon and Alan Leck were involved in the stakeout of a boat landing in Cohasset Harbor from 9 p.m. on June 14 to 6 a.m. on June 15. They were there because reports indicated that short lobsters were being landed at that location.

As the night advanced a truck arrived at the Cohasset landing — the driver, a fisherman named James Ford, of Hingham, looked the area over and left. At 4 a.m. Mr. Ford returned with his own truck, appeared to check the tide level, and again left the area.

He returned again at 6 a.m. and this time pulled in a rope attached to a crate which was underwater at the landing. The crate was placed in the pickup truck and driven from the landing.

Alerted, by radio, Officer Comeau in an Office of Environmental Affairs Law Enforcement Cruiser stopped the truck and the three officers examined the content of the crate. They found 170 short lobsters.

On August 17, 1979, Mr. James W. Ford, 21 Surrey Drive, Hingham, was found guilty of the possession of 170 short lobsters and was fined $4250.00 by Judge Mathew McCann at Quincy Court. Mr. Ford appealed the findings to Superior Court.

T.M. Waits For School Committee Decision

A large number of the 547 voters who attended Monday's special town meeting were outraged to discover that the Music Circus site was not a viable option to them.

Legal hangups developed last Friday when Town Counsel Blake Thaxter opined that the Music Circus site was a moot one unless the school committee voted to turn to 10 acres of town-owned school-designated land back to the town.

At a speical session held before Monday's meeting, a resolution by the school committee to free the site failed by a 3-3 vote (no action).

School Committee Chairman Jack Langmaid said early Tuesday morning he would attempt to call another special meeting of the committee this week, possibly Thursday, to have the committee reconsider its vote.

In anticipation of a favorable vote by the school committee, special town meeting voted to adjourn until 7:30 p.m. Monday at the high school auditorium.

Landmaid, Frank England and Diana Kornet voted in favor of releasing the land to the town while Patricia Walsh, Martha Gjesteby and Irene Brown voted against the move. School Supt. John Maloney also recommended against the action.

RESOLUTIONS VOTED

Sewer Commissioner Chairman William Montuori, faced with the dilemna of having only one site option available, opted to ask for two resolutions.

Montuori explained that under law a site must be chosen for a facility before it can be financed. Accordingly, he decided to take "the temperature" of voters on the sewer matters before them.

After a brief discussion of the recommended management plan by Metcalf & Eddy Engineers voters resolved that the town should appropriate a total of $560,000 for what is essentially Article 11 of the special town meeting warrant. The vote was 333-131, more than the two thirds vote required if it had been legally voted. The resolution called for working plans and specifications.

Montuori then asked that town meeting "resolve" to ask the school committee to free the Music Circus land as a site for a wastewater facility. The vote was 268-148 in favor.

Articel 10, the Whale Meadows site option, was the only legal motion presented to voters of the three sewer articles. It failed to receive a two thirds vote.

Favor Plant

file a complete application for grant money. By March 31, 1982 the town must commence construction of the facility.

According to Selectman Clark, the Water Pollution Board has advised the town that it cannot delay a decision on the facility until annual town meeting 1980. The town has already been in violation of the law for the past 80 days.

The advisory board is in favor of the Whale Meadow site 5-4.

The capital budget committee is against either site. It asks that the expenditure be further studied.

The planning board recommends the Music Circus site.

The selectmen are in favor of the Whale Meadow site.

Resident Charlotte Leland feels alternatives to a facility should be further investigated.

Whatever is decided, Tom Killelea wants his money's worth.

Gilbert Tower is in favor of Whale Meadow.

Sewer Commissioner Lot Bates, in disagreement with the rest of his commission, prefers the Whale Meadow site.

First Nine Articles A Snap!

In less than an hour and with no discussion special town meeting took favorable action on the first nine articles of the warrant.

Police and fire one-year contracts for the fiscal year 1980 were ratified by voters. The men will receive what amounts to five per cent increases.

The town will pay the firemen's contract with $27,578 from surplus revenue; $23,691 for personnel services and $3,887 for expenses.

The police contract will require $20,920 from surplus revenue; $20,200 for personnel services and $720 for expenses. Eleven patrolmen at the maximum step will receive a 6.13 per cent raise.

It was also voted to pay $336.90 in unpaid bills and $970 to reimburse Tichard Sargent of Cohasset for the loss of his snowmobile that was used in rescue operations during the February 1978 blizzard (Selectmen will petition the General Court for the special legislation needed to authorize payment).

Article 3, basically a transfer of money article was also voted, as was an article to appropriate $2,500 from surplus revenue for the replacement and repair of the hoist and stem on the tide gate opposite the town barn situated in Hull.

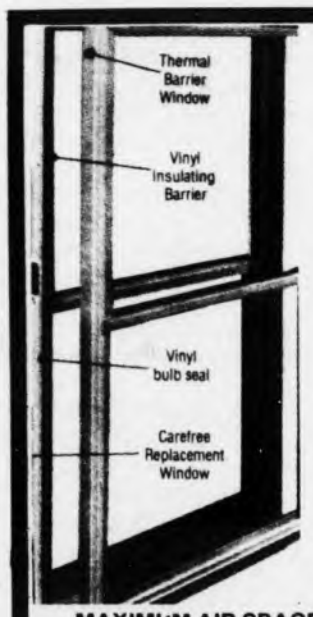
A sum of $1,500 to resurface Hull Street starting at West Corner and running 600 feet was also voted, as was an article for $1,200 to secure the services of a heating engineer to survey the heating system for the police and fire station buildings. Money for both articles will come from surplus revenue.

Halloween Safely

By Sergeant John J. Rhodes, III
Safety Officer, Cohasset Police

Halloween safety in Cohasset depends on a lot of cooperation between parents and children. To help make this a safe and happy Halloween, remember the following rules. Children:

1. Remember all the pedestrian safe walking rules.
2. Stay in your neighborhood and make sure your parents know where you will be trick or treating.
3. Be sure, if you wear a mask, that you can see. Make holes large enough to see side to side and up and down.
4. Carry a flashlight and wear light colored costumes.
5. Don't go into homes.
6. Don't eat any treats until you get home.
7. Generally, avoid tricks and pranks, don't damage property.
8. Stay in a group, never go alone.
9. Don't run into the street when going door to door.
10. All trick or treating should be completed by 8:00 p.m.



PARENTS

1. Light up your walkways and yard for the safety of children.
2. Use packaged candies if possible.
3. Make sure costumes are fitted to your child. No costume should restrict foot movement or require the child to hold additional items in his hands.
4. If possible, an older child or adult should go with and supervise younger children.
5. Drive carefully, ghosts and goblins are about.
6. Check all treats when the child arrives home.
7. Report any strange occurrences to the Police. 383-1212.

We have been lucky in Cohasset over the years. We haven't had any tragedies to spoil the fun. Let's cooperate and make the 1979 Halloween even more fun and as safe as in past year.

Get in the SPIRIT, Remember Safety First.

Kennedy

On Saturday, I broke all the rules. Over and over I said to no one in particular, "Hey, there's Caroline...isn't that David Halberstam .. there's Rosalyn...there's Joan..."

I was moved when the Boston Pops struck up "Hail to the Chief" as President Carter walked to his place. I strained my neck, watching as he grasped Joan Kennedy's hand and tilted his head to talk. I was intent on Edward Kennedy as he buried his head in his hands while excerpts of the late President's speeches echoed across Dorchester Bay. I leaned forward to see Ethel Kennedy squeeze her son, Joseph, after he finished a fiery speech that made me think of his father's barnstorming through the midwest and California in 1968.

"Good," I said to myself as President Carter, en route to the podium, stopped to shake young Joe's hand.

I was anything but blase; and never again will I dismiss Columbia Point as a ragged peninsula that is home to Boston's worst experiment in public housing.

There was splendor there Saturday and it recalled all the elegance and grace of those Thousand Days that, as Teddy said, "were like an evening gone. It was all so brief."

Too brief and in the end, far too painful. John Kennedy was my only hero (so much for the blase newsman), and if he wasn't great, he had the potential for greatness. The sadness is that he lost the chance.

I remember him as far back as the 1956 Democratic Convention when he stood at the podium to concede the vice presidential nomination to Estes Kefauver and charmed the delegates in the process. It was his most fortuitous political defeat. I remember the campaign in '60 — the primaries, the West Virginia vote, the debates and the victory speech in Hyannisport. I remember the inauguration when he left his chair to help Robert Frost. I remember the press conferences and the bemused grin that would crease David Brinkley's face as he reconstructed a Kennedy punch line.

I and everyone else remember Dallas and the four days of misery that followed. The dedication ceremonies brought it all back.

Joseph Kennedy's "political" speech seemed out of place at first. But not in retrospect. Not, after the pomp ended, when we traveled past the Columbia Point housing project and through South Boston with its unending string of racial slurs. His father, whose own papers are in the library, would have been proud.

The speaking prize, however, went to President Carter, the interloper who was surrounded by those "Ready for Teddy in '80." His speaking style does not inspire usually, but on this day he won us over with a touch of the Kennedy wit and some intimate words on his own feelings toward "his" President.

"When John Kennedy died I wept openly for the first time in 10 years...for the first time since my own father died."

The rest of us wept too when John Kennedy died, and many of us wept again when his voice boomed across the courtyard Saturday. But only for a moment, because the library has brought a part of him back.

And for that we are thankful.

Conversation With E. Carswell Farnsworth At The South Shore Plaza

By Chet Ellis

As the temperature begins its annual plunge toward the nadir of winter, so does the heating oil price rise to maintain the constant of suburban poverty at its crisis level.

If this bit of environmental economics escapes you, and you still think anyone cares, consider the graceful response to the Northeast's plight, "Let the B____ freeze in the dark," which appeared as a popular Southwestern bumper sticker in 1973.

And that was when heating oil had been raised only to 36 cents a gallon! Folks, we had nothing to complain about. We had it made.

For example, last Saturday, while rumaging through the latest new tools at the hardware store, I ran into E. Carswell Farnsworth, a young Jr. executive type recently transferred to Cohasset from somewhere in the South.

We had met a few weeks earlierat the South Shore Plaza watching the same football game in the Jordan Marsh television department. His set at home didn't work either.

He was obviously upset. He had a look like he had all his chips in the market and E.F. Hutton hadn't said anything in six months. A response other than "Hi" was clearly in order.

"What's the matter?" I asked carefully.

"I can't believe it," he said. "I just can't believe it. My fuel budget payment is $246 a month and I can't get delivery on a stove until April, the combination storm windows can't be installed until February and the insulation estimate was $4500 which I haven't got."

"I'd say you have a problem. Have you ever thought of a second job driving an oil truck at night?"

"It's not funny!" he snorted.

"Sorry, just trying to cheer you up. By the way, what sort of house have you got? Two hundred forty-six dollars a month sounds pretty high."

"It's a standard Cohasset eleven room Victorian, with high ceilings and 47 windows. A real energy disaster!"

"Perhaps you could live in the cellar," I suggested. "It never gets below 45 degrees underground. Ask the Bears."

"Very amusing, but your suggestions somehow lack practicality. If you're so smart, how are you going to stay warm until June?"

Not having any serious plan in mind, I decided to tell him to study the science of how Eskimos keep warm in their igloos, when his wife arrived on the scene. I saw a chance to avoid committing myself.

"Come on Eddie," she called, "we've got to get over t Gates store before they close. They're having a sale on long-johns and I want to make sure I get our sizes before they're all gone."

I had escaped giving him a serious answer, almost.

With an understandably disgusted look in my direction, he started out the door. Then he turned, and said "By the way, I've heard we're going to have the coldest winter in years, over 52 inches of snow and the temperature at zero for weeks. What are you going to do?"

I was caught, I had to give him a serious answer. I stood transfixed as my head ached for something to say. Suddenly, a brainstorm. I said "I'll just harness the energy generated by all the hot air at next Monday's Town Meeting. It ought to last at least six months!"

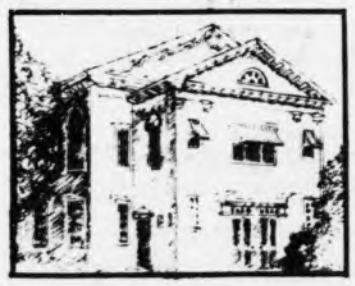
He slammed the door as he left.

Around Town Hall

HALLOWEEN

Neither the board of selectmen or the planning board will meet on Halloween. Selectmen will meet Tuesday, Oct. 30.

LICENSE



At a recent meeting selectmen voted to grant Robert Turner of Ripley Road a one-year auctioneer's license.

MBTA COUNSEL

Selectmen are seeking individuals to serve on an MBTA consumer advisory committee. Persons applying must ride the "T", be outspoken and be able to attend one MBTA meeting a month.

DYE TESTS

As a result of a recent public hearing, Dr. Roger Pompeo, chairman of the board of health, said the board may consider dye-testing homes along Atlantic Avenue as it has been brought to the board's attention that leeching systems may be failing.

HEALTH BOARD

The next meeting of the board of health will be Monday, Nov. 5. The board will discuss the town's need for common sewerage and review data on system failures. Residents are being asked to volunteer information to the health board.

RULES & REGS.

At a special meeting scheduled for 8:30 p.m. Dec. 10 the board of health will discuss rules and regulations for the town. The conservation commission and the drainage study committee have been invited to attend the session. Legal opinion will be sought regarding proposed changes. Residents should submit suggestions to the board of health by Nov. 30.

The Welfare Of Children

Letters

To The Editor:

I would like to express my support for those members of the school committee who voted last Monday night to not release the school facilities land to the selectmen for use by the sewer commission.

I feel they voted in good conscience to protect the welfare of our children; their motivation was not political; they acted in good faith to safeguard the present and future well-being of the children of Cohasset.

This is the job which we, the citizens of this town, elected them to do. And they should not be criticized for doing it as they were at the town meeting Monday night.

The engineers from Metcalf & Eddy have assured us in all likelihood there will be an odor problem if the sewage treatment plant is located on the Music Circus site. The thing we don't know is how often the odor will occur.

How could any member of the school committee, in good conscience vote to expose hundreds of children at the Joseph Osgood School to this type of situation?

A gentleman at the town meeting was concerned about the pollution of the waters if a four or five day breakdown occured if the plant was located at Whale Meadow. How about the pollution of our children if the plant is located on the Music Circus site?

It is about time that people expressed as much concern about the welfare of their children as they do about the welfare of the fish!

Looking Back

Oklahomians Look For Cohasset 'Pratt' Ancestors

By Peter Barnicle

Ezekial Pratt was the first physican in Cohasset.

Don't take my word for it. In fact I didn't know it until I talked with Mrs. George Pratt of Williamstown, Mo., a recent weekend visitor to our town.

Mrs. Pratt and her sister-in-law, Catherine (Pratt) of Blackwell, Okla., played truant from a foliage tour to get a look at Cohasset. After all, if you're traveling from Oklahoma to Canada and through Maine and New Hampshire, Cohasset is not that far off the road.

At least it is in the same general area and Mrs. Pratt and her sister-in-law decided that this was the time to look into their Pratt ancestry.

Mrs. Pratt, a retired school teacher, said that her study of the family history showed that an Ezekial Pratt appeared in St. Louis, No., in 1845.

"There is some indication that he spent some time in New York City before moving west," Mrs. Pratt said. "But why he made the move is unknown.

"In any case, he married a woman of French ancestry about 1848 and then, probably because of health, moved to the northeast corner of Missouri in 1885. We are living on the same land. Of course we have a new house. The older one deteriorated through the weather."

Williamstown, she told us, is across the Mississippi from Quincy, Ill. (They pronounce it Quinc-ee).

Mrs. Pratt said she first became interested in the family history after her husband's older sister contacted the Mormon Church in Salt Lake City.

"The Mormons have one of the best genealogical files in the country," she said. "There is a Pratt who is very famous in the Mormons, but he is from the branch of the family that moved west from Connecticut. From 1622 to 1636 there were eight different Pratt men who came over from England to this area and scattered. Two of them went to Connecticut and Orson, the Mormon, was a descendant of these two brothers."

The Cohasset Pratts, said she, are descended from Phinhaes Pratt who first showed up in this area about 1622.

Phinhaes Pratt (the second 'h' was dropped about 1700) apparently was a member of the group which set up a colony at the town now known as Weymouth. History tells us that this settlement was made up of unsavory characters who in the winter of 1622-63 were reduced to eating roots to prevent starvation.

Phineas Pratt took off through the woods in an effort to reach Plymouth Colony and obtain aid. Along the way he ran into an Indian & or Indians — and found shelter in the underbrush. Legend has it that he slept that night in what we know as Cohasset. In any case he reached Plymouth and Capt. Miles Standish was sent to the aid of the starving settlement.

The Pratt name has been associated with Cohasset ever since.

The lady from Missouri was most interested in Ezekial Pratt who was born in 1780 and lived in "the south half of his father's house on South Main St." He was known, according to the "Genealogy of Cohasset Families" as a "Physician."

His son Ezekial was born in 1816, the second son of Ezekial and Mary (Lincoln) Pratt. Mary was a second wife, and her son was named Ezekial after a son of the same name, born to the first wife in 1805. He died in 1815.

Mrs. Pratt's own ancestry goes back to the 17th century when her people immigrated from France to North Carolina.

"My maiden name was Perisho and my people moved from the northeastern part of North Carolina to Oklahoma many years ago," she told us.

So the Pratts of Cohasset are connected to the Perisho family of North Carolina?

This is not going to have any effect on the Dow-Jones Averages tomorrow, but somehow it gives one a feeling of the continuity of family life and, with a little thought, the way in which the United States grew.

Teacher Recommends Student Trips!

By Patricia Coultrip

If you're looking for a special graduation or Christmas present for your child or a personal treat for yourself, perhaps you would be interested in learning of two possible European trips being offered under the direction of the American Institute of Foreign Study (AIFA) based in Greenwich, Conn.

A trip called Showtime in London will leave Boston April 12-20 and offers four evenings at the theater, one in Stratford at the Shakespeare Theater, and bus trips to Oxford, Cambridge, Bath, Stonehenge and Blenheim Palace. A British host-guide will show you London including the Tate and National Art Galleries. The cost is approximately $730 all inclusive.

Another possible trip next summer called Moscow Olympics is a month including five days in London, 14 days in Russia seeing Moscow and attending at least one session of the Moscow Olympics, visiting Leningrad, Odessa or Kiev and other Soviet cities, two days in Amsterdam, four days in Paris, and two days of travel elsewhere.

Both trips include staying at the charming Richmond College, a handsome neo-Gothic institution situated on the Thames in Richmond. Byron's old stomping ground, the pub Three Pigeons, is a short walk on the Thames nearby. Guided tours to the Tate and National Galleries, the Kremlin, the Hermitage and Art Gallery in Leningrad, the Rijks museum in Amsterdam, and the Louvre are among this trip's features. The cost is approximately $2500. Both trips should be tax deductible as educational experiences.

In the summer of 1976 I went as a student to East Africa under the AIFS. Not only did I earn five graduate credits in the study program, but my group which included students from all over the U.S. and adults who learned even more than did the students, enjoyed a five-day safari along the Rift Valley ending in a five-day climb up Kilimanjaro.

I climbed with students from California, Missouri, Wisconsin, Illinois, and New Jersey. As a participant on that trip, I can vouch for the varied cultural opportunities and personal care which AIFS gives. Even getting malaria for a few days cost me nothing and I actually enjoyed seeing a Nairobi hospital and being under the care of a black woman doctor.

One of the electives I teach at the high school is called "Understanding People." I've often wished that my students taking this course could have the opportunity to extend their experience by meeting other students across the country on a foreign program to view, first hand, other people, their cultural values and lifestyles, and to develop more cosmopolitan insights into human nature and customs.

My own ten trips to Europe beginning when I was 19 have enriched my life, by meeting different people and developing new reading interests. When one visits East Africa, one reads Isak Dinesen's "Out of Africa" and James Ngugi's "The River Between." But it's people and live ones who cement understanding and promote curiosity in a student's mind.

In my own case, my travels have led me to do a "roots" in England in the summer of 1978 where I located 16 "live" Coultrips in Kent.

Cemeteries and church records yielded nearly a hundred other Coultrip names but it was the wonderful person-to-person contact with those Coultrips alive which were most gratifying. There's substantial English blood in Cohasset which might be researched to discover English connections.

Sister Catherine Madden of Cardinal Spellman High School in Brockton, the regional supervisor of AIFS, has offered to explain the AIFS program in more detail and to show a twenty-minute film of various AIFS trips around the world. She will be speaking to anyone interested on Thursday, Nov. 1 at 1:45 p.m. at the high school.

Anyone, whether student, parent or adult who is interested in either trip is welcome to meet with her then. Or you see me at the Open House, Tuesday, Oct. 30. I myself would accompany either tour as counselor, chaperone, or companion.

If there's a will to see the world, there's always a way to earn or save the money. It's exciting and educational to explore the world first hand. I hope you'll join me.

Multi Use

tion to public sewage when and if it is provided in the area.

Dr. Robert Sceery, in a letter to the board of health, had various questions about the proximity of the leaching area to Treats Pond, ground water elevation. He implied that the board of health in granting the variance would be bending Title V regulations. Sceery also said the area had been flooded four times since 1964.

Dr. Pompeo, chairman of the health board, answered each of Dr. Sceery's questions noting that the plan had been pre-approved by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering and by the local conservation commission and appeals board.

"I feel the intent of Title V is not to automatically disallow multi-use systems," Pompeo said of the proposed development, of which the smallest lot is 1.5 acres and the largest 5.7 acres.

Pompeo said the proposed development had more test holes (eight) than any other development in Cohasset. "I feel to require more of 79 Atlantic Avenue would be discriminatory against them."

The development is not in the floodplain but it is in the floodplain protection area. The elevation of the leaching system will be constructed out of the floodplain. Flood insurance is available to prospective owners of the lots and elevations were dug to 78 and 84 inches, three feet in excess of the four foot requirement. The leaching area is 80-ft. from Treats Pond.

When an opponent to the development stated that is was the intent of the law to prohibit building in the floodplain, Pompeo said it was not the function of the board of health to prevent the building of housing, but to ascertain whether the builder complied with Title V and in this instance to decide whether a multi-system would be better than separate systems.

Stephen Andrus of 149 Atlantic Avenue said "I feel the proposed systems will be in the floodplain area in spite of elevation."

"In Cohasset many systems are built up. We are all vitally concerned with protecting the surrounding area," Pompeo said.

Renie Chiasson, a plumber, said he felt the common system is the best thing that could happen on Atlantic Avenue.

Salvador Claims Mooring 'Deal'

Harbormaster Harry Ritter and the board of selectmen were all caught off guard last week by a letter from Dana Salvador of Elm Court who threatened a lawsuit if he is not supplied with what he feels is his "rightful" mooring for a lobster boat in the harbor.

D. Salvador claimed that Mark Salvador recently sold his boat to Police Officer Cliff Jones — who has not yet transferred the registration and continues to use the Salvador mooring.

D. Salvador also claimed that M. Salvador and Jones had a "sweetheart" deal, further noting that he has been number one on the mooring list for the 22-ft. mooring.

According to D. Salvador, he has not been gainfully employed since December 1978 because of illness, but said he and three generations of Salvadors have made their living by lobstering, whereas Jones lobsters on a part-time basis.

Selectmen said they would query council about the matter and talk with Ritter before deliberating the issue. Ritter said in a phone conversation last week that moorings do not go along with the sale of any boat but that there is a grace period in effect should M. Salvador decide to purchase a new boat.

"The question is," Ritter said, "can the boat remain in the harbor after it is sold and for how long? I haven't been informed of the sale of the boat."

Variance For Jacome System

At a public hearing last week the board of health voted to grant Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jacome of 42 Norfolk Road a variance from state Title V regulations which will permit them to repair a breakout in their leeching system.

Edwin Young, the Jacome's engineer, presented a plan to the board by which two 40-ft. long trenches will be constructed to relieve the situation.

Young said the soil in the area is poor and that a perk test was unable to be done because the initial drop couldn't be accomplished.

Board member Marilyn Sweeney suggested that Health Inspector Kevin O'Brien check with the highway department about a change of drainage in the area.

At a previous meeting it was noted that the town had closed off two ground water drains in the vicinity of the Jacome property and that since that time the Jacomes had had difficulty with their sewage system.

With the exception of the last five years Young told the board the system had functioned well for 68 years.

Murray Asks For Overtime

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull) announced today she had signed a bill which would force the Commonwealth to assume all overtime costs incurred by cities and towns in the staffing of essential police, fire and other personnel during the recently declared state holiday in honor of the Boston visit of Pope John Paul II.

Mary Jeanette stated, "I don't feel it is right for the state to declare a state holiday and then order cities and towns to pay any employees who must work that day overtime."

☐Suzanne Ellis, daughter of Chet and Jane Ellis, 33 Tower Lane, is participating in the U. Mass Foreign Study Program during this, her junior year. She is attending the University of Hull, England, located 300 miles north of London. She is pursuing a career in Environmental Science. Her friends and customers at the Log and Line miss her and wish her a good year in England!

Last week I urged parents to bring their children to see Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman's (Osgood School art teacher) exhibition at the South Shore Art Center, there through Nov. 9. While aware that her portfolio contained portraits and figures (mainly nude studies), I failed to make the obvious connection that some of the nudes would undoubtedly be hanging in the show. Well, indeed they are and they're beautiful, artistic, and tasteful. However, you may choose to go view them sans kids!

☐The Pinata ladies — Margie Knox and Marilyn Adams — have been churning out more and new pinata designs for two coming engagements at the Bull Market at Faneuil Hall and for general holiday sales. The painted and crepe-papered papier mache delights now come as Halloween-ey bats, pumpkins, and spiders, as well as princesses, clowns, bulls, rabbits, Martians, butterflies, Santa Claus, Frosty the Snowman, and children's favorite TV characters. You will find these charming and unique pinatas at the Bull Market during the week of Oct. 25 to 31 and again between December 6 and 12 (11-9, Mon. through Sat. and 12-6 on Sun.) or, locally.

Mary Coe looks in the good shape she says she's in for the coming touch ice hockey schedule she will play with the Women's Ice Hockey Team.

Larry Drago (remember Larry's "Zinc oxide" nose and baseball cap from the Summer Recreation program?), a junior majoring in political science, is keeping busy as President of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity.

☐Kevin M.J. Fox has been named advertising director of "CondoOwner," the monthly magazine of Condo. The Condominium Owners Assocation.

Fox will be responsible for all advertising sales and will also head other marketing and promotional campaigns conducted by the magazine and association.

Before joining "CondoOwner," Fox was sales manager of Computer Games Inc. of Hingham, Mass., a firm manufacturing coin operated computer amusement games and computer portrait systems. Previously Fox was sales representative for the Glassic Car Co. of Cohasset, Mass., and for the Roman Research Co., also of Cohasset, a manufacturer of one-step ear piercing systems.

Fox graduated from the Cohasset High School Alternative School and attended Graham Junior College, Babson College and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

In addition, Fox has been a volunteer fund raiser for the Boston Ballet Co. and WGBH-TV, Channel 2 in Boston, Mass.

☐Lisa Kurtz, Eric Hurtig and Philip Trask will participate in the Massachusetts Youth Wind Ensemble Concert at 3 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 17 at the New England Conservatory in Boston.

International Fellowship, an organization which services students wishing to study in foreign countries has an immediate need for host families in Cohasset. A family who is willing to host a Mexican boy immediately or a Brazilian boy or girl starting in January should contact the Guidance Office for more information, 383-6102.

☐Cohasset is not only a nice place to come home to, but it's a place people come back to! Returning to town, after a short relocation in Georgia, are Robert and Mimi Anderson and their family, Katie, 11, Michael, 9, Brooke, 7, and Chipper, 5. They are now living at 27 Highland Avenue. Bob is Vice President of Parker, Eldridge, Choll, and Gordon, executive recruiters and consultants, located in Waltham.

Not so recent returnees are Joyce and Joseph Hoffman who lived in Connecticut for two years, but favored Cohasset, moving back for good five years ago; Herb and Karen Crehan came "home" two years ago after a year in Texas (they liked the chili and music though!):

For some residents the move never happens and new careers are born because locale outweighs the job change. John Durkin, 10 Ledgewood Drive, has started his own business with a Wellesley associate, Joe Brown, called Brown Durkin Marketing Group. John had an out-of-state job, but he didn't want to move so he launched a food brokerage business this fall, located in Waltham. His wife Rita and family are delighted to be staying too!

NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY

Baseball Star Dick Donovan Is Pitching For Conway

By Bill Connell

A new and challenging major league business career is under way for former baseball star Dick Donovan of Cohasset who now sells real estate in the Quincy area for Jack Conway.

His big league pitching march ended in 1965 after 15 colorful seasons that included stints with the Braves, White Sox, Senators and Cleveland Indians.

Highlights were one World Series stand against the Dodgers in 1959, participation in five All-Star games, and one year when his earned-run average was tops. Donovan wound up his stay in the majors in 1965. With the Indians that year, "I was 37 then and just about ready for a new line of work," he said the other day at his desk in the Conway Real Estate Company in Wollaston.

"There are no regrets about those wonderful years in competition which I loved, every minute. Baseball players are a great bunch, and they helped fill life with variety. There was a lot of humor and sheer fun.

"From the time I started with the old Boston Braves there was plenty of action and the travel time around the leagues seldom was boresome. But I think it was more enjoyable in the early years when we travelled by railroad, and there was fine camaraderie on the long trips.

"There was less chatter and it was more tiring later on when plane travel became common." Like many another pro athlete he mentioned the fatigue that results from hustling to and from airports and hotels, with broken rest time. But he says he wouldn't have missed those years for anything, though like all good things they had to end.

Dick Donovan is a product of Quincy's public schools and by the time he graduated from high school had earned wide attention as a baseball prospect. He went on to the Navy and served as an athletic instructor for a year. Although his normal enlistment would have been for two years he was discharged after half that time, since the war had ended and all the armed forces were cutting numbers rapidly.

He had his chance to play in the majors by 1950, with the old Braves, and over the next years starred also with the Chicago White Sox, Washington Senators, and the Indians before leaving baseball for good.

From then on Donovan was climbing the ladder with success in the stock and bond world until some months ago when he made the switch to the "Conway Country" staff.

"Real estate always fascinated me," he said, "and I'm happy to settle down in this profession.

"I am putting in long hours but don't mind that at all, and the results have started to show in recent sales."

Working out of the Conway office in Wollaston, Donovan's territory largely is in Quincy, though it can stretch into Weymouth and other areas. His years in the majors came at a good time since the expanding pension system which started after War II allowed him to share in its benefits. He looks as though he could step back on the mound now, for he weighs about the same 210 pounds as when he left baseball, and the weight is well distributed on his six-foot, three-inch frame.

He doesn't get to see much baseball nowadays. "A couple of trips each season with my two children to see the Red Sox are all we make," he says. "Other things take so much time."

"My exercise now is in tennis," he remarks. "It's a good game when you're playing for fun and not all competition."

But there are times, when Donovan is watching TV, that he says the competition would give him a lift, trying to outsmart some of today's batters.

"When they grip the end of the bat and swing for the fences it would be great fooling them with a slider or something." He grins. "Sluggers are vulnerable."

Dick Donovan

But real estate is the big game now and Donovan plans to stay in it. He has made his home with his wife, Patricia, for 17 years now in Cohasset. Their children are Peter, 15, and Amy, 12, and thus far they've shown no desire to follow their dad in the whirl of the professional sports world.

Cohasset Men Run N.Y. Marathon

By Rob Tis

Cohasset was well-represented in the New York Marathon this weekend. Scott Benbow, senior captain of the overpowering cross country team and John Mika, the writer's 10th Grade biology teacher, travelled to New York to run in this historic event.

In a sense they both won because they finished the 26-mile 385-yard course.

Mika, in amazingly good shape after the run, was on time for school Monday morning. He stated in the confusing structure of most biology teachers: "An apt cliche to fit my feelings about the New York Marathon would be, the agony and the ecstacy. The agony of the last four miles and the ecstacy of the finish."

Mika finished with the time of 3:15.10.

Benbow will not arrive home until we're practically on the streets, but he did telephone home that he beat Mika. Benbow was in New York Tuesday when the cross country team hosted East Bridgewater. Look for Mike Kearney, Chris McNabb, Mike Ellis, Steve Bowen and the unyielding Dave (the antelope) Zobel to carry the team to victory.

SOCCER

The Cohasset boys' soccer team lifted its record to 4-2-3 with an impressive win over East Bridgewater. Craig Langford paced the Skipper's attack with a powerful four-goal day.

Phil Tye, the man below that 10 gallon cowboy hat, contributed one goal and two assists. An extremely strong game was played by the Skippers' defense which was sparked by the hustle of Ron White, Steve Donofrio and Philip Drago.

One sad note, the Skippers' offensive attack will be slowed down due to the injury of Jim Leanord. Jim suffered a broken ankle in the East Bridgewater game and will see no action for the rest of the season. A rotten break.

FISHING

The smelts are running once again in Cohasset harbor. Those small and silver gamefish which just made their appearance recently will surely increase in number when the weather gets colder.

The fact that the smelts were once again running in Cohasset was not known to the public until recently when this reporter noticed the readying of bamboo poles by such noteable people as Bob Healy, James MacCarther and Peter Carlson.

Runners 1st & 3rd In Duxbury

Ten miles is a long run, especially when the temperature is 82 degrees, but two Cohasset youngsters shrugged off the heat last Sunday and finished in the money at the first annual Duxbury road race.

About the same time Bill Rogers won the New York Marathon, tenth graders Mary Jo Mahoney and Mike Ellis were finishing first and third respectively in the girls and boys high school class. About 170 runners from all over Eastern Massachusetts participated.

Both Mary Jo and Mike are members of Cohasset's varsity cross country teams.

He brings to his new position considerable experience in working with students, having been Dean of Students for 10 years. Woodruff has tant to the President, Acting President and Senior Vice President.

Kelly Pleads Guilty

Theodore "Teddy" Kelly, 20, of 30 Norfolk Road will begin serving a two-year sentence at the Billerica House of Correction this Friday.

Kelly, who is alleged to be one of the East Coast's largest distributors of LSD pleaded guilty to drug charges in Norfolk Superior last week. However, he is scheduled to appear in Federal District Court on two related drug matters this week and is expected to plead guilty at that time also.

Kelly was arrested last May when police found nearly $40,000 in cash and 100,000 "tabs" of LSD in a safe deposit box at the Dedham Institution for Savings. The LSD was valued at approximately $200,000.

Kelly's sister, Nancy Florek, 22, of Dedham, was scheduled to go to trial in Norfolk Superior Court Monday on charges of possession of a controlled substance and possession of a controlled substance with intent to distribute.

THE 'LUNCH BUNCH'—Marie Barnes, Esther Bates, hostess Marie Kerr standing, Rosilla Trott, Merci Nichols.

Still Partying After 62 Years

The year: 1917.

Mildred Towle and Marie Kerr gave a party for Evelyn Frevor; she was getting married. And the "Lunch Bunch" was born. The party never ended.

Month after month after year after year for 62 years the group has been meeting together to chat about their children, play bridge and eat.

Over the years there have been a long list of Cohasset women who have belonged to this elite group. Although many have moved away, they have always been replaced . . . but only by Republicans.

"We used to play cards in the beginning but then we turned into a gossip club," Marie Kerr said.

"And we never did anything useful — we never took up a collection or took baskets to the poor. We went to eat," Esther Bates noted.

Mrs. Kerr quickly added "We didn't do it as the 'Lunch Bunch' but we did it individually. I was an ambulance driver during the war. I had a uniform, stripes and I worked in the kitchen and rolled bandages. Cohasset had a hospital then across from Osgood School."

Marie Barnes said she lived next door to the hospital and "They operated upstairs and the ether fumes would come in our window."

When Mrs. Barnes was a bride and she and her new husband were selecting a site for a new home on Sohier Street, "We almost built where the Osgood School is. They almost didn't get a Ripley Road School."

Rosilla Trott's father-in-law owned Cohasset Central Market in those days. "Every time sugar came to town we rushed to the stores." She also remembered her father-in-law packing a covered wagon full of groceries and going to New Hampshire "so he wouldn't get flu."

Those were in the days when flu threatened the young and the old alike with their lives. Marie Kerr remembers leaving for West Virginia the fall of the flu epidemic, "But I didn't get it."

Mrs. Barnes said in 1718-1719 a tanker full of molasses exploded killing horses and men in Boston. Everyone agreed that would be a ridiculous way to die. "And remember when Father Trott had a float in the 4th of July Parade and we were each a month?"

"A moth?" one of the bunch questioned.

"No, a month," Mrs. Barnes laughed.

The women remembered Chelsea burning, keeping diaries religiously, having pajama parties as young married women . . . and riding in sleighs and ice skating.

Mrs. Kerr said: "Mrs. Bates and I were both married in June. She was the first young person who came to call on me. Esther Bates married Rosilla Trott's cousin."

Throughout the years the women have always exchanged Christmas gifts. "There was a 10 cents limit at first, then it went to 25 cents, then 59 cents. I think we quit at $1," Mrs. Barnes said, adding "And the gifts had to be useful."

"And everybody had to write a poem." Mrs. Bates said.

Mrs. Barnes, also known as 'The Voice,' remembered having written a poem on how to lose gracefully at bridge, because she always did and usually to Mrs. Kerr, who admitted "I took everyone's money."

Mrs. Trott said that Mrs. Nicholas made the town seal.

"I don't think so," Mrs. Nicholas said.

"Well, I've credited you with it for all these years," Mrs. Barnes exclaimed.

Topsy Turvey parties were popular — husbands and wives would both attend these, wearing one another's clothes. "Although we had to borrow Esther Bates' shoes for Lloyd," Mrs. Trott said. Picnics were popular events during summer or winter. Mrs. Trott said Marie Barnes had a winter picnic at her home one year . . . covering the floor with a tarpaulin full of sand and a lobster pot. "It was lovely."

And I had a lovely time. Thanks so much for inviting me.

Your friend,
Tanna

Village Shop Talk & Super Buys!

By Larry Fone

The shopper in the village and harbor area will notice many new items in the shops this time of year. New products are introduced by manufacturers and importers and Cohasset merchants are quick on their feet to bring you these new items.

For example, the Linen Chest has imported Chinese bowls of blue and white design ideal for bulbs at $2. Beautiful rattanwaste baskets and other intriguing woven placemats, coasters and hot mats at fine buys. Take a look-see!

Cards and Shards has opened their Christmas shop including handcrafted decorations, cards and co-ordinated gift wrappings. Also this season a new line of doll houses and miniature furniture for the little folks and collectors. Leisurely shopping as usual and Sunday mornings Sue and Dick Straley invite you to coffee and sweet rolls.

The Corner Lighthouse now provides a full bridal registry service and is featuring an elegant blue French China.

Custom pine wood boxes of ample proportions have been designed by the Wooden Nickel on Main St. Your choice of stains offered at $55.00 (3 weeks delivery).

BEST BUYS AROUND TOWN

Scott Liquors has a wonderfully dry jug wine, Casata Chablis, three liters for under $5.

The Log 'n Line bakes daily the biggest, "plumpest" muffins you will ever taste in several flavors at $3.98 a dozen and worth it!

Great progress has been made on the exterior refurbishing of the Independence Gown Museum and thanks to the "Cohasset Community Garden Club" for their generous contribution for landscaping which has begun and will be complete early spring when the special plantings are available.

And thanks to the thoughtful lady who donated six dozen orange tulip bulbs which we will all enjoy in the srping.

While walking in the village stroll by the historic houses and enjoy the delicate and tasteful plantings by the "Cohasset Garden Club." Makes one feel good that there are so many people who will make an effort to keep our town beautiful!

Murray Against Disclosure

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, announced this week that she is totally opposed to any financial disclosure requirements for municipal officials. The Representative stated that she had contacted many of the elected and appointed officials in her district concerning proposed municipal disclosure requirements.

The responses she received from these officials were all unanimously opposed to this type of financial disclosure.

Two Rivers And The Good Ship Columbia

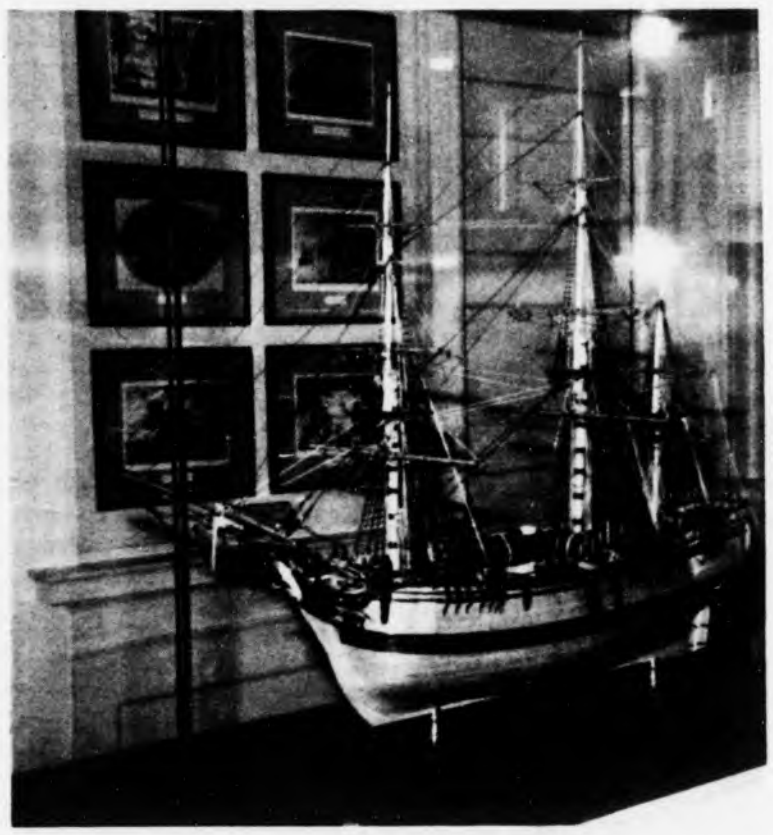
By Ann Fogg

"The Columbia River drains the western slopes of the Rocky Mountains and forms much of the border between the states of Washington and Oregon. The ship captain who discovered it named it for his ship, the Columbia."

Every school child tucks that information into his American history slot somewhere between Cornwallis surrendering at Yorktown and Sacajawea helping Lewis and Clark find their way across the Rockies to the Pacific Coast. Those who live on the South Shore cram in beside it an additional fact, "and that ship Columbia was built right here on our own North River."

On a recent trip to the Pacific coast, I decided to see how the Columbia is remembered there and to see if the two rivers correspond in any way, the small estuary in Massachusetts where her keel was laid and the mighty powerhouse of the West to which she gave her neme.

In 20 years of living beside the North River, I've dug clams on the mud flats, dropped lined for flounder and cod and trolled for bass, camped and swum and beachcombed at the sandspit, and explored the entire river by canoe, reading all the bronze plaques at the sites of the old shipyards, Hobart's Landing and Brickiln and Block House.



Whether I'm rowing out in grey mist or slanting rain to bail my friend's boat, gazingat the marshgrass turning golden in the soft autumn sunlight, or paddling silently in the moonlight on a fullmoon high tide, the river speaks softly to me of all its history of Indian campsites and busy shipyards.

I wish I could say that I followed the Columbia River from her source high in the Canadian Rockies in British Columbia. But I can't because we didn't. We saw the Columbia first in harness at Grand Coulee Dam and were grandly disappointed. The workers' trailers and small houses had a temporary, tacky appearance, the visitors' center was closed, very little water trickled over the dam, and the water in Roosevelt Lake was low.

The mist-shrouded falls in the center of Spokane on the Spokane River, one of the tributaries of the Columbia, had prepared us for something much more spectacular.

We saw her next late that same afternoon after driving across the vast wheatfield of central Washington. Acres of newly combed earth and of new bright green shoots bordered the road on both sides, and long pipes on great wheels stood waiting to irrigate the land. Finally we dropped down a steep grade through a canyon with a trickle of water at the bottom, then turned south through a greening valley beside the broad, placid river.

It was mid-April; the valley was filled with apple orchards just coming into bloom, and the view across the white blossoms to the barren, almost treeless plateau and the faraway snowy peaks of the Cascade Mountains made a three-season sight. The waters of the Columbia are responsible for one of the richest wheat lands in America and for turning the otherwise arid valley into the Apple Growing Capitol of the World.

Model of the Columbia

It was another week before we saw her again; instead of following her south to the Oregon border, we drove north and then west over the North Cascades to the coast. After exploring the lush Skagit Valley and part of the Olympic Peninsula in an unseasonable week of sunny weather that made the headlines and dominated the conversation over coffee at the diners, we worked our way south along the foothills of the Cascades to Longview, 50 or 60 miles

A spectacular tide of crimson and gold, scarlet and brown, yellow and purple is sweeping our way. Ever cooler nights and shorter days cause the complicated chemical processes in the leaves to shed their summer greenery.

Hard on the heels of our first frost comes Indian Summer and though the local tribes aptly named October's Harvest Moon, it wasn't until 1794 that the term "Indian Summer" first appeared in print, long after the Algonquins roamed our woods.

"No fruits — no flowers — no leaves, no birds — November!" Thomas Hood's dismal lines conjure up dreary visions of things to come and the Old Farmer's Almanac predicts mild weather at the start of the month, ending with a Thanksgiving snowstorm. Cloudy days call for careful watering of your house plants to prevent disease. Listen to the weatherman before watering and on sunny days water your plants early in the morning so that the soil surface dries before dark. If the day promises rain or grey skies, water only those plants that absolutely need it. We kill too many plants with kindness, for overwatering is a major cause of houseplant troubles.

This coming Saturday we turn back the clocks as a farewell gesture to summer's daylight savings time. Those who are attuned to nature's changing seasons say that for every October fog, there'll be a winter snowstorm. You can't deny it has been a foggy month. Plenty of berries and acorns are signs of a severe winter to come and the early migration of birds the weekend of the 13th could only mean that our cold weather was the cause. By noontime of the 15th, over two hundred birds had been banded at Manomet Bird Obsevatory, some kind of record.

Of all sights in nature calculated to make one's nerves tingle, nothing is finer than to be warned by a distant call in the sky, honk!, honk! and then to see a V-shaped wedge of flying geese. They look so leisurely, but in reality they're flying at express-train speed, 50 miles an hour or more, on their journey from Canada to their winter haunts in the Carolinas or around Chesapeake Bay. The tireless flight of these large birds for thousands of miles and their exact sense of direction, inspire a sense of awe as they glide by a mile above us.

This is the time of year when patrons of Lou's 139 Restaurant look forward to sipping a glass of home-made cider. No such luck though, for although the Lou Bournazos have scoured the countryside for apples, up until last week none were to be found. Seems the spring rains ruined the local crops, but they're still searching for the McIntosh they prefer. Lou actually made his own maple hand-turned press and in the past he and his wife had a fun-time chopping up the apples, pressing them and straining out the "mash," to later delight their dining customers with a glass of home-made apple juice.

People who travel love New England for its changing seasons and for many, this is their favorite time of year. Helping us appreciate all that Fall has to offer, is a task well done by the staff of South Shore Natural Science Center. Bruce Sorrie is there to explain the mysteries of migration, Jerry Niksch, president of the South Shore Astronomical Society, to show us the wonders of our evening skies. Barbara Devine has grown up learning about nature and her Wednesday morning walks reveal a wealth of plants and birds that escape the eye of a novice.

Elizabeth Lawrence is another volunteer who shares a wealth of knowledge on walks such as the one she will lead on the 31st exploring salt water tidal pools. A walk in the woods on the 7th day of November will seek out berries and mosses for woodland terrariums to be made in the workshop to follow.

Pictures from all over the nation vied for top honors in the contest sponsored by Crockett's "Victory Garden" program, but it took a Cohasset man, Peter Abbott, to garner first prize for his backyard vegetable garden. A trip to England in the spring was awarded him at the studio last Friday and aired on Channel 2 last night.

Though membership of the Norwell Garden Club is limited to 25, the public is well aware of their talents. Their decorative dried arrangements and herb wreaths were sold out before their annual fall sale was over and next they are planning a program which will be open to the public. On Nov. 8 at 8 p.m., Anthony Tedesco will display his decorative talents in a demonstration entitled "Traditionally Christmas."

Refreshments will be served at the First Parish Church and advance sale tickets may be obtained by calling Mrs. Everett Russell of School St., club president, for the $3.00 tickets. Members will soon turn to their annual stint, making Christmas wreaths for Town Hall and the Library.

If you're hoping to coax your Christmas cactus into holiday bloom, place it in a cool, dark place such as a cellar or garage. Don't water the plant for a month. Then return it to its normal indoor spot. The rest period between summer growth and late fall blooming should guarantee a handsome plant in time for the holidays.

Indian Summer provides one last chance to plant our spring bulbs so strong root systems will develop before the ground freezes. The average planting depth for daffodils is six inches and about three for tulips. Don't plant them upside down — tips point up!

This is National Honey Month for all of us. But for the honey bees it's a time to retreat to the hive, venturing out only when the temperature inside is above 57 degrees. Rollin Bailey, Norwell's well-known beekeeper, tells us that with the first frost, when the flowers stop blooming, the honeybees no longer gather their nectar. Honey is a natural sweetener and comes in many flavors, depending on the crop whose nectar the bees collected. If you have a sweet tooth, bypass the sugar bowl for a recipe such as this for:

HONEY ORANGE COOKIES

1¼ c. whole wheat pastry flour
1 tsp. low sodium baking pwd.
¼ tsp. sea salt
½ tsp. cinnamon
½c. butter
½c. raw honey
2 eggs
2T orange juice
Grated rind one orange
1 c. oat flakes
½c. chopped pecans

Mix the flour, baking powder, salt and cinnamon. Beat the butter, eggs and honey well. Add the juice and rind. Stir in the flour mixture. Stir in the oat flakes and pecans. Drop dough by teaspoonfuls on oiled pan. Bake 10 to 12 min. at 350 degrees. Makes 3 dozen cookies.

Uncle Harry's apples won't be on sale this year. His beautiful orchard bordering the North River off Union St. didn't produce its usual bountiful crop, and the native farmer blames it on too much rain after the blossoms formed last spring, saying this kept the bees from pollinating. We'll just have to postpone our annual visit and search elsewhere for apples for Evelyn Ferreira's

CHOPPED APPLE CAKE

Grease and flour loaf pan, 8½ x 4½".

In small mixing bowl, stir together:

1½ c. unsifted flour
¾ tsp. baking soda
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. each of cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg.

In large mixing bowl, beat together 'til smooth:

1 c. sugar
¾ tsp. baking soda
¾ c. corn oil
2 eggs and ½ tsp. vanilla

Slowly pour dry ingredients into liquid mixture. Stir in two or three cups peeled and chopped apples and 1/2 c. nuts. Bake in 350 degree oven for 1 hour and 10 min.

Paula Tingle is "busy as a bee" with her two little ones, so this recipe is a particular favorite in her house, as it takes only minutes to prepare. You'll note the ingredients are of the type you usually have on hand, so that's another plus. Her mother passed the recipe on to Paula for this moist, spicey

TOMATOE SOUP CAKE

3 c. flour
1½ c. sugar
3 tsp. baking powder
1½ tsp. baking soda
1c. shortening, melted
1 can tomato soup, plus
1 can water
½ tsp. each allspice, cinnamon
1 tsp. each cloves, vanilla
1 c. raisins

Dump everything into mixer and beat till thoroughly mixed. Paula suggests a greased, floured large bundt pan and when cool, top with a butter cream frosting. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 50 min.

A Warm Shower

By Lois Martin

Women over 40 become disoriented when they attend baby showers.

It's like trying to speak Spanish again after not having heard it since high school. The situation is familiar, even endearing but something deep down inside the woman knows she might not tease to speak the baby language again in her home.

And it's strange. Nothing so warms our hearts as the anticipation of a baby. But most of us, once we've sent children to college, are excited only about other people's motherhood.

I attended a baby shower this month. It's almost like a foreign country. The gifts today are magnificent. There were no diapers for heaven's sake, the former stronghold of a shower gift. They don't use those now. They give instead all manner of clever bathtubs, attractive dinnerwear and snazzy outfits for the recently born.

In the olden days you got three tee-shirts, swaddling blankets and a mound of safety pins with pink Donald Duck enclosures. Gifts are more appealing today. They do it up right. The mother-to-be whom I joined in showering, received this sharp pair of blue overalls with "Boy" emblazoned on the vest.

It was a grapic gift. One look at those britches and you could see a little fellow tearing into the pots and pans cupboard straining for the refrigerator handle and swirling the bathroom facility water with the dog's tail.

At our ages baby showers are a flashback. It's like roller skating. We may be out of the habit but it comes back to us the minute we see the skates.

There are many women who have babies when they're my age (even). Certainly for my crowd, pregnancy is both the most dreaded and yet the most fondly remembered experience. Those who have them at our ages do so wittingly, knowingly, and with options to consider if we so choose.

And, for the most part, I've decided God is pretty darn careful about over 40 people who are awarded children. He's selective and that's a blessing. But I must confess while I will be among the crowd that fairly weeps with joy at the sound of a newborn, I'd prefer it were someone else's. Otherwise my weeping might indeed go beyond the gentle aura of joy.

Through the ages and stages of our lives, we grow into baby showers, have a dirth of invitations for a number of years and then grow back to them for other generations. It was with great relief Inoticed we didn't play any pregnant games at the mature shower I attended. Remember how they tie up that ribbon then pass it along behind the women to see whogetsfistfuls of knots? Well those knots, as you recall with trepidation, signified the number of children you'd have and what sex. I was never guaranteed that was an old wive's tale.

Women at a baby shower are everything they're cracked up to be since time immortal. We laugh and joke a lot. And as we grow older, we've grown wiser and our laughter is based on inside knowledge we share.

But as we weed out certain things in our evolution toward equality, I'm constrained to say I hope we keep the showers. They are joyous occasions whether we're out of practice with the baby language or not. These events are a symbol of life's revitalization. We get to see tiny clothes again; we are treated to marvelous cooking by women who know how to do it up brown . . . and we give thanks for a new life . . . for which we're responsible only as friends.

BUYING/SELLING WITH COHASSET REALTORS

In the past 23 years Jack Conway & Co. Realtors has grown from three sales associates in one office to 250 sales associates and many offices scattered throughout the greater Boston area, Cape Cod and southeastern Massachusetts.

Recently, the company formed its own mortgage company and several years ago it entered into the home insurance market.

Muriel Desmond, a Scituate resident, became manager of the Cohasset office three years ago. "I was a sales associate for 17 years before Jack convinced me to take over the manager's position," she said.

Mrs. Desmond feels the Conway Company is unique in several respects: "We're a multi-office company and we're unique in the fact that we can service many towns. Last weekend alone the Cohasset office set a record by selling 3/4 M in residential property. Approximately 150 homes pass through the Cohasset office yearly."

She also noted that Conway Co. is a member of the world's largest referral service, "RELO", which services transferees worldwide.

Conway Co. also requires its managers to take courses throughout the year in various aspects of real estate so that they are updated at all times regarding market trends.

But Mrs. Desmond especially likes the fact that Jack Conway hired her when other realtors had not yet realized the contribution that women could make and are now making to the real estate business.

Murial Desmond, first woman sales associate hired by Conway. She is manager of the Cohasset office.

Writing Festival At Emerson

On Thursday, Nov. 1, Emerson College will sponsor the Sixth Annual Creative Writing Festival for High School students in the New England area.

The day's events will include seven workshops, three seminars and an awards ceremony. Workshops will be given on the writing of poetry, fiction, science fiction, children's literature and comedy, script writing, and editing a high school literary magazine.

The three seminars will be conducted by Emerson College's writers-in-residence.

Emerson College also sponsors a contest for high school seniors interested in writing. The senior who submits the original poem, short story, or dramatic script judged best by a panel of writers will receive a certificate, an inscribed book, and a $1000 scholarship

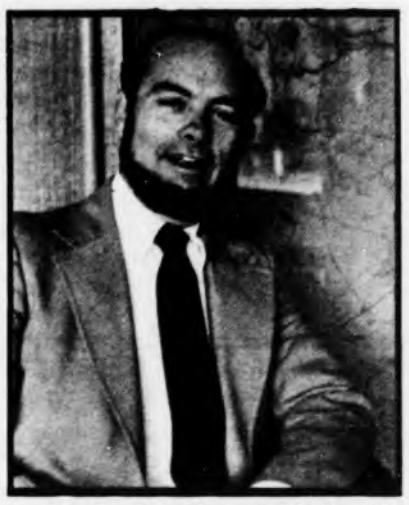
Buying/Selling With Cohasset Realtors

Since 1898 Petersen Realtors and Insurance Agency has had three generations of family ownership and is the oldest Real Estate firm on the South Shore.

Fred Wood, owner of the business for the past 11 years, said the business was started in the late 1800's by his wife's great-grandfather August F.B. Petersen.

In those days The Black Rock House hotel and others were thriving along our beautiful coast, the large estates were blooming, and the town "poor house" was located on Pond Street.

Although the Real Estate business is much larger and more complicated than in those early years, Wood said the personality of the company really hasn't changed. "We still strive to keep things friendly, personal, low-key and community oriented. But that doesn't mean we're burying our heads in the sand," he noted.



The Petersen agency is run by Fred Wood, with the assistance of Frank J. Patterson, sales manager, and 11 sales associates. Wood and Patterson handle most of the commercial real estate. All forms of insurance are handled by Wood and his capable assistant, Kathy Jarvis, Licensed Insurance Broker.

Presently Petersen's is the only business in Cohasset which offers Scholarships each year to a graduating senior who displays outstanding commitment to his/her school and community. Over the last 11 years over $5,000 has been awarded to 15 outstanding young men and women. Two trophies are awarded through the Cohasset Sailing Club each summer for Jr. Achievement and excellence.

Wood, whose background is in insurance, is a former president of the Cohasset Historical Society and the Cohasset Village and Harbour Association and takes an avid interest in all town issues and especially the beautification of the village area.

Recently the 1790 building has been undergoing renovations both inside and out. The exterior is almost finished and the inside is "in the process. Within the next month or so our new look should be complete."

Petersen Realtors compete in the New England tradition and they make their point.

Arte Singers Schedule Two Concerts

The Pro Arte Singers, a South Shore choral group under the direction of Walter Chapin, will offer two concerts in November to begin their eighth season.

The performances will be Sunday, Nov. 4 at 5 p.m., at the First Parish Unitarian Church, 330 First Parish Road, Scituate, and Friday, Nov. 9 at 8 p.m. at Derby Academy, Burditt Avenue, Hingham.

The program will include Bach's "Missa Brevis" in G Major, performed by the full concert chorus with soloists and chamber orchestra; Brahms' "Gypsy Songs" and Copland's "Promise of Living," also sung by the full chorus.

The Pro Arte Consort, an ensemble group drawn from the full membership, will perform Debussy's "Trois Chansons."

For information on advance ticket rates, call Barbara Lane, 545-0238 or Sally Keefe, 545-0260.

Women At Work

By Nina Belsan

It doesn't surprise us to see women in hard hats working at a construction site or on a road crew because since 55 per cent of the American women have joined the working force, there is virtually no field of endeavor to which they have not applied their talents and energies.

They have positioned themselves in government, in the trades and even on the backs of racing horses. Josephine the plumber, once a figment of some clever ad man's imagination is now a living fact. She and many other working women are now sociological entities with realities and salaries of their own.

We are just beginning to examine this new breed of individual we call the working woman, wondering what makes her tick, investigating her goals and her effect on society.

This column will deal with just that — the life and times of the working woman. At times, it will be a forum for her opinions and questions; at others, a spotlight for her achievements. Commentary will cover a variety of subjects that concern her: re-entering the job market; job qualification; job search; the homemaker and careerist; resource and referral centers for women.

So, if you're a working woman and I'd bet a week's pay you are, we'd like to hear from you. If you manage a full time job and a family too, tell us about it.

Whatever your employment — waitress, meat cutter, plant sitter, computer analyst or writer, we'd like to know about it. Through a mutual exchange of ideas and feelings we can help each other. There's a wealthof experience and know how in the working woman's world; let's pool it and all learn from the results.

Your interest is invited and most important, this column will depend on your letters. How about helping this working woman; write in and tell us about your job, the problems you face, humorous incidents that have made your job easier or why you're working as a . (Please fill in the blank).

Direct letters to Nina Belsan, P.O. Box 202, North Scituate 02066, 837-3500.

Two Rivers...

upriver from the coast.

From Longview we turned west, following the Columbia on a winding road squeezed onto the narrow bluff between the river and rolling hills. From scenic parking areas we watched ocean-going freighters steaming up its broad expanse. Closer to the mouth we stopped to examine the remains of old fishweirs.

The river became wider and wider until we crossed to Astoria, Oregon, the town nearest the coast, on a bridge four miles long. Except for the ship channel on the Oregon side, where it arches high in the air, most of the bridge is very close to the water.

In Astoia we found a Maritime Museum, housed in a Victorian three-story house a block from the waterfront. It reminded me of the old-house marine museums in Bath, Maine on the Kennebec River. On the riverfront the Lightship Columbia, sentinal of the famous Columbia River Bar from 1909 until her decommissioning in 1961, is moored next to the modern wept-roof building which is to be the new home of the museum.

And on the highest point of this city, which climbs so steeply away from the river that the streets are like terraces, the Astoria Column rises another 125 feet. It's decorated with a spiral mural of the events that occurred within sight of it: The discovery of the Columbia River in 1792 by Captain Robert Gray, the arrival of the Lewis and Clark expedition in 1805, and the founding of Astoria in 1811 by members of John Jacob Astor's Pacific Fur Company. From the windy platform at the top of its winding staircase, we could see, wrapped in Pacific Northwestmist and haze, the outlines of Clatsop Spit and Cape Disappointment at the mouth 15 miles away.

Inside the museum we found ship models, including both the Constitution and the Comubia, here called the Columbia Rediviva; excerpts from logs and letters of the Columbia's captain and crews; paintings and drawing of the voyage by one of the crew; and a historical map compiled in 1936 by one K. McBean. From those sources and from our own familiar History of Shipbuilding on the North River by L. Vernon Briggs, 1889, and Samuel Deane's History of Scituate, 1831, we can put together the story of the Columbia and the feats she accomplished.

GOING BACK

To begin the story, we must return to the North River in the days of the shipyards, when the route to the sea was at least three miles longer than it is now. It turned at a right angle at the beach between Third and Fourth Cliffs (where the sandspit and rivermouth ar now) and flowed south, parallel to the shore of Humarock. The 1961 geodetic map shows the old mouth.

Deane wrote, "the channel at the mouth often shifts its place, owing to the nature of the sandy bottom, and to the violence of the stream and the tides. It seldom affords more than nine feet of water, even when there is but one channel, but it often happens thatthere are two channels when the water is something less. This fact accounts for the difficulty and expense of carrying out the vessels built upon this river; and yet only in part, for there are shoals above, over which vessels of 200 tones and upwards must be lifted with gondolas or heaved with kedges."

According to Briggs, the ship Columbia, 220 tons and 83 feet long, was built in 1773 at the yard of James Briggs at Hobart's Landing. The remains of this yard and the plaque commemorating it are on the property on Neal Gate Street now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Luttman-Johnson. James Briggs, however, lived in South Scituate, now Norwell, possibly at Stonybrook Farm. The designation ship means thatherthree mast were all square rigged, the most popular rigging for 18th century merchantmen. At 220 tons, she was no stranger to the problems caused by sand bars, channels, and shoals, and was undoubtedly one of those lifted and heaved out of the river.

In 1773, of course, the merchants of the Massachusetts Bay Colony were forbidden by the British to trade with any country other than England. Perhaps she was built for that trade, but rebellion over that restriction was becoming particularly hot around Boston; more than likely the local merchants had every interntion of defying that unreasonable law if they could build a fast enough ship to get away with it.

It wasn't until 1787, well after the Revolution, however, that the Columbia was registered in Boston and fitted out under the command of Captain John Kendrick for a voyage around Cape Horn, up the west coast to trade blankets, knives, and copper pans to the Indians for much more valuable furs, and on to China. She was, therefore, perhaps the first American vessel of the Clipper Ship trade which reached its peak a half century later. When she sailed back to Boston three years later, she had become the first ship to carry the new United States flag around the world. The discovery of the Columbia River, on her second voyage, is only one of the reasons for her fame.

At The Art Center

Enrollments must be made now to attend the Framing and Matting workshop at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset on Saturday, Nov. 3. The all-day workshop will be led by Joseph Burbank and will start at 10 a.m. and finish at 2 p.m. with a break for lunch.

The first part of the session will be a lecture so students should bring a notebook; the second part of the session will be a "hands on" experience of matting and framing after watching a demonstration of proper methods and a discussion of how to select mats and frames.

The Art Center is located at 103 Ripley Road. For information on registration telephone 383-9548 between 12 and 4 Monday through Friday.

Birders Honored

The South Shore Bird Club will be among those honored by Mass. Audubon Society at its annual meeting, Friday, Nov. 2 at 6 p.m. at the Museum of National Heritage in Lexington.

COHASSET CROWNHOLDERS at Homecoming festivities last weekend were King Ralph Froio and Queen Chris Hanlon.

Town Meeting Adjourns Still No Sewer Action

The second and final session of special town meeting dissolved itself Monday for lack of any wastewater facility articles to consider.

As a result, neither the financing of such a facility nor a location has been voted.

What was left of the warrant regarding sewerage became moot last Saturday, when the school committee refused to reconsider its vote to release school committee land for a plant site. Whale Meadows was voted down by the Oct. 22 special town meeting.

CONSIDERATIONS

Sewer Commission Chairman William Montuori said the commission at its Monday meeting will probably try to think of a way to stave off litigation from the Attorney General's office.

The town is being threatened daily with legal action over its having exceeded effluent limits at the present plant.

The only step forward the town has taken on the sewerage issue thus far came via a resolution at the Oct. 22 meeting when it was voted favorably to finance a plant — at location X. Time will tell if that action (non-binding) will be enough to gain the town a grace period.

Montuori said he would not be adverse to the creation of a citizen's site advisory committee if it could act quickly. The possibility of yet another special town meeting to decide the issue is also possible. He questioned whether the town could afford to wait for a referendum on the subject at annual town elections in April.

However, Montuori said he

A Wareham District Court judge continued the trial-by-jury of Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr. until Tuesday, Nov. 6 at Wareham Court.

Late in September, Cohasset Selectmen suspended Feola without pay from the police department pending final court action on seven motor vehicle related charges.

School Committee Stands Firm On School Land

For the second time in six days the school committee reaffirmed its vote to not free town-owned, school-designated lands abutting the Music Circus for a wastewater treatment facility.

When School Committee Chairman Jack Langmaid broached the subject of reconsideration with a full committee present last Saturday an embarrassing silence greeted him.

Finally, Langmaid polled the members who formerly voted against the transfer of the land in question and received these responses:

"No. I won't (reconsider). I feel that land belongs to the children of the town," Irene Brown said.

Martha Gjesteby said she agreed with Mrs. Brown.

Patricia Walsh said: "According to the Massachusetts Association of School Committees we should realize our primary responsibility is to the children. They (the town) wants to take what little land we have."

After the three school committeewomen made their brief statements there was a round of applause from the residents present.

When Sewer Commission Chairman William Montuori noted that the annual town meeting only wished to utilize 10 acres of the 70-acre site, Mrs. Walsh pointed out that the state required severe setback restrictions for new school buildings and gave acreage requirements.

Langmaid said of the 71 acres which is school-designated there was very little flat land "And not all is usable. If you had wished us to make an evaluation we should had the time and the money to do so. This committee is not made up of professional engineers. We have not been instructed to hire professional people to determine how the land can be used."

School committeewoman Diana Kornet said according to her calculations the school land in question could accommodate a school for 3,000 children.

Mrs. Walsh retorted: "Metcalf and Eddy failed to put Osgood School on the map — I find that interesting." She added that the contour map she had showed peat — "You know you can't build a school on peat."

Planning Board Member Barbara Power questioned the map which Mrs. Walsh had in her possession. Although Mrs. Gjesteby said Mrs. Power had given her the map in 1969 when Mrs. Power was a member of the school facilities committee and Mrs. Gjesteby was a member of the planning board, Mrs. Power said she had no idea where the map came from.

John Day of Old Pasture Road spoke in favor of the school committee's vote to not reconsider its former vote as did others, and gave a petition to that effect to the committee. It was signed by 184 residents.

Bert Pratt also spoke in support of retaining the school lands.

"I'd like to say that the people here have great sympathy for the committee in its present dilemna." Pratt added that he felt the lack of legal explanation at the Oct. 22 session of annual town meeting regarding the sites in questions was "absolutely shocking."

"We urge the school committee to not become involved in the sewer issue. I viewed the initial taking of land (school-designated lands) as a

Meals On Wheels Brings Food, Friends

By Karin Bartow

The "Meals-on-Wheels" drivers and Erwin Cone of the Red Lion Inn have an 11:30 a.m. deadline every Monday through Saturday. That's when Erwin and his son, John, finish putting together the hot meals which are picked up there and delivered throughout town by town volunteer drivers. They split the list of names in half and, on the average, make ten or eleven stops each.

The eight-year-old "Meals" program is sponsored by the Social Service League. Beverly Quilty, Chairman for two years, staffs and schedules the volunteer drivers (two, plus one permanent substitute for each day); fills in as driver when necessary; and sometimes even cooks a holiday dinner in her home!

Orders for "Meals" are taken on a daily basis at the League's office by Jean Moulten, their affable and hard-working secretary. The cost of each meal is $1.25 to the recipient and the remaining 75 cents is paid by the Town through the Council on Aging.

This is the first year since the program's inception, that the price has increased; it went up 45 cents.

The meals are nutritious, economical, and convenient, and Erwin Cone, who has been preparing them for seven years, has been instrumental in maintaining those qualities. His generosity has been a cornerstone of the program's success.

Many different types of people receive "Meals" but, in general, they are homebound. They are unable to shop for groceries and prepare their own meals due either to

A Side Of The Stars We Never See

Each year the South Shore Music Circus brings a summerful of stars from stage and screen to little Cohasset-by-the-sea. Frequently, the local newspapers run a ditty about someone's having run into one of those special beings at Cohasset Central Market buying fruit or something and then we are all amazed that they eat.

Many of the stars make arrangements to stay at Kimballs' Motor Inn and over the years Hugo's Function Manager, Joanne Winters, has gotten to know a side of the stars none of us will ever see on the circus stage.

During a recent interview, Joanne said that the advent of the stars is always preceded by a letter from their manager explaining what the star's special needs will be, what kinds of food it needs, and asks if it will be able to get a rather substantial dinner after its late hour show.

And so, while we're all getting starry-eyed, Joanne is handling the details.

"In the Osmunds' case the manager advised us to have plenty of ice cream on hand and 17 portocribs. We had quite a few but we had to rent several more. The whole Osmund family toured. After they arrived, some 37 or 38 people, the second floor of Kimballs' looked like a nursery school.

"Donny's wife was pregnant at the time; Marie had her boyfriend along. Their bus driver was a graphic little guy who was always complaining about the diapers."

As with Tom Jones, Joanne said crowds of people waited around the lobby entrance for Donny and Marie to come out. "We had to double our security."

Before the coming of Tom Jones, Joanne said she had never really seen any of her function waitresses become frazzled or undone over a star. "Tom Jones really does a number on everybody."

Jones had a balcony room and throughout his stay women stood below his room and threw things up for him to sign. "The women weren't locals. I don't usually see Cohasset women doing this kind of thing."

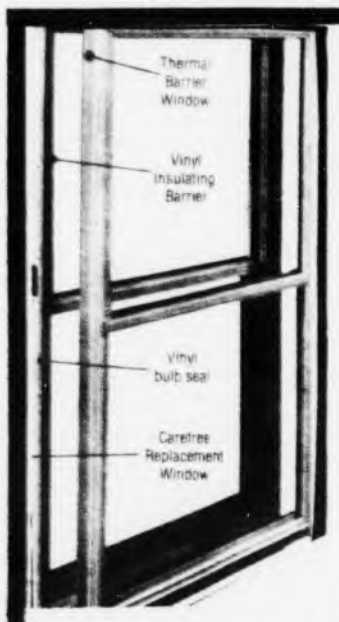
At any rate, Jones was at Kimballs over the weekend of a large wedding. "In the middle of my wedding I discovered my function hostesses all trying to get coffee for Tom Jones at the same time. I told them 'Nuts with the coffee for Tom Jones' and directed them back to the wedding. It was really amazing. I had never seen veteran function hostesses lose their cool before."

Carol Channing is allergic to everything. "When she came she brought her own food, her own foil to wrap her food in, and her own linens.

"We had to provide a small stove and refrigerator unit in her room. Her maid did the cooking. She even brought her own dishes. When she came to the dining room for dinner she brought her entire meal with her and then proceeded to unwrap her pouches and eat.

"She is a very nice woman, it's just that she's highly allergic. Her face is painted on and she always has a big smile for everyone."

ROYAL WELCOME awaits all those greeted by local hostess with mostest — JoAnn Winters.



Joanne said Hugo's will again this year hold its Christmas dinner for the needy in memory of the late John Carzis. "It will be a reinstatement of what he did in his Boston restaurant on Scul , Square."

Last year Hugo's was aided by volunteers from the town. "Clark Chatterton got the people — there was a tremendous response. Two of us from 'the store' (Hugo's) worked that day.

"Last year when the guests arrived they'd cry and grab your hand and thank you for having them. It was really overwhelming. They had nowhere else to be Christmas day."

Shortly before last year's dinner Bob Davenport called from the Greenhouse on 3A and offered to give Hugo's 30-40 poinsettias. "We decided to put a penny under a saucer on every table and give the poinsettias to the people to who had the penny.

When the announcement was made about the poinsettias, everybody got a penny from their pocketbook and put it under their saucer. Luckily, we had poinsettias, too. As it turned out, everybody got something. Some of them even went home with artificial plants from the lobby. We were hysterical laughing."

Vito Conte Awarded Air Force Honors

In 1978 U.S. Air Force bases throughout the U.S. and the world submitted the names of individuals they felt best demonstrated professional competence, ingenuity, determination and a state of job preparedness.

After an involved selection process, Vito Conte, a material warehouse man at the Air Force Geophysics Laboratory in Hanscom, was selected for the 1978 award in the Federal Wage System category.

A Cohasset native, Conte has spent 30 years with the Air Force. Over the years he has become indispensible in its warehouse operation. He deals with engineers, accountants, scientists and both government and civilian elements regarding purchase requests.

Actually, Conte won three awards last year. The first was a Special Act award won for his implementation of several money-saving devices. For that he received $500.

The second award was from Systems Command, a 50-unit grouping, which led to the ultimate award, a plaque. "It was sent from Washington, D.C., but it was made in Attleboro."

Part of his job requirements are that he have the ability to switch from one unrelated assignment to another unrelated assignment and he finds that and the large amount of time spent in the air challenging. "I love it."

In addition to being a material warehouse man, Conte is the munitions designate officer of the Hanscom base. He handles explosives by ordering, receiving, storing, shipping and ,disposing of the same.

Although he enjoys all aspects of his job he particularly likes tracking explosive packages which gone astray. "I like the challenge of finding them once they get displaced. We've never lost one package and there's never been a theft. They show up eventually."

On one occasion he tracked a shipment for four months which was designated for California. It eventually showed up in Boston. "It wasn't explosives."

Conte spent six months in Hawaii with Project Dominic in 1962, assisted with nuclear testing on Johnson Is., Hawaii — "We're getting out of the nuclear business more and more" and recently returned from Mississippi where he assisted with a NASSAU project.

"Shipping is the hardest thing in the business — not too many airlines want to take explosives.

"My biggest problem on the job is that before a project can commence the equipment must be there. One missing part delays many people — and usually we have to take everything with us."

When asked if he were an exceptional person, Conte replied:

"I think I'd be hard to replace."

The U.S. Air Force seems to agree.

Conte is married to Kay Conte, a bookkeeper at town hall. His daughter Kathi is a fourth grade student in Ms. Sprout's room at Deer Hill School.

FIRST IN WORLD award is received by Vito Conte of Cohasset at Hanscom Air Force Base from Colonel James Baker. [What was the award?? See story]

Make TM Compromise

Something elevating happened at the Oct. 22 special town meeting.

Sewer Commissioner William Montuori threw a germ of an idea to voters. Perhaps the germ was born of desperation or frustration. We have no way of knowing. At any rate, we picked up on it for this week's editorial.

Most of the town is well aware that the Oct. 22 special town meeting warrant as it related to the wastewater facility plant is now a moot one, a new special town meeting will have to be scheduled.

We suggest that at the onset of a future special town meeting five proposed sites be presented to voters. Sewer commissioners will go down the line, asking for a non-binding "resolution" vote on each of the five sites.

After the votes on each site have been taken the site with the lowest score will be dropped and the same non-binding resolution votes will be taken on the remaining four and so on until voters have compromised on the final site.

The flaw in our suggestion is that voters may never by able to compromise on any site for a wastewater facility and may in fact not wish to build a facility.

But it this should happen, then the sewer commissioners will have at least offered voters all of the choices available.

We would stress, if our suggestion should be taken seriously, that the above suggestions be accomplished within a one-session period.

Dealing with the town meeting voters at the very least is exasperating. It is an unwieldly group. When it meets in consecutive session over ongoing issues it has been known to change its mind radically. Some people refer to that ability as democracy.

Regardless, town meeting voters must, if they can, compromise on this issue. No one, no board, no commission can compromise for them.

School Lands Purchased For Future

[ED.'S NOTE: Lester Hiltz recently released a two-page letter to selectmen listing reasons why school-designated lands off Sohier Street should not be selected for a wastewater treatment plant.

In view of the fact that the special town meeting warrant as it pertains to the sewer treatment plant question has become moot due to various actions taken and not taken by town officials and because the sewer question will surface again, we felt it important to publish Hiltz's letter in its entirity.

Hiltz, Hancy Jones and others from the school-lands area went before selectmen last week. Mostly the residents present echoed the thoughts contained in Hiltz's letter].

Letters

To the Editor:

The residents of Cohasset will have to address a very perplexing question in the next few days. Why not use the "so called" Music Circus site, which is actually the school facilities land, for the proposed waste water treatment plant?

Although the sewer commissioners have personally decided that the Music Circus is the best site, this position is contrary to the costly advice by the Metcalf and Eddy Engineering firm. The engineers have concluded that the school facilities site (Music Circus) is one of the most costly and least desirable sites.

In four evaluations by Metcalf and Eddy Engineers, the school facilities site was rated either fourth or fifth out of six sites. Great Brewster and Whales Meadow consistently rated as the top two best sites. The White's Farm, Music Circus, and James Brook and Dean's Meadow sites were repeatedly found to be inferior sites.

In view of this professional engineering data, it is inconceiveable that the two senior sewer commissioners can present the school facilities land for a waste water treatment plant. Two of these sewer commissioners have made public statements that they favor the school facilities site, mainly because the land is owned by the town. However, the cost of taking by eminent domain any other site should not exceed the higher construction costs, estimated at seven percent of several million dollars.

It should be mentioned that the third and most recently elected sewer commissioners is opposed to the school facilities site. There is also the long range important question of higher operation and maintenance costs for the required additional pumping stations because the school facilities site is furthest away from the ocean or outfall site.

These costs will be an unnecessary burden on the taxpayers if you consider the topography of the proposed area to be sewered. Except for the sewerage from property along Route 3A, the remainder of the town, for the most part, requiring remedial sewerage service, will flow by natural gravity to a coastal site. This fact is common knowledge and will essentially minimize operating and maintenance costs significantly.

To put it another way, it would be like going from Cohasset to Hingham through Norwell, which is preposterous. There is another important factor to be intelligently, not emotionally, considered. The school facitlities land was intentionally purchased, at great expense, several years ago for future school use. This land is ideally located near the center of town, near two other schools and only a short distance from the high school. For these reasons, the exorbitant purchase price was justifiable.

Although the town owns this land, and the uncertainty of future school needs prevails, it would seem unwise, even unreasonable, to construct a waste water treatment plant or any non school structure in the middle of a centrally located school complex. Even though there are those who firmly believe that Cohasset's population growth will not increase significantly, it is surely inevitable that it will. Therefore, is it reasonable or sensible to place any future uses of this school land in jeopardy by our emotional actions today!!

Some attention should also be given to the disruption of classroom and school yard activities during the four or five years it will take to construct a waste water treatment plant, if this school facilities site is selected. The noise from large trucks and other heavy equipment, the dirt and dust, and the physical hazards will certainly be prevalent. The safety of these young school children who will be exposed to large, heavily loaded truck traffic during both the construction and operational phases of a waste water treatment plant, is a very serious matter to deliberate.

Additionally, if a waste water treatment plant becomes operational at this school facilities site, the large school and neighborhood population would be adversely exposed to the strong, unpleasant sewerage odor more readily than if the waste water treatment plant was located at a coastal or more elevated site. Notwithstanding, the real possibility of any health hazards from toxic chemicals that will undoubtedly emanate from such a plant and the numerous septage pumping trucks that will frequent the plant daily, must be truthfully evaluated and presented to the voters of Cohasset.

In conclusion, generations for years to come will be greatly affected by our decision on this important matter. Therefore, it is imperative that every individual voter thoroughly understand the issue and the lasting consequences of his or her actions when the vote is cast.

Selection Committee Insider Vs. Outsider

To the Editor:

Your article regarding the Selectmen's decision to advertise the position of chief of police, which will be open upon the retirement of Chief Feola, may have left some readers with an unfortunate misunderstanding. Some persons in the community, including some town officials, may indeed be committed to the idea of "bringing someone in from outside the department" as Cohasset's next police chief.

That bias is not shared by the police chief selection committee, which has consistently affirmed that it is searching for the best candidate regardless of where that candidate is found.

We have taken, and will continue to take, appropriate measures to ensure that internal and external applicants for the position will receive equally careful consideration in the selection process.

In the police chief selection committee's efforts to elicit the concerns of Cohasset residents regarding the selection of Chief Feola's successor, we have encountered a number of persons who seemed certain that either "inside" or "outside" applicants are the only ones whom we should consider. Indeed, strong feelings appear to be attached to their opinions on this issue.

I consider the "insider vs. outsider" debate as an expression of different sets of attitudes regarding the community and its policing needs.

To quote from Michael J. Kelly's excellent small book Police Chief Selection, "The side a person takes in this debate is a likely indicator of how that person feels about the need for change and whether the person is generally supportive or critical of the department . . . The argument is rarely based on analysis of the quality of management talent in the department and the need for changes in policing in the community."

Mr. Kelly's conclusion regarding the insider vs. outsider debate is worthy of special note, not only for its own sake, but also because it represents fairly the consensus of the Police Chief Selection Committee: "The leadership qualities and skills of the candidates are more important considerations than whether they are insiders or outsiders."

In our attitudes as well as in our procedures, the police chief selection committee will continue to welcome both internal and external applicants for the position. We will consider those applicants as fairly as we can, and will ultimately forward to the Selectmen the names of the three persons whom we regard as most capable of leading the department in the years to come. At no time in that process will we categorically dismiss all external or all internal candidates.

In a matter as essential to the future quality of life in our community as the choosing of a new police chief, it is important that both our citizens and members of the police department understand the procedures by which a new chief will be chosen.

The Tax Man Commeth

By Peter Barnicle

Looking Back

Paying taxes without grumbling is considered un-American, but not paying them can get you into trouble — so most people grumble and stay out of trouble.

Oct. 31 is the normal deadline for payment of real estate taxes in Cohasset, but it's difficult to pay them if you haven't been told how much they are. Undoubtedly, within due course, the new annual rate will be set and the taxpayers will mutter to themselves and write out a check for the required amount.

So far as we know there has never been an organized tax protest in Cohasset, like that in Scituate.

In looking back, however, we discovered that some rugged individuals in this town have done more than mutter and grumble about paying tax bills. In fact they were doing it two hundred years ago.

Around the time of the Revolution a Capt. John Gillespie objected to what he considered exorbitant taxes and paid them only after a visit from Benjamin Cushing, the town constable.

Gillespie was born in England and came to this country in the middle of the eighteenth century. He was a sea captain and operated a fleet of vessels out of Newburyport and later out of Boston.

Like many other ship owners in the 1760's his vessels became prey of British privateers and he suffered substantial losses. Records indicate that despite the losses the captain was still wealthy.

He kept meticulous accounts of all money he paid out and retained handwritten acknowledgements from the recipients. The original receipts would delight autograph hunters.

Although he was "a man of property" there is no record of his ever having owned a house in Boston. His receipt book does show that he paid 10 pounds "lawful money" to a Jonathan Hancock as quarterly rental on a house.

There are also receipts for cordage, sails, blocks, hogsheads, blocks and other materials for vessels, including "a great, great many for New England rum." A viewer of his accounts noted he kept a close record of all his tax bills from 1767 and "they show an alarming increase."

The captain finally decided he had had enough. He retired from business and moved to the peace and quiet of Cohasset about 1772.

"His residence was on the hill known to all of us as the Lawyer Sohier house," according to an account of the captain written a hundred years ago.

The first entries in his account book for the year 1772 are for sums expended for improving his newly acquired Cohasset property. That year he also bought a cow and a calf from John Burbank for four pounds, four shillings. Later he bought a cow from Daniel Tower for four pounds, 13 shillings, four pence.

Capt. Gillespie had a housekeeper, Miss Elizabeth Mott, who received the munificent sum of one shilling per week. There is no record of whether or not she had a day off, but if she did, we are told "it is probable there was a deduction from her wages."

In 1774 he bought some wood from Aaron Pratt, who affixed his signature to a receipt. Christopher James sold him some "West Indies goods" (His tastes in rum may have changed.)

Through it all Gillespie continued to battle the tax collector. He may have thought that once the British had been thrown out all taxes would be eliminated. In this he was sadly mistaken.

The captain and the town fathers hotly debated the matter each year. It was a losing battle for the captain — even as it is today. The Selectmen dragged the tax money out of him.

On April 5, 1779, the records show that Constable Benjamin Cushing paid a visit to Gillespie. Cushing has left this note on the visit:

"By virtue of my office as Constable of the Town of Cohasset, and the authority of Thomas Lothrop, Ignatius Orcut and Job Cushing, Selectmen of said town, by warrant of arrestment under their hand and sarved (sic) on him this day, I have demanded and received of John Gillespie, the sum of 24 pounds, 10 shillings and 10 pence in full for the year of 1778, and also two shillings for the above warrant and sarvice."

It is doubtful if Lothrop had much sympathy for the captain since about the same time Lothrop was paying the town 383 pounds, two pence, in taxes.

On The Marathon Report

To the Editor:

As a member of the Cohasset Cross Country team, I thank Bob Tis in his efforts to cover our not-so-often published sport.

Unfortunately, several portions of his last article about the New York City Marathon were not accurate. Yes, both John Mika and I competed in the event held on Oct. 21, but with the sizable field of close to 12,000, our paths never crossed in the "Big Apple."

Somehow, through an amazingly quick, but inaccurate grapevine, Mr. Tis received his information and was able to write his article just in time for last week's printing.

First, Mr. Mika completed the marathon in 3:51, a full seven minutes before I did. Second, having never seen Mr. Mika in New York, I had no idea as to whether he beat me or visa-versa.

Since I travelled directly from New York City to Syracuse, at the time of press release, I had no idea of what material was being printed and thus this error was not caught.

Selectmen To Meet On Town Hall Renovation

Selectmen agreed to call for a meeting of all parties involved in plans for the renovation of town hall after Building Commissioner James Litchfield told them he was at an impasse with the renovation committee and its architect.

Litchfield said he was being asked to spend excessive hours with the chairman of the committee and its architect, adding that the plans submitted this year were identical to those submitted last year with only two exceptions.

According to Litchfield, the plans submitted were not detailed enough for him to be able to give an opinion.

"I'm not fighting them, I have tried to point things out that are wrong but they're ignoring it. I have asked for and received assistance from the state.

Selectman Harry Ainslie agreed that more details than those shown to him by Litchfield should be required on preliminary plans. He suggested that a meeting be called consisting of all those concerned. "If we're at an impasse, let's get this thing to the board of appeals."

JURORS SELECTED

Patricia Beamon of Forest Avenue and Nancy G. Dickson of Forest Avenue were both selected as jurors at a recent meeting of the board of selectmen.

Selectman Henry Ainslie noted that both women were listed as housewives. "Presently everybody in this town is an attorney or a doctor. It's hard to find down-to-earth laborers. It's even harder to find housewives."

UNITED WAY MONTH

October 24 through November 21 was designated United Way month at a recent meeting of the selectmen. A goal of $7,600 has been established for the town. One out of four Cohasset residents are helped by agencies funded by United Way.

GIFT OF $250

Selectmen recently voted to accept a gift of $250 for the Paul Pratt Library. The money will be used for books and materials.

GIFT OF $2,000

A gift of $2,000, left to the town by the late Harry Wilbur, is designated to be used for the maintenance of the town cemetery.

AUCTIONEER'S LICENSE

Eric Person was recently granted an auctioneer's license by the board of selectmen.

CHECK IT OUT!

The MBTA has put on new buses to the Kennedy Library at Columbia Point.

RIGHT ON RED

A new bill which would permit a right turn on a red light has been referred to Police Chief Randolph Feola for comment.

There are only three stop lights in Cohasset. The selectmen all would like the turn right-on-red, they said.

60 Plus At Garden Club

Cohasset 60 Plus Club members are invited to attend the Community Garden Club Tea at 12 noon Nov. 13, in the St. Stephen's Walton Rogers Hall.

The theme of this year's Christmas program is East meets West.

What is Scientific Skin Care?

Scientific Skin Care is not a gimmick or a fad promoted by an agile publicity-minded industry. It is imported that you do not equate Scientific Skin Care with ordinary facials which serve no specific purpose. Modern Esthetics is the science of properly caring for the skin with scientifically formulated, specialized products in combination with individual techniques and regimens. The positive results obtainable through Scientific Skin Care for all types of skin, acne, blotchy, aging, dry, dehydrated, oily, sensitive, etc. have often been termed miraculous.

Town Meeting Adjourns

doubted that voters at annual elections could garner the two thirds vote necessary.

Still being analyzed, Montuori said, is a way to revive the school lands site. "If we really wanted it the town might petition the general court to release those lands."

During Monday's discussion, Place said it might still be possible to free the school lands without going through the legislature.

SITES

Earlier last week there was some confusion as to whether the Whale Meadow site could be reconsidered at this second session. However, Moderator Place said the minutes showed that only reconsideration of the school-designated land and the financing article had been called for.

The Whale Meadow site was the only sewerage article legally voted by the Oct. 22 special meeting. The financing article can not be voted until a site has been selected by voters, according to town counsel.

John Trainer of Summer Street asked Place what requirements were necessary for a recall petition for the school committee and the town counsel — and made his point.

Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson said he had never had to address that question before.

In response to a resident, School Committee Chairman Jack Langmaid said it was his intention to introduce a resolution at the next meeting of his committee to create a school facilities committee. That committee he said would take a "new look" at the piece of school land some residents wish to utilize as a wastewater plant.

In any case he thought the creation of such a committee would be important because "People will probably be back chewing on both ends of it — the 3A portion for a fire station."

Village Shop Talk

Hope all in town will welcome and visit Village Antiques on Pankingway run by Helita Baker and Jane Flynn. A careful selection of functional and decorative items are available for every home.

Around the corner at Phillip Smith's Creations a smashing section of beautiful home treasures including exquisite oriental carpeting unsurpassed in quality and affordable. A few items . . . the most beautiful brass chests I have ever seen. They are available on beautifully polished wood holders, under $1,000. Phil has a full decorating and design service available . . . wallcovers, furniture, lamps and accessories.

Carousel on Ripley Road invites you to browse in its "casualty shop" which includes previously-owned items, fun-looking furniture, oriental carpeting and wonderful collectings.

Lots of new arrivals in town: The Colonial Pharmacy has the best smell of success — Lanvin and Gucci for men and women.

Classics has a new shipment of Vaccaro turtleneck sweaters in 24 scumptuous colors. No longer does dressmaking but still does hems.

Notes & Quotes has a good new selection of hardcover and paperback books including Fools Die and Executioners Song. New in music — Tusk and Fleetwood Mack.

Wee Spinnacker has their new catalog out this week and if you didn't get one stop in their Elm St. shop and see why their imaginative items have so many devoted customers. So many happy, attractive and creative giftwares in one small shop. Don't miss a visit!

Plans are now underway for an old fashioned Christmas party at the Lothrop House on Summer St., Sunday, Dec. 2 from 5-7:30 p.m. Sponsored by the Cohasset Village and Harbor Association, all funds will go to the Cohasset Historical Society for work to be done in this fine Cohasset building.

At $5 per person, come and bring friends and enjoy the first preview. Though still unfinished the warmth of conviviacity and lunch will make a memorable evening after you have enjoyed the church Christmas bazaars in the afternoon.

Selectmen To Review Music Circus License

Selectmen this year must again decide how to deal with the South Shore Music Circus entertainment license.

The issue is not whether the board will issue a seasonal license, it is how or if they can issue such a license with conditions.

The board met with Ron Rawson, producer of the South Shore Music Circus, in a brief session last week, but no action was taken. Selectmen said Rawson would be invited to a future session and residents of the area would be notified of that session in advance.

Residents of the area are involved in litigation with the Music Circus over the question of whether the Circus has expanded a non-conforming use.

When Selectman Henry Ainslie said that area residents had complained of the Circus having extended its schedule into the school year. Rawson admitted that the Circus would be ending Sept. 13 next year, but said he foresaw no big problems with that extension.

Nancy Jones said the extended schedule and matinees would present a real problem. "My children don't sleep until the circus lets out. It (the matinees) could potentially become a school problem in regard to traffic during school hours."

Rawson countered that midweek matinees next year would be unlikely as "Liberace doesn't play matinees."

Several residents said that in the beginning of last year the Circus had attempted to control the loudness of the shows, "but after Lena Horne it was noisy and loud."

Mrs. Jones noted that one of her neighbors had to put her children to bed in the living-room where there was the least amount of noise. August and September were unbelievable."

Rawson countered that acoustical studies had been made two years running. "Based on these studies under the most adverse conditions we have been within guidelines. We are going by the law — not exceeding it." He added that the Circus has little or no control over the volume at which entertainers perform.

However, Clark said on the night of one performance he personally went to the performer and asked the volume to be turned down.

Ainslie said however that he had personally observed the sound meters and felt Rawson's statements were correct.

The only week Circus officials were aware of complaints was when Tom Jones was the attraction, Rawson said.

Lester Hiltz said he felt residents of the area had a right to enjoy their property. But Clark responded: "The Music Circus was there first, before the people."

"I never heard the Music Circus until Jerry Lewis came to town seven years ago," Mrs. Jones said, noting that over the years the Circus and its performances had become more sophisticated with regard to amplification.

Residents said they didn't feel anyone wanted to close down the Music Circus, they just wanted it regulated. But Rawson said the Circus itself had scheduling problems and that for economic reasons some shows had to be done "back-to-back."

When Ainslie said perhaps the license should be discussed only before the Circus was committee to a schedule, Rawson responded that even at this date most of the scheduling had been accomplished.

"It's not a simple matter of turning the music down. I don't set standards for the industry. I had no complaints about the John Philip Souza band," he noted, adding that every artist had full control over his sound. "We try to dicker on the site about volume. We ask them to be aware of the neighborhood. But Tom Jones sounds the same (volume) everywhere he is."

"Except on TV," Hiltz noted. "I can regulate the volume on TV."

Rawson said he had the results of a sound study and recommendations have been made which may help to control sound impact on the neighborhoods. Some of those recommendations were: an air-tight roof structure, tent wall shields and a recommended 10DB reduction in frequency. He did not say whether the Music Circus would implement any of those recommendations.

Gallery Of Rogues At Cohasset News Co.

Thanks to the cooperation of the Cohasset News Co. on Brook Street we finally hit on a super way to get your pictures to you.

Beginning last week we constructed a bulletin board display at the News Co. with old and new photographs of you and the community at large.

Pictures which are published in the Thursday edition of the Cohasset Mariner will turn up on the bulletin board approximately a week later. Fresh pictures will be pinned up when we have them and when the blank spaces call for them.

Each picture will cost the buyer 25 cents for handling only. The News Co. isn't going to get rich on that amount, but we felt it was only fair that we offered them something for their time and trouble and for the window display.

Many of the pictures on display are pictures we didn't have room to publish in the newspaper. Almost all (99 percent) are taken by staff photographer Greg Derr.

So — keep your eyes glued to the board. Eventually you and yours will show up.

But Fall To Abington

Skippers Put Lots Of Points On The Board

By Rob Tis

FOOTBALL

The Skippers were defeated on Saturday by the Green Wave of Abington. The men in green came out and scored 27 points in the first half.

It was homecoming for the Skippers and when the half was over the Skippers charged onto the field with the capacity homecoming crowd verbally behind them.

Dave Turner, senior lineman for the Skippers stated, "We had a fairly good game defensively, but on offense we couldn't move the ball satisfactorily. When we turned to the air in the second half, the results were good."

Quarterback Tim Libby moved the team well in the second half aided by the running of Joe Becker, Bob Gunville and Joe McCullough as well as the pass catching of Bill Duffy and Mike Jones.

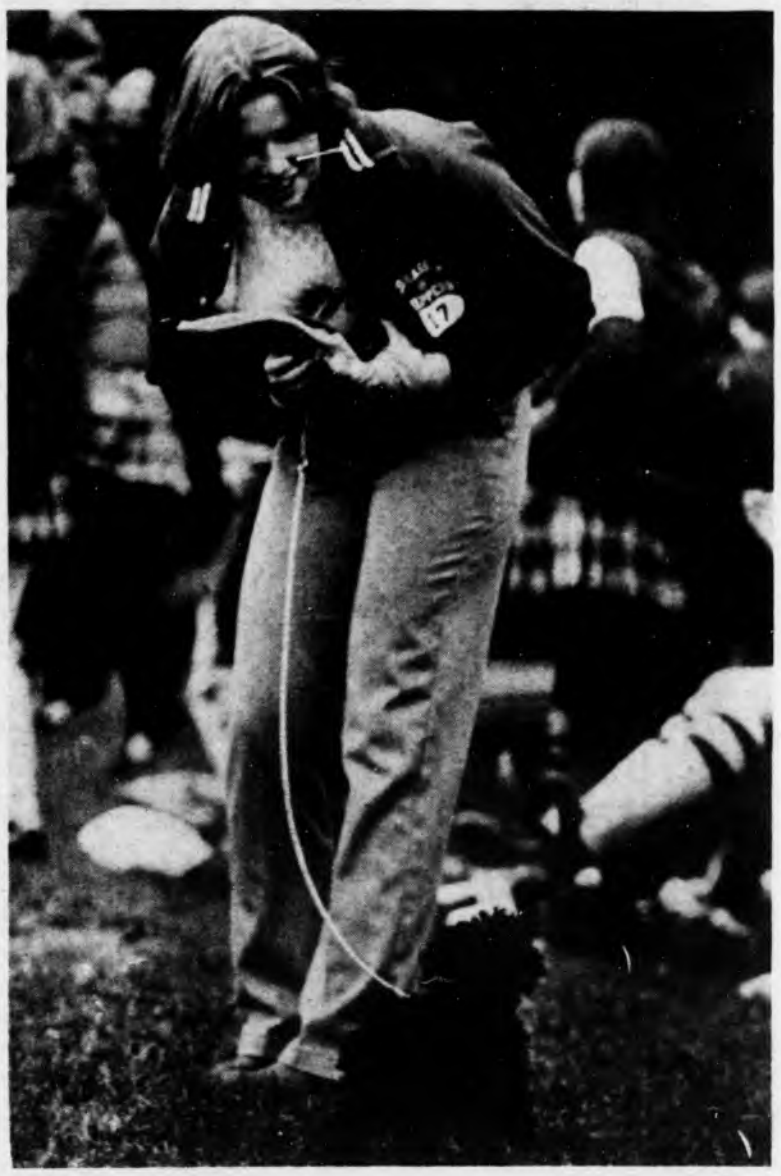
Quarterback Tim Libby scored in the third quarter on a 38-yard run and then completed a pass to Mike Jones for a 2-point conversion.

In the fourth quarter, Joe Becker scored on a 2-yard run and then Bob Gunville plunged into the end zone for the extra two.

Bill Duffy later scored on an 11-yard pass but the rush for the conversion failed.

Finishing up the scoring for the Skippers was sophomore Joe Becker.

although the Skippers scoring barrage put 28 points on the scoreboard in the second half, the game was never really close. At one point in the fourth quarter the score was Abington, 34, Cohasset 22. Although the Skippers lost they gave the homecoming crowd a well-played game.



During half-time the ceremony of crowning the homecoming queen was performed and Christine Hanlon received the majority vote from the senior class and joined the king, Ralph Froio, in ruling over the day's festivities.

SOCCER

The Cohasset Soccer Team had two tough games this week. On Tuesday, they played Hanover for a chance at second place in the division. Unfortunately, the Skippers were hurt by injuries and lost 5-1.

The Skippers goalie John Muir was not allowed to play because of a face mask he was wearing to guard against reinjury of his face which was hurt during the loss last week to Duxbury.

The mask was ruled illegal by the referee. Three other players were also injured: Phil Drago, Jim Leonard and Mike Nedrow.

LINDA WHITLOW and her soccer ball Hester, have a backfield scrimmage at a girls' field hockey game.

Untortunately, because of this loss the chances of Cohasset making the division finals are dim . They have to beat Duxbury, a virtually impossible task, and Hanover must lose at least one more game.

The soccer team showed hope of possibly defeating Duxbury this Friday with the powerful defeat of Middleboro 8-1. Craig Langford, the Skipper's star striker scored the first four goals, then Phil Tye scored two, followed by unyielding Ron White scoring a goal and then Phil Tye putting the icing om the cake with the last goal.

I'm sure the Skippers will give their all in the rest of this seasons games. As Mike Nedrow, Skipper halfback put it, "We have a strong team this year and on a good day we are capable of beating anyone."

The Skippers remaining home game will be played on Tuesday afternoon at Milliken Field. If you like hardnosed hustling soccer, come up and root for the Skippers.

CROSS COUNTRY

The boys's varsity cross country team's top seven runners journeyed to Franklin Park in Dorchester on Saturday to compete in the Division Four principal's meet. Seven runners made this long journey and three finished the race. How did this happen, you ask?

Well, it was a very confusing situation. The team was separated, and while half the team was running, the other half was waiting for the race to begin, when all of a sudden the race ran right by them.

Mike Kearney impressively finished in the top 100 while Jamie Repogle and Charlie Tibbets finished in the latter parts of the one hundreds. Mike Ellis pulled up lame after the first mile with a sore ankle.

SKIING

With winter steadily approaching, a great deal of Cohasset residents are readying themselves for the oncoming ski season. Undoubtably, skiing is one of the most expensive sports these days, not to mention one of the most popular.

It is unsually impossible for anyone who is not from a skiing family to become seriously involved in this illustrious sport. This is not only because of the now outrageous price of being outfitted in ski gear but because of transportation to the mountains.

This is becoming a major problem for most of the young adults that do not have skiing families.

With regard to this problem, there are only a few good solutions. Right away I though of the Mass. Ski Club. The club is great if you like catching busses about 30 miles away from Cohasset at 5 a.m. on a Saturday morning, and traveling on a cold bus for the three hour trip up to the mountains and the three hour trip back later that afternoon.

Aside from some fairly bizarre methods such as stealing a car, hijacking a plane or harnessing a northbound flock of geese, I have found that the ski trips run by the school are amazingly good.

The trips are usually run by one or more Cohasset High School students on a non-profit basis.

A bus arrives early on a Saturday morning and is back in Cohasset by 8 p.m. that night. The trips are usually well run and the price is acceptable. The bus ride goes quickly and the atmosphere friendly.

St. Anthony's Joins 39-Year Christmas Tradition

Cohasset's Village Fair, the big church benefit event that has marked the opening of the holiday season in this South Shore town for nearly 40 years, will be held this year Saturday, Dec. 1, and takes on added dimension as St. Anthony's Church joins with the three churches of the Cohasset Common to sponsor the affair.

The welcoming of St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church as a fully participating member of the group completes the ecumenical nature of the popular fun and fund-raising effort.

For the past 38 years — this will be the 39th Village Fair — the Fair has been run by the three churches of the Common: First Parish Unitarian, Second Congregational and St. Stephen's Episcopal.

"We're delighted that St. Anthony's is joining us," declares Mrs. Robert H. Sturdy, one of the two co-chairmen of the Village Fair Committee. "Actually people from St. Anthony's have been helping us for years, have been regular customers and we have had the use of their equipment. Now we welcome them as full partners."

So far as is known this is one of the few instances of joint fund-raising benefit cooperation among four religious denominations.

The broader scope of the Village Fair this year will not alter its general form. As in the past it will be held in buildings around the Common and will focus on the sale of Christmas and holiday season articles and the staging of special holiday attractions.

These include decorations, wreaths and swags, corsages, boutique gifts, aprons, home-cooked food, candy, children's articles and a raffle of valuable prizes.

In addition there will be activities appealing particularly to children, with an appearance by Santa Claus on the Common and a Children's Midway in the Community Center. The day will close with the Village Fair Dinner in St. Stephen's Church.

This year St. Stephen's Church has the lead responsibility for the Fair. Joining with Mrs. Sturdy as co-chairman is Mrs. Roger L. Rice. Each church delegates two representatives to a Central Committee, which then recruits the scores of workers, special committee chairmen, and supporting cast which stages the Fair.

Church representatives this year are as follows: St. Anthony's, Mrs. Francis E. Charles and Mrs. John J. Riley; St. Stephen's, Mrs. R. Perry Collins, 2nd, and Mrs. Paul R. Neelon; Second Congregational, Mrs. Gordon L. Goodwin and Mrs. Hubert P. Vanderlugt; Unitarian, Mrs. Roger Crafts, Jr., and Mrs. Stuart W. Weier.

Secretary of the Committee is Ms. Florence Hildebrandt, and the Treasurer, Mrs. Joseph R. Nedrow.

THIS GUY LOOK FAMILIAR? He'll be back on the Common Dec. 1 as a guest of the Cohasset Village Fair.

Historical Society Sponsors Talk

The fascinating topic of the current fad of "collectibles" will be the subject of an illustrated talk as the feature of the annual meeting of the Cohasset Historical Society.

The talk will be held in Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House, Tuesday, Nov. 13, with dinner served at 6:30 p.m.

Reservations for the Dora Ferguson catered dinner at $6 may be made by calling Mrs. Lawrence Parker, Jr., president of the Society at 383-0773. The public is welcome.

The speaker will be Robert English of Marshfield, a director of the Marshfield Historical Society, who will present an illustrated talk "Down Memory Lane" which will trace the growing interest in a wide variety of articles from our country's past.

Mr. English is a child psychologist in the Boston Public School system and has made a specialty of the growing importance of "collectibles" as a hobby that can provide significant income.

His talk will follow the dinner and a business meeting.

shining example of long-range planning. The campus idea of the school system was very good; a new school would be a hop and a skip from Osgood School. We will need more playing fields, we will need some space," Pratt said.

Pratt also said that if a wastewater facility were to be built on the site proposed on the school lands it would "slice" the area in half. "This is an educational area, an area in which a sewage plant is not seen as appropriate.

In addition Pratt said the petitioners feel the declining school population is a temporary decline. "We feel the town's population can double. Ambitious young men are building all over this town. Cohasset will grow. A sewered town is going to grow even faster."

Montuori disagreed with Pratt. "We still think the town should make that choice. If I lived next door to the site I'd probably have the same feeling (as Pratt). It has to go somewhere."

Landmaid responded to Montuori that the School-designated land was the only site at which a school could be built. "At none of the other proposed (plant) sites could we put a school."

Getting There Isn't Half The Fun

[This is the first of a three-part report on how South Shore commuters get to Boston. Ed.]

By Laura Griffin

How do you get from here to there? What do you do? When those questions arise, Big Bird generally covers his eyes or crosses them as planes, boats, cars and buses flash across the Sesame Street screen.

When the car's blacked out of the picture, Bird still has a variety of travel choice. So do local residents. For many, alternatives to the private car are the car pool or the bus. In recent times, both modes of travel show dramatic increases.

But what has also increased is commuter boat travel, the airport limousine and even the use of private planes.

This special report is intended as an overlook of alternative travel. Even the MBTA is included. In no way is this intended to be comprehensive. Surely, there are residents who bike to work, maybe jog or ride a horse. Any information on alternatives whether covered by this report or not is welcome.

For residents of Mariner towns: Marshfield, Norwell, Cohasset and Scituate, the following alternatives are available for short trips, long trips, regular commuting.

Bus — The Plymouth and Brockton Street Railway operates regular routes through the four towns with extra service at morning and evening rush hours. Additional buses have been added in the past 15 months. Stops are designated by blue stripes on poles through the towns and on Rtes. 139 and 53.

Users cite cash savings, leisure travel among the benefits; long waits and discomfort as deterrents. Often, bus commuters describe a love-hate relationship.

Commuter Boats — Regular boat schedules are increased in warmer months but commuter service is available year-round. Again commuters cite cash savings and leisure travel, especially being off the road. Some admit to being hooked on travel by sea.

Airport Limousines — Four times daily and once on Sunday, the Airport Limousine Service based in Marshfield offers round-trips to Logan for air travellers. Reservations 24 hours in advance are required but efforts are always made to accommodate a stranded traveller. There is no Saturday service.

Private Planes — Atty. F. Lee Bailey isn't the only local resident to have learned that owning a private plane is practical in both time and money. In fact, private ownership for business has substantially increased, according to sources at Marshfield Airport.

MBTA — None of the four Mariner towns receive any direct MBTA service. In spite of that, the big T charged the towns of Marshfield, Cohasset, Scituate and Norwell over a half a million dollars last year. Some officials and residents complain that the MBTA is taking the towns for a ride.

The Boston Commute

THE BUS

Residents tend to love it or hate it, "it" being the Plymouth and Brockton Street Railway (P & B), the only bus in town. The company serves all Mariner towns with stops at poles with blue stripes, major arteries and shopping areas.

Not only are adults using the bus more but more teenagers are apparently being sent by bus for the short and long hop, according to observers.

Besides travel with the South Shore, P & B buses carry commuters directly to Boston. There are no hook-ups to T service because of the MBTA hegemony.

Riding the P & B is cheaper, not cheap, relaxing and safer, say many commuters. Most riders also agree that the buses are clean. Beyond those concessions, views range from "It's the only way to go." to "I only take it because I have to."

Major problems with bus travel here appear to concern maintenance, schedules and lack of shelters in local areas. And among regular commuter runs the thread that Plymouth and Brockton gives short shrift to their "bread and butter" trade, the daily commuter. When the company arranges rentals or charters, the better vehicle is rented out and the regular trade gets what's left, so they say.

A rider's bus stop and hour of travel are major factors influencing his or her feelings toward the Plymouth and Brockton. Obviously, boarding is a different experience when the stop is steps

Two Rivers And The....

On that first trip, the Columbia also made waves in international diplomacy. In a gale off Cape Horn she became damaged and separated from her companion ship, the sloop Lady Washington, and she put in for repairs at the Island of Juan Fernandes. The Commandant of the Spanish Garrison welcomed her, helped with the repairs and after she was back at sea, he submitted a routine report to the Captain General of Chile. The Captain General was so disturbed, however, at the idea of a United States vessel in Spanish waters that he recalled and arrested the Commandant. He set off to intercept the Columbia; and even though she carried sea-letters, passports from Massachusetts, and letters from the Spanish Minister Plenipotentiary of the U.S., considerable negotiation was necessary with both Spanish and English before she was allowed to proceed.

By this time the two ships were a year out of Boston. They wintered at Nootka Sound, the British trading station on the west coast of Vancouver Island, and spent the next summer exploring and trading up and down the coast. Then for some reason the captains changed ships. The Columbia, now captained by Robert Gray, took all the furs collected by the two vessels, arrived in Canton in December, 1789, traded the furs for a cargo of tea valued at $60,000, and returned to Boston, around the Cape of Good Hope, in August, 1790.

According to Briggs, "she fired off a Federal salute as she passed the castle and another on coming to her mooring." People crowded to the wharves in greeting. Economically she was not so successful. Even at $60,000, her cargo was insufficient to cover the expense of her voyage, and several of her backers sold out to the others. But these men fitted her out to try again, and just six weeks after returning from a voyage of three years, she left Boston for another trading voyage to

By Nina Belsan

Barbara Jones is forty years old. She has four children (18, 16, 13, 10). Her work outside the home has been a series of jobs based purely on economic need. Now that her family is depending on her less, she decides it's time to concentrate on a career instead of intermittent jobs. She has worked in the fields of teaching, advertising and writing but is not quite sure where her real talents lie or in what direction she should go.

What should she do? She could refer to friends for advice, or she could seek out a counseling service or she could write The Woman's Bureau in Washington but if she's wise, the first place she'll look for answers is herself. No matter what sources are available to her, she alone possesses the data she needs to make the correct career choice.

According to author John Crystal, Barbara will need a tool he calls a Life Journal. In his book, "Where Do I Go From Here In My Life," he says that this proven method of self-analysis is extremely helpful in estimating skills and capabilities.

If your question "What can I do?" is still unanswered, try his suggestion: Write your life's story in as many pages as it takes. Include everything about yourself: what you've done; where you've worked; what you've accomplished at each job; what you enjoy doing most; your dislikes; your hobbies; how you relax; your personal assets and liabilities.

After you've finished, don't read it immediately. Put it away for at least two weeks. When you do read it, you'll be amazed at what you'll learn about yourself. Then make two columns on a clean piece of paper. Label one positive and the other negative. Referring to your diary, enter all those things about yourself that you consider positive on the plus side of the ledger and the negative ones on the minus side. As you re-read the positive side, some job skills and description will begin to take shape. Based on past experiences, you'll be able to judge what area of endeavor will make you happiest.

...Good Ship Columbia

China.

This was the trip on which Robert Gray became the first captain to take a ship through the treacherous mouth of the Columbia River. In the spring of 1792, 19 months out of Boston and almost a year in the Pacific Northwest, Gray was exploring and trading south from the winter quarters. He entered a natural bay where he traded for three days and which he named Bulfinch's Harbor after one of the owners of the ship. Today, however, maps show the bay and the county, on the rain-soaked Olympic Peninsula, as Gray's Harbor and Gray's County.

From Bulfinch's Harbor he continued south. in the words of one of the officers or crew, quoted by Briggs, "At daybreak on the 11th (of May), after leaving Bulfinch's Harbor, Gray observed 'the entrance of his desired port bearing east-southeast, distance six leagues,' and runnig into it with all sails set between the breakers,...he anchored at one o'clock, in 'a large river of fresh water' 10 miles above its mouth."

For three days he traded with the Indians, filled his casks with fresh water, and sailed 12 or 15 miles farther up the river until he realized from shallow water that he had taken the wrong channel. For a week he made several attempts to leave. Finally, "he crossed the bar at the mouth by beating over it with a westerly wind and regained the Pacific."

The words "his desired port" indicate that Gray knew about the river and was searching for it. According to K. McBeans's map and notes, this river had been a mystery to ship captains and explorers for over 200 years. A Dutch map by Ortelius first showed its existence in 1570, and Martin d'Aguilar in 1603 reported its probable existence. Rumors of great cities and fabulous wealth on the mysterious "river of the west" reached Europe, and the Spanish hunted vainly all during the 17th century. The wrecking of a Spanish ship on Clatsop Spit about 1725 became part of Clatsop Indian Legend. In 1775 or 76 the Spanish navigator Heceta reported that he had seen the opening, and drew a map to prove it, but he failed to enter.

Bu this time the British explorers had joined the Spanish. In 1788 Captain John Mears searched unsuccessfully for a way to enter and recorded his frustration by naming the point of land to the north of the rivermouth Cape Disappointment. Three years later George Vancouver, captain of the Discovery, passed the mouth without entering and told Robert Gray that he considered the mouth impassable. by the time Gray entered his desired port, "what this entrance was and where it led had become," in McBeans's words,"One of two greatest geographical puzzles of the age." We can only imagine Gray's exultation at being the one to find the solution.

To explain why this puzzle took so long to solve, we need look no farther that the climate, the sea, and the river. Heavy fog, created as warm sea air rises sharply and cools over the coastal ranges, often shrouds the coast. Strong tides and heavy surf constantly create and destroy sand bars and shoals. And the snowmelt flows down from the Rockies and the Cascades through the Columbia and her tributaries, the Okanagan, the Spokane, the Snake, the Klickitat, and the Willammette; unchecked, the force with which this flow met the tides at the mouth must have been turbulent.

The fact that Gray found water fresh enough for drinking so close to the mouth indicates the force of the mountain run-off. Lewis and Clark, attempting 14 years later to paddle down the Columbia in canoes, wrote of the dangerous currents, eddies, rapids, and of the force and height of the tides that left them little room to camp on the banks.

The Columbia rivermouth has continued to command respect.

The Maritime Museum displays relics of dozens of the ships wrecked there over the centuries, and the remains of Getting There...

from home in contrast to a queue in the rain at Queen Anne's Corner.

One of the most enthusiastic bus commuters interviewed was Bill McGowan of Scituate. McGowan, a Boston investment counsellor, has been a regular bus commuter for twenty years. In those decades, he has found "the service is excellent."

As far as costs, "you can't compare the two," McGowan said of the difference between driving and riding. He figured just about a dollar is saved between the cost of the bus ticket and gasoline. That doesn't count gas burned in tie-ups or the cost of parking.

Money's not the only advantage; there is also the "leisure time to read your newspaper or do your crossword puzzle," McGowan said. He boards at the first stop in Scituate and added a description of passenger camaraderie. People are friendly, there are familiar faces every day and he's found that regular commuters "get to know each other."

McGowan did volunteer that "the equipment isn't the best" nor are the buses "always the most comfortable."

Cohasset's Liz Holthaus, an editor for a Boston publishing firm, is also satisfied with the cost and service of the P & B but added that some of her acquaintances do have complaints, undoubtedly legitimate complaints.

However, Ms Holthaus said she boards later than the regular rush, usually the 8:05 hours and works three days a week now. With her monthly bus pass, each one-way trip is about $1.40.

Ms. Holthaus has found the P & B schedules are "pretty reliable" but construction jams on the expressway have been a constant in her three years of commuting by bus. Regardless, the alternative, driving and parking in Boston for five day work-week or three day work-week, sounded "pretty expensive" to Ms. Halthaus.

After six years as a regular customer of the Plymouth and Brockton line, Ms. Claire Rivers said she's "cynical" about the company and the service. The evening she was contacted she had waited almost an hour at Boston's Greyhound Terminal for her connection.

She conceded that things are "much better than a year or two ago." There appears to be more buses, and "50 percent more seats since the gas crunch."

These have been filled with new riders and "lots and lots of kids" who Ms. Rivers thinks are being sent by bus rather than the family car.

Still, Ms. Rivers finds bus commuting makes "a very long day" particularly when it ends with "lines in the terminals that are incredible." Ms. Rivers rises at 5 a.m., often promises herself a nap on the bus, then drives to Hanover for connections. Because her hours vary as a manager in a Boston insurance company, Ms. Rivers commutes from the Hanover Mall. Buses return on a more varied night schedule to that point.

Six years as a regular P & B customer have given Ms. Rivers certain insights into the company. Nearly every rider contacted described maintenance problems. Ms. Rivers was asked to enlarge on that.

"Some of the buses are in poor condition," she said. In the summer, the air conditioning won't work; in the winter, the heat is off. At the same time, windows are often jammed shut in the summer and jammed open in the winter. "Seats are falling apart."

Ms. Rivers assured the Mariner that any broken seat or other problem is rarely repaired but remains indefinitely broken or stuck.

Some things have improved by inches, according to Ms. Rivers. There was a time when people waited at the Mall in all weather while empty buses parked across the way. Now bus drivers allow passengers to board and wait. But it still seems, according to Ms. Rivers. that drivers are "more concerned with getting a full bus" than keeping to the schedule.

Company procedures, such as checking riders twice, punching and paying at different times, add irritants to tired or hurrying commuters that appear unnecessary. But the P & B charter policy ranks among the highest aggravation. Charter and rental customers get the cream of the bus crop, according to Ms. Rivers, while regular riders "who keep them in business" get the leftovers.

Ms. Rivers said commuters can always tell when the company is renting buses for foliage tours or trips to Hersey, Pa. She noted that during the blizzard of '78 commuters rode school buses with 18 inch seats long after the crisis was over. The better buses were rented out to other towns.

In spite of problems and irritants, Ms. Rivers finds the bus "better than driving" and things "much better than a year ago."

"It pays to ride the bus," said Ms. Rivers. She noted she gets a lot of work done whenever "I take it home on the bus." She has seen a woman addressing wedding invitations, students doing homework, people writing bills and always nappers on the sometimes two hour trip.

With more people riding, does Ms. Rivers expect service to improve?

"I hope so," she said but isn't really counting on it.

(Efforts were made by the Mariner to reach officials of the Plymouth and Brockton in connection with this article.)

Friday Night

By Lois Martin

For years I've thought about it, thinking it could be a unique, fulfilling, even exciting experience. But it wasn't. Being home alone on a Friday night didn't turn out to be scintillating.

It isn't that I've never been the only person in the house before. Heaven knows, I've come home to an empty house for years when the car's loaded with groceries. And there's been no one around — except me to bring clothes in off the line before a snowstorm.

But I've always thought it would be nifty, a study in genteel solitude to be home alone on a weekend evening. My chance came when the two remaining males went to a Celtics game as a stag treat, leaving me to look forward to the peace and quiet I've been muttering about.

PATCHES

The late afternoon went well. I did a few errands and returned to give the dog and the cat a snack before settling down with my new "Ladies Home Journal." Then it occurred to me I ought to plan to see a movie, by my own initiative. But the friend I called couldn't make it. And with no one to nudge during the good parts, there didn't seem to be much sense in going.

So I called someone I'd been meaning to talk with. And right off the top I told her I was home alone. Then I tried to reach another friend to tell her the same thing, it being newsy and novel to me. But she wasn't home.

It was clearly supper time. Ordinarily I'd have revved up all four burners by 4:30 p.m., putting the oven on simmer for leftovers. Home alone, however, I discovered less enthusiasm for the evening meal. I saw nothing interesting in the refrigerator. I had failed to defrost my usual chicken. So at 6:30 I threw a frozen one in to roast as it would. The prospect of feeding one is confusing. With no one harping on how soon supper would be ready, I was robbed of direction.

Certainly the cat and dog would have been happy to be included at the kitchen table. But with all due respect to animals' capacity for companionship, I found them weak at lugging up clean clothes, unimpassioned in their response to the evening news or a recital of their day's activities.

I took to my magazine. The phone didn't ring. No one wanted me for anything. There was the cup of tea and me and the loud ticking of the dining room clock.

The Journal filled me in on the dreadful drug downfall of Elvis. Having finished that, I completed an excerpt by a woman who struggled free of valium addiction. I was suddenly worn out. I figured I'd give the dog one more chance to go out then head for bed. I knew it was getting late. It was 7.

The chicken had finished thawing in the oven and was preparing to cook. It didn't matter. I could start cleaning out the desk drawers, something I'd been meaning to do. Or I could go up to the attic and dig out that yarn, find my size nine needles and start an afghan. While I was there I could look for last year's leftover Christmas wrapping paper, just to be ahead of the game. Or I could sit down with our pictures and align them properly in the album. I chose none of the above.

I considered calling a couple other people, but I knew they'd have made plans. They wouldn't be alone. And to call back the same ones I spoke to at 5 might seem to them too much communication within that time span.

I didn't understand it. I've relished a few hours when people were out at meetings. And a Celtics game can only last so long. It might have been because it was Friday and that has always seemed worthy of note, something to be shared with friends or family.

By 7:30 my yawns were long, as I patted the cat, retrieved the dog, and headed for the chicken before I got my nightgown. Suddenly, unexpectedly, the phone rang. It was a nice couple who offered to take me out to dinner, away from myself, the one whom I'd found boring as exclusive Friday night fare. They'd heard I was home alone. I guess word gets around if you keep at it.

And I've concluded it takes practice to show elan in a weekend night alone. I plan to try it again sometime. And I'll be ready with a TV dinner, magazines free of drug abuse stories, and about three good friends who've made similar arrangements.

the Peter Iredale, a 2000 ton British bark wrecked on Clatsop Spit in a heavy storm in 1906, still stick up from the sand on the beach at Fort Stevens State Park.

By then a veteran, Gray must have been aware of the risk he was taking with the ship entrusted to him by her owners. His log reports heavy gales, rainy, dirty weather alternating with light airs and fresh winds and squalls. His action has to be the result of the challenge of calculated risk-taking and his success largely a matter of luck.

Today only the weather remains unchanged. During the time we were there, the coast was damp, cold, misty, foggy, clearing only toward evening so that the sun sand into the dark gray fogbank that obscured the horizon, waiting to creep back before morningWhenwe awoke in our tent at Fort Stevens Park, everything was soggy.

But the river was smooth and wide and placid, its tides controlled by the jetties and breakwaters and its currents harnessed by the hydroelectric dams and turbines. The sands still shift, but channel markers guide freighters from many ports upriver to Astoria and Portland, Oregon and to Longview and Vancouver, Washington.

In addition to shifting sands and treacherous mouths, one other similarity of the two rivers is that they are both spawning grounds for migratory fish. The herring still run though the site in Pembroke on their way to Indian Head Pond. In Indian times, Atlantic salmon also spawned here, but pollution and changes in the water temperature caused by the factories, the kiln, the tack works and the shipyards, caused them to abandon the river way before the Civil War. Attempts to restock them failed, Wes Osborne told me, until about 10 years ago when the State tried Coho or silver salmon, a Pacific salmon. The water temperature is suitable for them in the ocean, but not in the spawning grounds; both males and females are ''milked'' and the eggs hatched in a fish hatchery in Snadwich. They're on their way up-river now, and people are trolling for them.

The Columbia River is the major spawning ground for the King Salmon, much larger than the Coho but about the same size as the Atlantic. They struggled up the rapids and still climb the fish ladders that have been built around the turbines. But the hatched fingerlings get swept over the dams or caught in the turbines and need help to return to the sea.

Whereas the North River once saw the building of thousands of ships, the Columbia still witnesses their arrival. When the wood supply dwindled and the iron ships came in, the problems that face the shipbuilders ended and the river went back to scows and canoes, then speedy, shallow draft outboards, and finally speed limits designed to protect the marsh.

The new mouth of the North River, gift of the storm of '98, still causes us to watch wind and tide. Have you ever anchored off the bell buoy, fished for flounder, and pondered how you would enter without the channel markers? The mysterious river of the west with the equally impenetrable mouth has been tamed by modern engineering, its power used to run factories and light homes long before it meets the sea and its sandspits disciplined by rock.

And the ship Columbia, built on a river subject to storms and tides and shifting sandbars, perhaps carried in her ribs and beams the sense of these hazards and added to her earlier accomplishments by doing what no other ship had done before her and which many failed to do after her. She is a lady acclaimed on each coast.

Sen. McKinnon Co-sponsoring Heating Bill

State Sen. Allan R. McKinnon (D-Norfolk and Plymouth) has co-sponsored a bill along with Sen. John G. King of Danvers to create a Home Heating Assistance Fund to make low interest loans to fuel dealers who are having difficulty paying their suppliers.

The bill is designed to complement legislation recently recommended by the Legislature's Energy Development Caucus. He said that his bill is vital to ensuring the regular delivery of heating fuel to homeowners this winter.

Tax Rate Down 60 Cents. . Bills To Be Mailed Shortly

Late last week the Department of Revenue approved the town's tax rate of $49 — down 60 cents from last year's rate.

A Cohasset homeowner with a home assessed at $40,000 can expect to realize $24 in savings — just about the price of a fresh 20-lb. Thanksgiving Turkey — or three sneakers (one pair and an extra) a mother rightly pointed out.

The $166 million more in cherry sheet reimbursement from the state that Governor Edward King saw as reducing property taxes across the state has had little benefit on the Cohasset rate.

The tax rate could have been reduced more, but the advisory board and the board of selectmen elected to retain the certified July 1, 1979 fee cash balance of $84,722 and to not use the sum to reduce the tax rate.

Estimated increase over last year, received from the state on the cherry sheet, is $82,300. Less estimated increases in charges or state services was $24,500 — resulting in a net gain of $57,800.

The valuation of the town increased by $1,535,800 for a total valuation of $101,391,140 due to new construction, alterations.

The cost of running the town decreased. Total expenditures were below the four percent tax cap by $55,000.

Patrolman Feola's Trial Continued Again

The trial-by-jury of Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr. has been continued for the second time within a week until Monday, Nov. 19 at Wareham Court.

This week Feola's lawyer was unavailable as a result of another case in a higher court.

Feola is being charged with two counts of operating under the influence, one count of driving to endanger, one count of possession of a dangerous weapon and several moving violations.

All of the above charges stem from two separate arrests in the Town of Hull.

Last September Cohasset selectmen suspended Feola without pay pending final court action. Feola is pleading not guilty to the charges.

Five-Member Committee To Advise On Sewage Plant Site

A citizens' advisory committee on the wastewater plant is on the verge of being named as the result of action taken by sewer commissioners Monday.

The formation of the committee was suggested by selectmen last week after Oct. 22 special town meeting hit a snag.

After having defeated the Whale Meadow site, voters discovered the school committee would not reconsider its vote to hold school lands for future school use.

Some town officials, including sewer commissioners, feel there is a legal way to return school lands to the town without consent of the school committee. Town counsel is researching the matter.

Neither commissioners nor citizens present appeared overly enthusiastic about the new five-member group which will further study the various wastewater plant site recommendations made by Metcalf and Eddy Engineers in their final report.

On a motion by Commissioner John Hobbs, it was voted the committee will be comprised of an appointee from the chairman of the board of selectmen, one from the moderator, one from the advisory committee chairman and two appointments to be made by the sewer commissioners.

Present plans call for the committee to come up with one site recommendation sometime in January or February for a special town meeting to be held before April.

Skippers Victors!! Finally

By Rob Tis

Like they say, good things come to those who wait, or some such...

It was a long time coming which only made the turnabout all the sweeter for the Cohasset football varsity.

Not for six games had the Skipper gridiron gladiators flexed their victory muscles but the famine came to a welcome end the past Monday as they defeated Holbrook, 14-0, in a game rained out the previous Saturday.

Cohasset combined a stout defense with an air attack that provided all its points to collar the Bulldogs.

Quarterback Tom Libby arched a 30 yard pass to Joe Becker who made it into the end zone for the score.

Libby then found Bill Duff open in the end zone wit

Joe Silvia's Cars Had Wings

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Up until several years ago Joe Silvia had a chrome-plated racing car on the top of Silvia's Garage on South Main Street.

It stayed there for 20 years — a real challenge for the board of appeals, which could find no by-law about anybody's having a car on their roof.

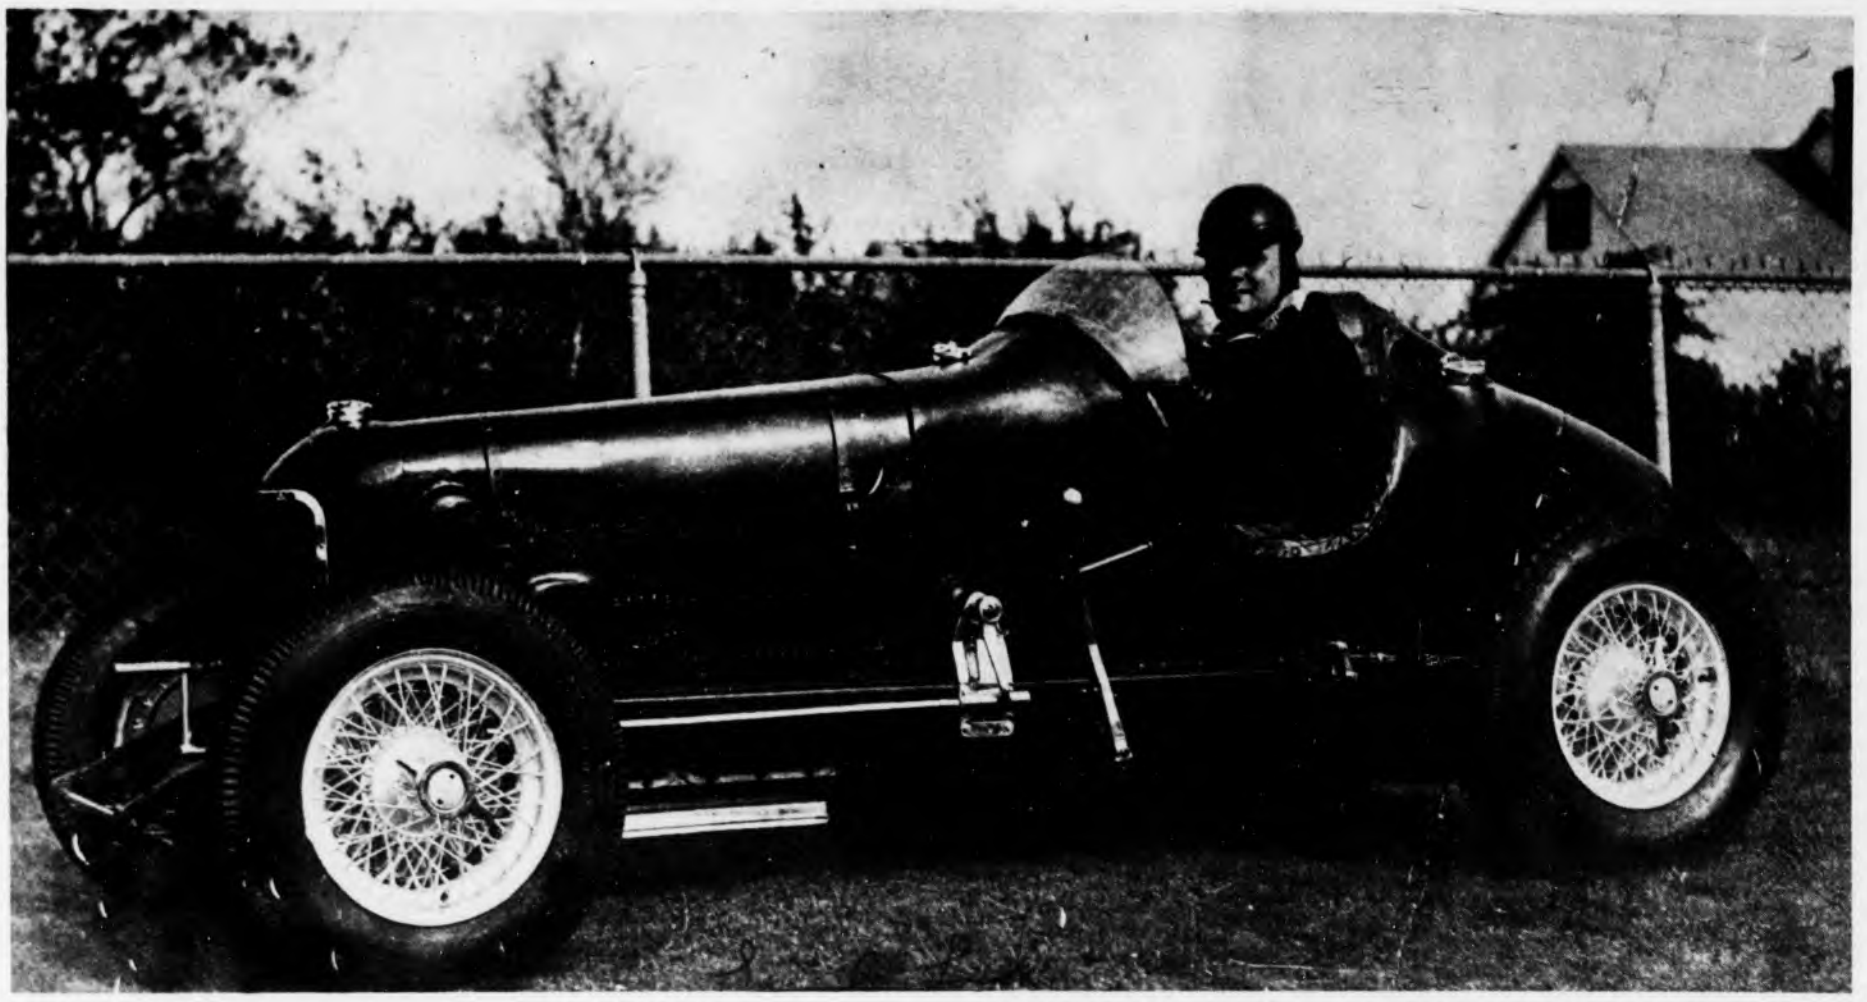
But it was placed there not because Joe wanted to torture the appeals board, but because it was a symbol to his two sons, Richard and Reggie, who both had a big hankering to drive that car.

They never would.

Neither would they get to fly Joe's airplane.

"One day when I knew they were going to try to fly it I went out and cut the wings off and turned it into a snowmobile," Joe said.

In spite of all of the above, both of Joe's sons did follow in his footsteps. Reggie became an engineer and Richard opted for industrial arts teaching. Richard recently bought his father's garage on South Main Street.



Both sons respect the mechanical know-how that went into putting old Indy 500 cars on the Marshfield and Brockton tracks 55 years ago.

But any dare-devil tendencies they might have inherited were knocked out of them during formative years.

Joe Silvia raced cars when "You couldn't figure out who was the promoter of the race, who was going to pay you." The rules were loose, the purse oftentimes got away. But racing was in the blood.

If Joe were racing today he might command some of the highest purses. But he raced then . . . in a state which

(turn to page 5)

CLASSY CLASSIC — Joe Silva recalls yesteryear in his Indianapolis Speedway 500 Miller classic racer which is some different from the spoiler models that growl around the brickyard in the annual Memorial Day race these years.

Cars Had Wings

never really caught-on to stock car racing the way the mid-western states did.

Many years ago he was on his way to the Indy 500 when he got hurt. In Skowhegan, Maine he met his Waterloo. A 2x4 went through his arm and shoulder — he flew through the air 35 feet. He went to the hospital in a hearse. "And if I had been wearing a seatbelt it would have ripped the top half of me off," he said.

Joe was 37 years old when that happened. His wife and his mother saw to it that he didn't race anymore, although he has owned many cars over the years.

Joe was born in 1910. Almost 70 years old, he could pass for a much younger man.

He left school in the 9th grade because in those days finishing one's schooling wasn't that important. And Joe already had a wealth of information about mechanics that no school could have ever taught him. He can never remember not working at his father's (Alfred) garage on the harbor, the Harbor Garage. Harbor Garage was famous for being the scene of one of Cohasset's worst fires ever.

In those days gas tanker trucks didn't have the sophisticated link-up they do now. They delivered gas via a large funnel. After the fire an employee confessed to having thrown a match stick into the funnel.

"That tanker was carrying 200 galloons of kerosene. The match set off the tank like a jet. The tanker went over the telephone wire and landed 200 feet on the hill at McCarthy's. Town officials moved everybody down to the Catholic Church."

Ed Tower and Noel Edwards remember that Joe raced when the race tracks were just dirt.

"Joe practiced at "Rotten Rock" at the town dump, and at 3A near the present high school. We'd race like hell trying out cars before we went to Marshfield," Edwards said. The town's four policemen never caught up.

As a kid he got his picture taken with the summer theatre stars (a predecessor of the South Shore Music Circus). "When Richard Allen came to town the police chief let him drive my car up North Main Street," Joe said.

Joe was also involved in Rum Road Days — "Like the boats, only we used cars." He was hired to drive some pretty important people from here to New York and elsewhere. Once he was presented to Al Cappone in Florida via Howard and Freddy Ames, brothers who worked out of Cohasset and who lived at the Silvia house, for a time.

The boats and the cars were high-power then. "We put airplane motors in the boats — they could outrun the Coast Guard. Lots of boats were faster then than now. They could go 45-50 knots. If they ran out of gas they poured in alcohol. Sometimes they blew up."

Not too many locals were involved in the big stuff. Sometimes when the contacts went out to the "mother ship" from Canada they got caught. Then the locals (lobstermen) went in with their hooks and ropes and rescued the supply, selling it to Cohasset residents.

"That's how Cohasset got its liquor," Richard said.

"In over 64 years we knew every bootlegger," Edwards admitted.

Joe said the average "Joe" in Cohasset, a sea-faring town, didn't realize hard times during 'the crash.' "As Eddy Cantor said, a lot of married men had to give up their girls and go back with their wives."

During Joe Silvia's prime the "Cove" was bustling with activity. There was a boat house, a fire station, bowling alley, Salvadore's Fish Market, a Minot Market, the old Cohasset Supply Store, the Harbor Garage.

As a kid working at his dad's garage Joe remembers lots of people stored their cars when they went away. Joe, unbeknownst to his dad, fooled with the engines of those cars, souping them up for racing. Before the owners returned he always had the engines reinstalled and the owners always commented on how their cars now seemed to "fly."

No one was ever dissatisfied with the service at the Harbor Garage. But if Alfred had known, he would have "killed" him.

Some of the cars Joe raced in New York, New York, Connecticut, are now museum pieces. He won untold individual races everywhere. "But it wasn't organized then like it is now." So where Joe fit in during those days is conjecture. But Cohasset claims him as one of the best.

And at Silvia's Garage on South Main, the customer still gets "race-car" service. In former days the racer did everything to his own car, he couldn't trust anybody else.

Richard runs Silvia's garage with modern methods but old-time philosophy. His customers have noticed the difference.

Commissioner Lot Bates said he preferred the committee be comprised of a larger number while Hobbs said he questioned what the committee would accomplish anyway.

Regardless, Chairman William Montuori said he was confident that any committee would probably narrow the site down to one of the two recommended by the commissioners (the school lands or Whale or Dean Meadow sites).

During discussion, commissioners said that the director of Water Pollution Control and possibly the Attorney General's Office were interested in setting up a meeting with town officials over the unresolved wastewater treatment plant question.

Commissioners told residents they still saw the wastewater plant question as "a horse-race between two sites." But Lester Hiltz and Jean Salvadore disagreed.

Hiltz asked why the commissioners would not allow town meeting to compromise on the site on town meeting floor during a voting session.

Hobbs said he felt mustering the biggest vote would still be a problem, adding that he felt more comfortable with "town bodies" making site recommendations.

With all sites thrown before voters again Hobbs said, "There would be no benefit of recommendations from any consulting engineer."

Hiltz responded that he felt the new citizen's advisory group wouldn't come up with anything much different.

When Jean Salvadore asked why the school lands site, which had been repeatedly voted down by town meeting, was still one of the sites Montuori said the commissioners wished to give the town a choice. "I don't feel two sites on the water gives the town a choice."

Montuori also said that if the new citizen's committee should recommend the school lands site the town might be able to petition the general court for the release of the land.

Hiltz again recommended that town meeting compromise on the sites, with Bates responding: "I feel the wastewater treatment plant is too important to put up for lottery."

Resident Alfred Odermatt said he felt the presentation made by the sewer commissioners at the Oct. 22 special town meeting was lacking in facts, noting that he preferred the Whale Meadow site.

Resident Nancy Jones said she and others felt the effect of odor from a plant located on the school lands would effect school children. But Montuori said the odor would be the same everywhere.

"Did you read the Metcalf and Eddy report? We're asking for more discussion on this particular site — others from neighborhoods on the ocean sites had that chance," Mrs. Jones said.

Montuori said he felt there had been a mandate from the town on the question at the Oct. 22 special meeting, again noting that state action was being threatened.

Pre-Schooler Talk At Center

At 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 14 at the Cohasset Community Center, Mary Benbow, Director of Developmental Needs for Cohasset Public Schools, will speak to parents about special needs of the pre-schooler.

The program is open to the public. Admission is free to all members of the center, but a small donation will be requested from non-members.

Mrs. Benbow plans to show how parents can help their children by doing "the right thing at the right time." The talk is especially appropriate for parents of pre-schoolers; nursery schools in surrounding towns have been informed of the presentation.

Mrs. Sandra Putnam, Director of the Community Center Nursery School, will introduce Mrs. Benbow.

Selfish About You

What if the three newspapers which cover Cohasset on a regular basis decided to employ one reporter and printed that one article that reporter wrote in all three newspapers? You wouldn't like that, would you?

Ok. Here's the point we're trying to make. Lately it seems everybody wants to write to or for the Mariner. We consider that to be a delightful problem. Here's how you can help.

Over the past two months we've been getting some lengthy pieces — about everything. Recently we went to four extra pages in order to print those pieces. They were all well-written, had a lot to say, and we're pleased that you sent them to us.

But here are a few guidelines for you to make sure that what you want to say in the future gets into the newspaper in the form in which you wish to say it. And here's how we decide what gets priority.

1. If you tell us in a cover letter that we have the only copy of your letter for publication in existence, we're pushovers. You've got us. Don't try to blanket the area by having your letter copied and mailed to more than one newspaper. Eventually, everyone ignores you.

2. Try to keep your most lengthy opinion, commentary or letter at approximately 500 words (two pages, doubled spaced on a typewriter). We break this rule weekly, so don't sweat it.

3. We will publish unsigned letters when we know the identity of the writer and feel the writer has a genuine reason to fear retaliation.

Other than the above, keep your letters and articles and commentaries coming. When you stop talking to us we bang our heads against the wall. Every week, your letters and opinions get priority. Sometimes, over ours.

And don't stop telling us off. Over the years our collective skins have become very thick, although we still hate to be wrong.

Last week we made an error in our cryptogram. We got calls about it 15 minutes after we were on the newsstands. That startled us.

Now we've installed a cryptogram checker (our publisher). He solves the crypt before it gets typeset. Unless he breaks down our crypt will probably be perfect from now on.

And thanks.

Future Shock: Still No Sewer Site

Cohasset TM April I, 1984

By Chet Ellis

At a sparsely attended but colorful meeting last night, the Cohasset School Committee, in a continuing paradigm of lethargy, again voted down, three to three, the transfer of Milliken Field as a site for the proposed sewage treatment plant.

The turndown is the nineteenth involving five different locations in a long series of confrontations between the school committee and the sewer commissioners. Beginning back in 1979 with the now infamous "Music Circus" site, other contested locations included the controversial Tennis Court site of 1980, the bitterly contended Deer Hill front lawn site of 1981-82, and the Osgood School parking lot site of 1983.

After the meeting, Elizabeth Looney, school committee chairperson, explained the board's action by stating that "The Milliken Sports Complex was too valuable as a source of income to the school system to throw it away like that."

Ms. Looney stated further that "If the town doesn't stop picking on the school committee, I'll see to it that the next school budget would dry up all the available disposable income in Cohasset and then some."

Yesterday's action by the committee prompted Tyler Snit, former school committee member and now chairman of the Board of Selectmen to hold an impromptu press conference at the Log and Line coffee shop. Speaking to a group of concerned patrons, Snit proclaimed that "Not since the Gladsden Purchase has there been such a flagrant disregard of public interest." "Our last inland site option has been shut off," he lamented.

At next month's town meeting Cohasset citizens will have to choose between Bassings Beach and Brush Island, the 14th and 15th choices respectively of their engineering consultant, Nelson and Eddy. The Saturday morning "coffee after tennis" crowd agreed that neither site is likely to be approved.

One listener suggested the plant be constructed on a floating island to be moored in the center of Lily Pond but he was shouted down before he was able to develop his idea further.

Pierre LeDuc, an artisan of local repute, an acerbic wit, and now chairman of the advisory committee, pointed out to the gathering that "since the ten thousand dollar a day fine had begun in mid 1981, Cohasset now owed the State of Massachusetts over nine million dollars. Consequently, so many people have left town that the need for a sewer plant has decreased to a point where site selection is probably academic. It's now only a question of money."

At that the crowd relaxed. "Somehow, I always knew it would turn out allright," remarked Snit as the group ajourned to the street, anxious to see about getting their boats ready for the coming season.

Looking Back

The Resurfing Of Atlantic Avenue

By Peter Barnicle

The current hassle over a site for a new sewer treatment plant is in the classic tradition.

Controversy surrounds every new project proposed in town and with environmental protection agencies, flood plain commissions and other groups all having their say the possibilities for debate are endless.

In addition to the sewer treatment plant there is also a proposal for a new town hall and one for a new central fire station. Both proposals have been studies — and re-studied — by committees over the past decade.

This type of intra-mural sport has been going on ever since the town was founded. In fact the town was founded as the result of a pre-Revolutionary era controversy with Hingham over the right of Cohasset to have its own minister and school.

One of the controversies a century ago involved a proposal for a new road. Today Atlantic Avenue winds near the ocan front from Nichols Road, past Sandy Beach and over Cunningham Bridge to Beach Street and then on to Margin Street at the harbor. In the middle of the 19th century however, the stretch from Nichols Road to Beach Street was missing.

A number of townspeople, particularly those who owned property in the area, thought that a macadam roadway, an extension of Jerusalem Road, would enhance the value of the land and attract builders of summer homes. Naturally, their reason was that the new homes would bring increased income to the town.

The proposal to "build a road across 'the island' (Beach Island)" was first brought up at a town meeting in 1852 and then put on the back burner.

For the next 30 years the necessity for the road was debated pro and con. Peter Kimball, owner of the Pleasant Beach House, and several other property owners, agreed to offer the town a right of way through their land for the road. Kimball went so far as to say he would build the road through his own land.

It wasn't until the town meeting of 1884 that the proposal was again brought up at town meeting. The selectmen were asked to study the idea.

However, this time propon-

The Legislative Pay Raise

By Bucky Yardume

Commentary

For Halloween's small set, treats are strictly pot luck and tricks few, if any.

Not so for Beacon Hill hobgoblins.

What state legislators perpetrated Halloween night (the time for heists) was a treat only for themselves, pure trickery for everyone else.

Unlike the little people who prowl byways for bounty and settle for what they get, the solons (it may be so-longs), decide their own loot. They made the most of the literally golden opportunity, and, needless to say, didn't settle for peanuts.

Legislators voted themselves a pay hike from $17,800 to $20,200, about 12 percent which is below the inflation rate of 18 percent and at least debatable. However, the House permitted no debate and the Senate, not to be outdone, precluded rollcall so only a few pushed the measure through raising the question if 20 big ones isn't a bit much for part-time help. Beyond that, in the process they also approved raises ranging from their 12 percent upwards through the Senate President, Speaker of the House and sundry others for much heftier hikes, all the way to Governor King's windfall of a boost from $40,000 to $60,000 — a whopping $20,000 increase or 50 percent. To compound the action, it was voted to double expenses. Double!

No mind whether the King donates his share of the booty to charity or signs the legislation, because mind you, this is the same crew that slapped a 4 percent spending cap on cities and towns and preach holding the line but practice something else entirely.

Since Congress gave itself an earlier treat of similar ilk, apparently the thinking was, "What's good for Washington's good for us." But not, obviously, for the troops in the trenches who are expected to settle not for cake but crumbs of 4 percent or as close to it as can be manipulated.

Pity the Advisory Board on the verge of budget hearings with even a 5.5 percent guideline ceiling. They may run into a buzzsaw, thanks to the latest Hill heist.

Plainly merit had nothing to do with the Halloween trickery.

The current legislature has been almost totally unproductive in the past session.

There's little royal about King's feats beyond turning a lot of people purple with outrage, not to mention those of his boot lickers, at least those who lasted past appointment for sundry nefarious reasons.

A 50 percent raise! That doesn't put King in a class with oil companies or the sheiks of Araby, but he's getting there. After all, he alone of the state political hierarchy is chafing to risk the Georges Bank fishing grounds for offshore drilling without all safeguards mandated.

The ghosts of Halloween, 1979 should come back to haunt the tricksters as less then a treat, comes election.

Tax Rate

doesn't feel the town has done that badly over the last eight years with regard to the tax rate. In 1971 the town was revalued down to $35.50. In eight years the town has experienced an average increase of $1,76 per thousand a year — or 4.5 per cent.

As Pratt pointed out, "Some other towns are using a lot of free cash to lower their tax rate further, but we get nothing."

Pratt said tax records are now being processed and assessors expect to start mailing out bills by Nov. 15. Bills will be payable 30 days from the day they are sent as indicated by the postmark.

Residents Urged To Attend Nov. Harbor Meeting

Unless a meeting conflict is discovered, the harbor committee will shortly schedule an open meeting (one of four to be held) at 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 29 at town hall to discuss present and future harbor needs.

The harbor committee met with its consultant, Burk Ketcham of Anderson-Nichols, last week to discuss details of the $17,950 CZM study grant which will help the town come to grips with harbor development.

The town has added $5,000 to the CZM grant, giving the consultants approximately $22,950 to accomplish the study by April 1980 — at which time a final report would be issued to residents. Ketcham said also there is a possibility of the state offering some supplemental services.

Study specifications call for an aerial photo to be made, harbor regulations to be scrutinized, salinity of the water to be studied, concerns of commercial fishermen to be taken into consideration and a detailed description of harbor economics and recreational activities to be defined.

According to Harbormaster Harry Ritter, harbor inventory (boats, equipment) approximates $3M.

Charles Fink, chairman of the harbor committee, said one important detail on which his committee is "edgy" is the regulation which defines a commercial fisherman as one who derives 85 per cent of his income through fishing.

Fink said the committee had already asked town counsel for guidance on that regulation with regard to financial disclosure.

Lobsterman Bernard Salvadore noted at high tide there is only 22 ft. of water outside the town float at Lawrence Wharf, a main channel.

According to Ritter, the Army Corps of Engineers when first notified of the water depth responded that dredging wasn't necessary. "Now they say it is the town's responsibility to dredge around the float," Ritter said.

He added that he plans to insert an article on the annual town meeting warrant asking for approximately $5,000 to dredge the area.

No. One Wilde Play At Town Hall This Week Only

Oscar Wilde wrote The Importance of Being Ernest in three weeks. The play started its illustrious career in the St. James Theatre on February 14th, 1895. It will be reproduced this Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall by the Cohasset Dramatic Club.

Written during Wilde's most successful period, the play ridicules everything that human beings take seriously and shows off Wilde's natural gift for exaggeration, his profundity as a self critic and his superficiality as a creator.

The success of the play depends largely on the simple sincerity and gravity of the players. We will not pretend to call this review a "critical" one as last Sunday the players were still perfecting lines, skitting from scene to scene and attempting to keep their millinery on their heads in the process.

But even at Sunday's rehearsal the Mariner felt the fun of the play break through.

Wilde, of course, wrote himself into every play — a central figure in a solemn masquerade. Ernest, considered his most important play, was written to move people to laughter. After 84 years, it still does.

The audience will be delighted and surprised to find Wilde in the form of Walter Van Dijk, an 18-year old young man who came to this country from England eight years ago. His father is a composer for the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and is presently writing an opera. Walter is active in Boston theater.

His voice is round, soft and full of variety and we look forward to seeing him make his full impact on the Cohasset stage this week.

Felix Van Dijk, Walter's brother, plays Jack Worthing — the second chief male character. Dijk has played in the Boston Shakespeare Company. Both Dijks along with Beth Donahue (Cecily Cardew) and Bennett Driscoll, both of Cohasset, come to this production direct from the successful Oliver Goldsmith's "She Stoops To Conquer" by the Elizabethan Company of Wayts and Players in Hingham.

Other Cohasset players are Sara de Lima as the Hon. Gwnedolyn Fairfax and Judith Chute as Lady Bracknell, and Helen Ketcham as Miss Prim.

The play is directed by Valerie Lester of Scituate and produced by John Mallon of Scituate. Last year Ms. Lester directed Romeo and Juliet for Harvard's Boston group.

Bob Schultz of North Scituate is cast in the role of the Rev. Canon Chasuble D.D.

PRODUCER/DIRECTOR/ACTRESS/AUTHOR — Cohasset's Helen Ketchum plays Miss Prim in the "Importance of Being Ernest."

☐Ralph Froio, Cohasset High School senior and this year's Homecoming King, is the son of Ralph and Agnes Froio. He plans to take a year of post-graduate study before entering college. One of the best parts of being King, he admitted, was all the kissing he was required to do last weekend! Congratulations Ralph! (Homecoming Queen is Christine Hanlon and we told you a little about her last week; Ralph's paragraph was mistakenly copped off when tired and frantic hands were making space at the 11th hour!)

☐I'm sure Erwin Cone and son, John, of the Red Lion Inn, would welcome the help of "Meals on Wheels" volunteers in his kitchen, however, the three ladies pictured with the Cone's in last week's paper, are not of the Red Lion Inn: Beverly Quilty is the Chairman of the 'Meals' program, and Anna Abbruzzese and Anita Bernstein are volunteer drivers.

☐Steve Espinosa, son of Colleen and Fred Espinosa of 56 Jerusalem Road, is a freshman student pursuing business studies at the American International College in Springfield. Steve, who is a graduate of Cohasset High School, likes college very much, and keeps busy playing the drums for a rock/jazz group that entertains at school parties. The Espinosa's other children are Fred, Jr., a Cohasset High School senior, and Shannon, 10, a student at the Deer Hill School.

☐Air Force Staff Sergeant Benjamin Hagan III, son of Elizabeth Hagan of 15 N. Main St., has re-enlisted in the U.S. Air Force after 11 years service. Sergeant Hagan, a security supervisor at RAF Bentwaters, is a member of the United States Air Forces in Europe. He is a 1966 graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐Paula Kozol, of 375 Atlantic Ave., was one of 150 Radcliffe alumnae from all parts of the country who gathered at the Radcliffe College Fund Assembly at the Hilles Library in Cambridge on Oct. 12 to learn about the college's current programs and participate in fundraising workshops.

☐Cohasset residents, Kathy and Larry Quemere participated last Saturday night in the Second Annual Great Chef's Party held at Bloomingdale's Home Furnishings Store in Chestnut Hill. The Quemeres have been in the catering business for seven years and run, both as proprietors and chefs, Rene's Catering (Scituate). They presented lemon mousse and spritz cookies for 150 people at their table. The invitational affair, that included chefs from some of Boston's most famous restaurants, raised money for the Sidney Farber Kidney Foundation in Mass.

☐Cohasset Explorer Post 28 will launch it's 11th year of Emergency and First Aid Training with a basic first aid training course commencing Sunday, Nov. 11 at 7:30 p.m. at the Joseph Osgood School. The course will be conducted by Mark Trask, E.M.T. with the Cohasset Fire Department.

Prospective members are cordially invited to join. Membership requirements include: 14-21 years old; male and female; and good scholastic standing.

Post 28, under charter of BSA (Boy Scouts of America) is busy overhauling their field kitchen trailer, which is used for supportduring times of local emergency.

Mud Room To Be Renovated

By Jennifer Grisdale

The long-debated and laughed-about "mud" room at the high school is soon to gain respectability. At Monday's meeting the school committee voted 4-2 in favor of renovating it to a storage room at an estimated project cost of $16,000. Bids will be advertised.

School committee member Frank England said the present storage spaces at the high school are inadaquate. He said one of the storage rooms contains three broken desks and has paint cans and rollers on the floor. He emphasized that this situation has existed for a number of years.

Patricia Walsh added that a lot of the new athletic equipment is now being stored off school property, which she felt was "not good."

Superintendent John Maloney pointed out that storage room is available at Deer Hill school, but transporting equipment as needed between the schools would be awkward and time consuming.

Jack Langmaid said the mud room, located in the west wing of the high school is not a convenient place for storage of athletic equipment. "We need something more in the nerve center of the school, not at the far end of it," he said.

METCO DINNER guests included, Letisha Linsley, Danny Bickerstaff, John Linsley, Jamie Langmaid, Willy Langmaid and P.J. Stewart.

Social Studies Dept. Reviewed

The school committee heard a system wide review of the social studies department at Monday's meeting, which emphasized the many good points as well as the weak points of the program.

At the junior-senior high school level, Edward Sheehan, emphasized the versatility of the teachers and their willingness to work together. He said teachers stressed English skills in their classes, including grammar use and the ability to express thoughts in an essay form. Sheehan said his teachers also spent a great deal of personal time helping students.

He said the department needs a clerical assistant to help type course outlines and other supplemental materials.

Sheehan stressed the department has not been able to use many supplemental materials because no typist was available to prepare them for student distribution.

He said he also does not have enough time available to evaluate teachers as often as he would like. He said he teaches four out of the seven periods per day, which leaves him little time to watch the other teachers in his department in action.

Kenneth Eckberg, principal of Deer Hill School, said his program was diversified, including elements of geography, map skills, some American history, and anthropology.

He said he thought the program needed better coordination of field trips to avoid repetition among the grades and a more systematic approach to career and consumerism awareness.

At Joseph Osgood School, Principal John Creamer said he thought the program developed a positive self image for the student. He said in a primary school, the social studies program should be an exercise in social living because it is the first time children really work together.

He also felt field trips should be better coordinated and stressed consumerism and career awareness.

Creamer recommended that a social studies program review committee be established.

Temperature Lowered At CHS

Business Manager John Raftery reported to the school committee that in an effort to conserve energy within the system, the temperature in the high school had been dropped to 65 degrees and in the elementary schools the temperature had been lowered to 68 degrees.

He said the breezeway next to the courtyard was also in the process of being closed in to lower the amount of heat which escapes from the hall when the door is open.

Raftery added the ceiling in the senior high shop room has been lowered to help keep heat from escaping.

Pied Piper Comes To Cohasset!

The Friends of the Cohasset Library take great pleasure in presenting the New England Theatre Guild for Children in their musical production of the Pied Piper.

The performance will take place Wednesday, Nov. 14 at 3:30 p.m. in Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's Church. It is open to children from K-Grade 6 and admission is free.

The New England Theatre Guild for Children is a non-profit touring theatre, now in its fourth year, which has performed in many school systems in and around Boston.

Last year it played to nearly 200,000 children.

The NETGC tries to make children's classics come alive through the magic of theatre. Music, mime, comedy, and dance are all used to entertain.

This year's production, The Pied Piper, is a wonderful story of a small town's encounter with a magical stranger and his sweet music.

The magic in his music, storybook sets and costumes, and the characters of the children, rats, councilmen, and townspeople, will keep children involved and entertained.

The Friends of the Cohasset Library is an organization which arranges the extensive volunteer program at the library and presents programs for both adults and children which provide enrichment and cultural opportunities.

Looking Back

ents were ready to do battle. They got up a petition requesting a special town meeting and 178 residents signed it.

J.Q.A. Lothrop, the moderator, called the meeting for Sept. 18 and the proponents and the remonstrants (the opposition) showed up for a discussion. Henry D. Hyde, counsel for the opponents, was well prepared. At least, according to reports of the meeting, he talked for two hours.

Hyde argued that the road was not needed and was more expensive than the town could afford. He also questioned whether a bridge could be legally built across the mouth of Little Harbor without the permission of the legislature.

At the time there was a wooden bridge where Cunningham Bridge now spans the opening. It replaced Cuba Dam which had been built around 1765.

How Cuba Dam came by its name is another story. One legend says that an elderly black from Cuba lived in the area at the time it was built. Another story is that is was named to commemorate Lord Abermale's capture of Havana by the British in 1762.

In any case the dam was built to protect the salt marshes where haying was a big industry. Several expensive efforts were made to control the tides, but recurring storms undid the work.

In any case at the special town meeting the Selectmen decided "to layout the proposed road in three distinct locations and secure estimates from road builders as to the probable cost, and to report to the next annual town meeting."

The "three distinct locations" idea started another broucha. Peter Kimball, whose hotel burned down in 1881, found that one of the routes would go directly in front of his barn and spoil several house lots on which he planned to build. Another route would go through his orchard and over his wells.

Undaunted by the protests Daniel N. Tower surveyed the routes as outlines to him by the selectmen. A hearing was held before the legislative committee on harbors and members of the committee took time off from the arduous duties to visit Cohasset for a look at the proposed bridge site.

The matter was on the warrant for the 1885 town meeting and was defeated by a vote of 127-113. The meeting voted to have "a committee of seven, appointed by the moderator, to act with the selectmen in revising and changing the proposed location of the proposed road."

W.C. Burrage, a resident of Beach Island and one of the proponents of the road, was recorded after the meeting as saying "The selectmen have been bullied in the matter from the first, threatened with suits at law and loss of position, talked to and at behind their backs by some of the first citizens of the town, begrudged the expression of their opinions and then forsooth cooly told they 'insult' people by their labor to improve the town."

Despite the adverse vote the legislature approved the bridge part of the project, but not before Atty. Hyde made his position perfectly clear. "My client," he said, "is totally opposed to any road of whatever name, nature or description."

The town fathers restudied the road and finally in 1890 Atlantic Avenue as we know it now came into being. Not exactly where it was first planned — along the ocean front — but then you can't have everything.

Recreation Is A Responsibility

By John W. Worley
Director, Cohasset
Recreation Department

All too often we view recreation as a luxury, activities we engage in as a form of reward to ourselves for coping with life's daily pressures. This line of thought is archaic and may, or may not, represent a general point of view. However, it remains far too prevalent in today's society.

During the past few decades our lifestyles have been greatly altered by a number of factors and influences generated by technical advances, increase of leisure time due to these advances, and significant changes in our occupational/economic status.

Traditionally, the basic unit of society has been and is still considered, the "Family." However, the connotation has taken on different meanings and roles today.

In an agricultural society the family not only worked together as a unit but also recreated together in the same unit, including the "extended family." Today, because of our technical occupations, the increase and availability of travel, and economic freedom, we find the family going in separate directions at both work and play.

Families are no longer one and two car families, but rather one car for each driver. Public transportation has become more affordable and available in recent years, and has increased our range in the pursuit of recreation. In effect, each member of the family has become more independent of one another as well as on society in general.

The impact on recreation has been substantial, and while offering more choices, it may have a detrimental effect on the structure of the family. We now find mom and dad going their separate ways to recreate and the children going in their own ways in the pursuit of activities. While this will not cause, in itself, a breakdown of society, it has caused, in many cases a breakdown in family ties, communications and relationships.

It has been said that "the family that recreates together will stay together." This of course, is an over generalization, however, there may be a great deal of truth in it. It is the wise recreator, and the wise family, who tries to offer programs and facilities with the entire family in mind.

While it is difficult to offer programs that will meet the needs and hold the interest, of all family members, it is not impossible. Given the flexibility and open-mindedness within the family and its members, it becomes feasible.

Events such as movies and band concerts, activities for example, as golf, tennis, or other lessons, open to all aged residents, offers a new dimension in recreational programming.

It is necessary that both participants and recreators remain dynamic and flexible in their planning in order to meet the needs of the individual, the family, and remain within the frame-work and demands of our society.

The ultimate responsibility lies within each and everyone of us. It is our responsibility to set aside the proper time, to pre-plan quality activities, and to make the necessary adjustments in our life styles in order to afford the time to engage in man's oldest and most basic need — RECREATION.

Youth Hockey Registration

YOUTH STREET HOCKEY PROGRAM

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct registrations for Youth Street Hockey on Saturday, Nov. 10 at the Town Hall, from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. Late registrations will be accepted on a space available basis only.

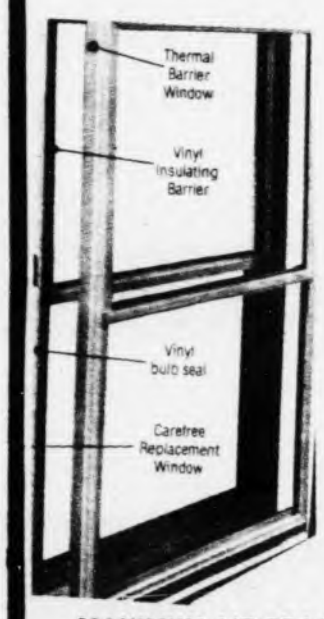
The program is open to girl's and boy's aged 6 (by December 1, 1979) to age 12, (no older than age 12 by December 1, 1979).

The fee is $5 per person and a 50 per cent discount will be offered to second and subsequent children from the same family.

The program will be held Saturday mornings, beginning Saturday, Dec. 8. There will be an additional small fee, at a later date, for team T-shirts.

TENNIS LIGHTS

Lights at the Milliken Field Tennis Courts will be shut off for the season in the near future, as weather dictates. The tennis lights will be put back on next spring. Nets will be taken in for the winter as well. The tennis courts will be locked until spring to minimize the damage to surface areas of the courts.



BOSTON UNIVERSITY BASKETBALL

On Saturday afternoon, Nov. 17, the Boston University basketball team will conduct a practice session and inter-squad scrimmage at Abington High School.

The afternoon of basketball will consist of men's and women's squads running a half hour practice followed by a scrimmage game. The staff and players will be available at the conclusion for a questions and answer period.

Doors will open at 1 p.m. The women's practice program will begin at 1:30 p.m., and the men's at 2:45 p.m. The public is invited.

Village Fair Will Be Loaded With Food

Food to suit all tastes, much of it prepared by Cohasset's finest cooks, will again be featured among the offerings of the 39th Cohasset Village Fair to be held on Saturday, Dec. 1, from 10-2:30 in buildings around Cohasset's historic Common.

This year the contributions of culinary artists of St. Anthony's Church will be added to those of St. Stephen's, Second Congregational and Unitarian churches, as the Village Fair becomes totally ecumenical with the participation of all four of the Village churches. Traditionally, the Village Fair rings in the holiday season in Cohasset.

Holiday gourmet tastes will be particularly catered to by the food table which will be loaded down with home-cooked delicacies assembled by a committee headed by Mrs. Robert Turner. The bounteous supply of home-baked breads, cakes, cookies and the specialties of the town's talented cooks will be replenished throughout the period of the Fair.

Once again, Hamilton Tewksbury and his helpers will be offering famous specially-selected Vermont cheese that has become an institution of the Fair, and this year will also add old-fashioned pickles to the table.

Still in the Town Hall will be a Candy Table, where a committee headed by Mrs. M.H. Soule will be selling a wide variety of special sweets appealing to the tastes of tots, teenagers and seniors.

One of the most popular of the Town Hall offerings will be the Snack Bar presided over by Philip Shockman and a group of men from the four churches. Here young people, and older as well, can satisfy their hunger and thirst with hot dogs, doughnuts, and soft drinks.

Across the Common in the Unitarian Parish House will be the traditional chowder bar of the Fair, an attraction that each year draws regular repeat customers who look forward to this offering of home-made chowder and sandwiches at lunchtime.

Three couples, Mr. and Mrs. George Fowle, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hubbell, and Mr. and Mrs. John Vivian, are staffing this busy activity.

Capping the food offerings of the Village Fair will be the annual Village Fair dinner on Saturday evening, Dec. 1, in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. Mrs. Edmund A. Steimle heads the group arranging for the event which in recent years has established itself as a delightful dining occasion. Tickets to the dinner, limited to the capacity of the hall, will be on sale by representatives of each of the churches.

Mrs. Robert H. Sturdy and Mrs. Roger L. Rice, representing St. Stephen's Church, head the Central Committee as co-chairmen this year. Representatives to this committee from the individual churches are: St. Anthony's, Mrs. Francis E. Charles and Mrs. John J. Riley; St. Stephen's, Mrs. R. Perry Collins, 2nd, and Mrs. Paul R. Neelon; Congregational, Mrs. Gordon L. Goodwin and Mrs. Hubert P. Vanderlugt.

Also Unitarian, Mrs. Roger Crafts, Jr., and Mrs. Stuart W. Weier. Secretary of the Committee is Ms. Florence Hildebrandt, and the Treasurer is Mrs. Joseph R. Nedrow.

There are only two more steps to go for Marc Kantor, 8, of Mrashfield and David Stover, 15, of Cohasset to make the trip to the super bowl as winners in the Ford Punt Pass and Kick competition.

Both have won the first three steps Dealer, Zone and district competitions and will be competing in the area competition held at Schaefer Stadium Nov. 18.

Winners at Schaefer Ford Division competitions Dec. 16, and the winners of the division competitions will compete at the National Football Leagues Super Bowl XIV, Jan. 20.

Shown with Marc and David are Peter Shramn president of Cohasset Motors sponsors of the punt, pass and kick and A.J. Antoine, Vice-president and coordinator of the punt pass and kick competitions for Cohasset Motors.

Village Shop Talk

By Larry Fone

How fortunate we are to live in or near Cohasset with its convenient shopping — the village and harbor shops and Route 3A shops — all the speciality and service shops with some fine restaurants too!

The keywords are convenience, quality, service and courtesy. Quality and service have got to be most important.

Smaller merchants will try harder to please you and the personal relationship has got to make your shopping more pleasant. Knowing the owner and clerks assures you of better service. Special orders, special gift wraps and mailing are available in every shop, though policies vary.

Generally gift wrapping is available and the charge if any is very modest . . . usually at cost . . . including shipping. Do recommend you ship, yourself, if possible for the post office has the up-to-the-minute costs including insurance.

We all must be better consumers with the inflation of today . . . so speak up and ask questions . . . guarantees . . . return policies. Attention and courtesy to your buying needs are important to every Cohasset merchant. If you don't get the answers you need ask for the owner (courtesy is a two-way street).

For your youngsters who are shopping this season, provide them with a list of "wants" including color and size. Make it easy on your kids who have only a few dollars to spend whether for birthday or holiday gifting. Also, let the merchants help. No merchant wants to sell your youngster something you don't want or need.

Many shopkeepers this season will plan special days and evenings for your shopping convenience, including refreshments. Those participating will have signs at the door. Enjoy shopping Cohasset.

For any consumer who has a suggestion or complaint . . . a post card to Larry Fone, Cookworks, 25 S. Main St., Cohasset, 02025.

Have An Alternative Thanksgiving

By Sharon Becker

As you prepare for the feast on Thanksgiving, why not experience famine on Nov. 15 — the sixth Annual Fast for a World Harvest.

By going without food for all or part of the day and contributing the money saved to Oxfam self-help projects, you accomplish two goals.

You share the feeling of hunger with men, women and children who know the real thing day after day, and what you spend on food in a single day will enable people in Africa, Asia or Latin America to buy seed for an entire crop, raise a flock of chickens, or build an irrigation ditch.

If you would like to sign a "Statement of Intent to Fast" call Sharon Becker at 383-1971 and you will be sent further information about the effect of the Fast and Oxfam-America's on-going programs.

Or plan to fast and send money directly to Oxfam-America, 302 Columbus Avenue, Boston, Mass. 02116.

Oxfam is a nonsectarian, international development agency helping people to help themselves, and does not accept funds from any government source.

He was buried at the Old Ship Cemetery in Hingham.

League To Hold Sewer Meeting

Should the Town of Cohasset require annual septic tank pumping? What are the implications of increasing the minimum lot size in Cohasset to one acre? Should Cohasset require homes to be equipped with water saving fixtures?

The League of Women Voters would like to invite the citizens of Cohasset to a program on the evening of Nov. 15 at which these issues will be addressed by members of the Board of Health and the Planning Board.

Recently these Boards received a letter from the Cohasset Sewer Commissioners recommending consideration of these, and other, changes in regulations.

The League of Women Voters is interested in the issues raised by these potential changes, which would, if enacted, have far reaching effects on the town's future growth and development.

The meeting will be held at Trueblood Hall, Unitarian Parish House, on Thursday, Nov. 15. Coffee and refreshments will be served at 7:30 p.m. The program will begin at 8:00 p.m. with the showing of the League film, "Cohasset: Choice or Chance?".

Immediately following the film, the Boards will be introduced. At 9:30 p.m. there will be a question and answer period. The meeting will be adjourned at 10:00 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Flu Shots Available Now!

The Cohasset Board of Health in conjunction with the Social Service League of Cohasset is offering two Flu Clinics to Cohasset residents. The immunization is against the A-Brazil, A-Texas, and B-Hong Kong strains.

The Clinics will be held at the Social Service League Office at 83 South Main Street. Dates are Thursday, Nov. 8, from 1-3 p.m. and Saturday, Nov. 10, from 10 a.m. to 12 noon.

The Board encourages those residents over 65 years old, the chronically ill, and town employees to attend.

Old Man Winter Reminders!

By Police Sgt. John Rhodes
Safety Officer

While winter's cold weather is still ahead, it's not too early for local drivers to review recommended measures for handling winter's seasonal difficulties. We must undertake these recommended measures in order to insure the safety of the public and, especially, school children who daily walk or ride to and from school.

Every year we hear "solutions" to old problems of driving on ice and snow. "Let some air out of your tires," say some. "Put some concrete blocks in your trunk for additional traction," say others. This is nonsense.

It is pointed out by the National Safety Council that these "remedies" not only fail to increase traction, they're downright dangerous. Reducing the tire pressure actually reduces tracking stability and increases tire wear. The tires flex more, which generates heat that reduces traction on ice and snow.

"Add weight?" Blocks in the trunk? Not true! Extra weight in the trunk reduces the car's capability to do what the design engineers intended it to do. It interferes with steering. Here are some of the real "solutions" which can be helpful during winter driving:

1. Remember, it takes three to nine times as far to stop on snow and ice as it does on dry pavement. Decrease your speed and increase your following distance accordingly.

2. Get the feel of the road by carefully accelerating to find out when your wheels spin: or brake gently away from taffic to find out when they skid.

3. Pump your brakes to slow or stop. It's important to maintain rolling traction and steering.

4. Use finesse in accelerating, turning and braking. Plan maneuvers in advance, do them smoothly.

5. Watch out for overpasses, underpasses and shady spots that freeze first and melt last. Avoid sudden moves in winter slick areas.

6. If you start to skid, "don't panic." Take your foot off the gas and turn your wheels in the direction to which the rear of the car is sliding. Straighten out when you feel the skid is correcting itself. Avoid braking or accelerating until you're headed straight again.

7. Use good tires with deep tread and properly inflated.

8. Snow tires increase pulling and stopping traction on loosely packed snow. Snow tires increase pulling traction on ice but are of little help or no help in stopping on ice. Studded tires increase pulling traction appreciably.

9. Reinforced tire chains are the ultimate traction aids for severe snow and ice conditions. They offer from four to seven times the pulling ability of normal tires, depending on conditions.

10. Other recommended tips include: Spare tire, chains, booster cables, tow chain, sand and shovel should be in your trunk. Have a reputable mechanic safety check your car. Check heater-defroster system, anti-freeze, brakes, tires, lights, windshield wipers and washers.

Plan ahead, allow extra time for travel and "drive as though my life depended on it."

Victors

another toss, good for the two-point conversion, and Conasset had itself a 8-0 lead that proved sufficient.

Becker summed it up with, "The line gave Tom plenty of time to throw and that was the difference today."

Proof of the protection provided by the offensive line was Libby's 70 percent completion of his passes on the day.

It was another of the Libby aerials that gave the Skippers another touchdown. This time the Skipper signalcaller located his primary receiver Duffy, all alone in the end zone for the t.d.

The touchdown was set up when tackle Paul Buckley pounced on a Bulldog fumble in the third period to give the offense a chance to capitalize, and it did.

Just how long the prosperity will last is a moot question as the Skippers next face a rugged Hanover team at Milliken Field at 1:30 p.m. next Saturday.

But for the moment, at least, the Skippers are savoring the fruits of victory, along with their loyal rooters who are expected to turn out in greater numbers to see if the Skips just might be able to keep things going and possibly even surprise the Hanover Tribe.

GIRLS SOCCER

For the first year in Cohasset history, the girls have been playing soccer on a varsity and junior varsity level. For a first year team the turnout was extremely good; 43 girls played on the two teams.

Wednesday, the girls varsity team won its first game against Hingham. This finalized their record at 1-7-1. The team is led by captains Erin O'Brien and goalie Pam Johnson. The varsity team is still young, but it is losing four key seniors including Erin O'Brien, Sandy Dalrymple, Lorraine Carrol, and Heidi Chase.

As Mary O'Brien, the Skipper fullback put it, "We were all still learning and gaining experience this year. We are all very excited about next year's team."

The Skippers are all very enthusiastic and work very hard at their sport. In the future, look for a very powerful girls soccer team.

BOYS SOCCER

The boys varsity soccer team closed out its season Tuesday with a tough game against Duxbury. The game was played to a deadlock until late in the third quarter when Duxbury booted in its first goal.

This goal sparked the Green Dragons to two more goals in the fourth quarter, and a 3-0 win. John Muir had an outstanding game with 31 saves. This winds the Skippers record down to 5-4-3.

Although the Skippers will be losing some key seniors such as co-captains Craig Langford and Phil Tye, Ron White, Peter Drago and Phillip Drago, they look for a good season next year with a possibility of making the state tournament.

The team will have a great deal of experience next year with many starters coming back such as Todd Langford, Pat Duffy, Steve D'Onofrio, Jordan Hoy, Andy Pottenchair, David Duncombe, Ed Booth, Joe Whelan, Jim Leonard, and lightning fast goalie John Muir.

The team had some unlucky games and some unfortunate breaks this season. With a little luck, they could have beaten Hanover both times they played them and won some of those tie games.

Next year with a good team and experienced juniors and a good crop of hustling sophomores who will fit nicely on the team, look for the Skippers to dominate the South Shore League and do well in the state tournament.

FIELD HOCKEY

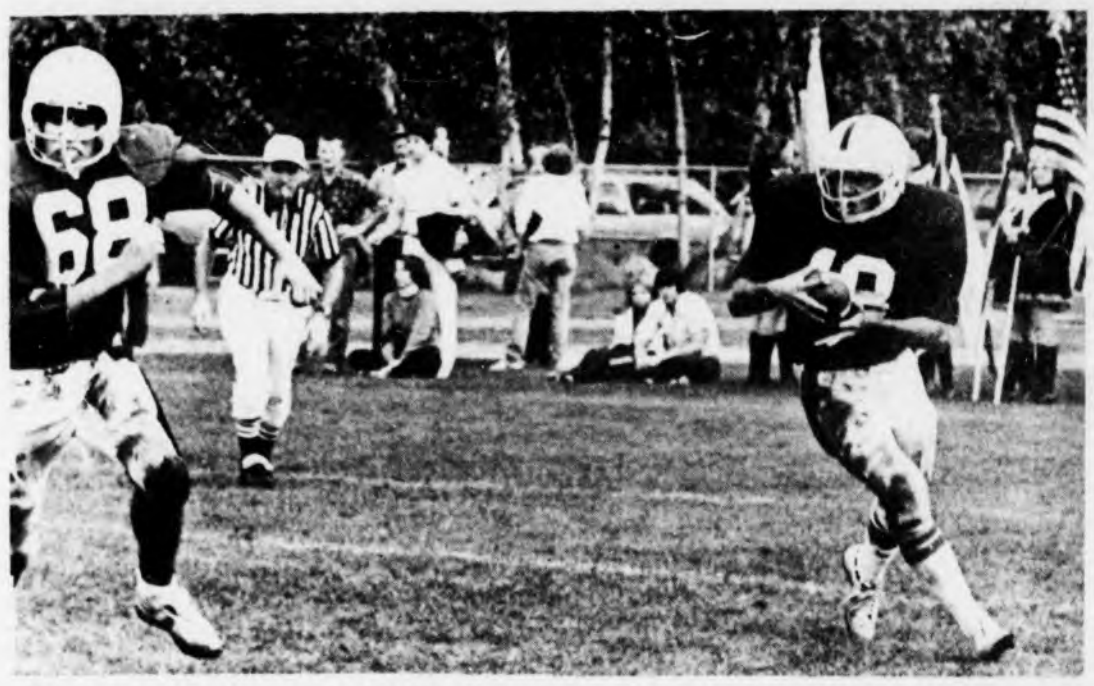
The Cohasset girls field hockey team wrapped up its season on Friday, playing to an encouraging tie with league leading Duxbury. This finalized their record at 2-10-7. The Skippers had a tough season, tying many games and losing most by 1 or 2 goals. Despite this record, the Skippers showed what they can do, on Friday when they played to a deadlock with the division leading Duxbury Green Dragons.

Unfortunately, the Skippers will be losing a strong team of seniors including co-captain Linda Whitlow, Ellen McCarthy, Chris Cahill, Alicia Gurnis, Linda Curly, and the high scoring Janet England. The Skippers are all looking for a good season next year.

As Sally Cook, Skipper captain, put it, "We are all going to have a very strong team next year, with a little luck I think we can improve greatly on this years record."

Returning next year for the Skippers will be juniors Lindsey Gilmore, Heidi Brown, and Koran Lipsett. Also there will be a powerful crop of sophomores returning including Bridget Farren, Sally Cook, Anne Bear, and Brenda Whitlow. Also the junior varsity will be sending up a strong group of players.

CROSS COUNTRY



Both the boys and girls cross country team braved the miserable weather on Saturday to complete their season in the state coaches meet, held at Franklin Park. Attaining medals for placing under 30th in their category were the following:

In the freshman category, Charlie Tebbets placed an amazing 21st.

In the girls freshman and sophomore category Mary Jo Mahoney placed in an unprecedented 11th place. In the boys sophomore category, Chris McNabb just missed a medal by placing 32nd. Jamie Replogle placed 56th. Mike Ellis, coming off a knew injury, placed 62nd and the unstoppable Steve Bowen placed 119th.

In the 11th and 12th grade category, Carl Gandaborn and Mike Glasfeld both placed under 150th. Four of the Skippers mighty seniors, Scott Benbow, Nills Gjestiby, Mike Kearney, and Dave (the antelope) Zobel were not able to run because the college entrance examinations were being conducted at the high school.

The boys cross country team wrapped up its season with a 6-2 record right behind Division Champion Duxbury Green Dragons and the state champion Middleboro Sachems. The girls wrapped up their season with a 5-3 record.

Town Archives Document An Exciting History

By David Wadsworth
Town Archivist

Cohasset is a small New England coastal town with a rich historic past. Originally a part of the Town of Hingham, Cohasset was established as a separate Precinct of that town in 1717, and finally was incorporated as a District or Town of its own by Act of the Legislature in 1770.

When the new village became a separate Precinct of Hingham in 1717, it built its first Meeting House for worship and for public assembly.

It also began to keep its own Public Records. The first record book of Precinct and Parish meetings still exists. This ancient book, dating from 1717, is intact and partially preserved and is the first of an unbroken line of Precinct, Parish and Town Meeting records from past to present now located in Cohasset's Town Archives.

Another old book of early records describes the various land grants given to the early settlers of Hingham beginning in the year 1636. Still another is the copy from Hingham's early records of the births, marriages and deaths; that from the "Vital Records" of early settlers.

Archive documents dating from the mid 1650's and later years show us that a dispute of major proportions broke out between the Plymouth Colony and the Massachusetts Bay Colony, in which Cohasset played a part. These documents are the "Three-Score Acre" records, and are the oldest papers in Cohasset's Town Archive files.

That ancient inter-colony dispute seems to have a familiar ring to us today, for it concerned the boundary line between Scituate and Cohasset at the entrance to our harbor!

A perusal of the old Public Records in the Town Archives shows clearly how Cohasset grew, at first haltingly and then with more certainty, from a struggling but vigorous new settlement to a self-assured community in full command of its own affairs.

Documents and papers now in the Archives list the names of those who served in the Civil War and the First World War. A scrap-book of newspaper clippings collected by townspeople details the activities of Cohasset Servicemen at home and abroad during the first global conflict.

The roll, or log book of the Henry Bryant Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, written in great detail, describes the activities of the Civil War Veterans organization and of the Town's Memorial Day observances in the early 1900's.

Numerous documents covering many areas of municipal activity between the late 1700's and early 1900's are to be found in the Archive files. Particularly complete are the records of the mid-1800's through the 1920's, with scores of books, letters, reports, maps, and plans concerning the Town's doings covering everything from voyages of Cohasset sailing ships, to the building of roads and bridges.

The original report of Rev. Joseph Osgood's Committee recommending the establishment of a Public Library can be seen, as well as the plans and specifications for the original Cunningham's Bridge, and for a tidal dam at the entrance of Little Harbor, which, incidentally, was never built.

Documents exist which detail the construction of Atlantic Avenue from Jerusalem Road to Beach Street; from an earlier era, the building of bridges at the Scituate line and on the road to Beech Woods and also a 17th century tidal dam at Straits Pond.

Many old plans of land, roads and Town buildings, some dating to the early 1800's, are stored in the Town Archive vaults. The earliest now are barely readable; the passage of time having taken its inevitable toll upon the ancient paper and ink.

Early plans drawn in the Surveyor's own hand show the length of Jerusalem Road and Main Street to Cohasset center, and from there to the Cove and south to the Scituate line. A set of plans and drawings still exists detailing the overturning of a stagecoach named "Tally Ho" on South Main Street in 1892.

One of these drawings refers to that accident in the language of Cohasset's seafaring traditions, as the "Tally-Ho Capsize." They, like scores of plans of that era, were drawn over the signature of Daniel N. Tower, Surveyor.

Interesting blueprints of an elaborate central fire station that was planned in the early 1900's, and of proposed alterations to the Town Hall in the 1920's are contained in the Archives.

One of the later plans shows a 1200 seat theater hall planned behind the present structure, and another envisioned a banquet dining hall on the first floor, with the auditorium and stage on the second floor.

From a more recent era, we find the maps and plans of Air Raid Warden Stations and the Evacuation plan for Cohasset dating from the days of World War II.

Many volumes of narrative and fiscal records from the present to early days are located in the Town's Record Vaults, as is required by law. Also included are the reports and records of Town Committees and Departments as they become available.

Our Town Archives contain the Public Records required to be permanently kept and also some interesting side-lights on municipal events. These, then, are some of Cohasset's wealth of Public Records that have been gathered for safe keeping in the Town's record vaults.

They are protected from mis-use or intentional destruction by the Public Records Laws of Massachusetts, and from the ravages of fire by the security of the vaults in which they are housed.

Cohasset has joined the growing number of our neighboring towns which have taken serious steps to organize, preserve, and protect their Public Records as the Laws require, and to place them in an Archive.

Scituate and Weymouth have already done so by way of ambitious projects, funded in part by the CETA program, in which teams of employees and volunteers have spent many months gathering and organizing those town's public records.

Here in Cohasset, two Town Archivists have been doing the same thing. Under the sponsorship of the Board of Selectmen and the Cohasset Historical Commission the project was initiated by members of the Commission and by Joe Hamilton, the first Town Archivist.

The work now continues under the present one. The Board of Selectmen, Arthur Clark, Chairman; and members of the Historical Commission, with Noel Ripley, Chairman, continue to give valuable assistance towards the completion of the project.

When finished, the Cohasset Town Archives will contain the Public Records of the Town's municipal government from the present to its earliest beginnings.

As the Commonwealth's Public Record Laws indicate, the permanent records belong to all the people. As long as we who live in Cohasset care, our records will endure.

Community Center To Visit Chardin Art

A private tour of the Museum of Fine Arts collection of Eighteenth Century paintings will highlight the Cohasset Community Center's third trip of the Fall Season.

The group will view the special collection of 90 works of art by Jean Fimeon Chardin, gathered from around the world.

Chardin is referred to as "the painter's painter." The exhibit commemorates the 200th anniversary of Chardin's death.

The trip is scheduled for Wed., Nov. 14, from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. A gourmet luncheon at one of the museums' private dining rooms is included in the fee. Bus fare, admission to the museum, and the private guided tour also are included.

Reservations must be made by Friday, Nov. 9. Call the Community Center at 383-0088 from 9:00 a.m. until noon, or Carol Martin at 383-6577.

The Boston Commute

The 'T' Is Taking Us For A Ride

[This is the second of a three-part series on commuting to Boston. Ed.]

By Laura Griffin

Now you see it. Sleight of hand. Now you don't. In such a way, a half million dollars was lopped off state revenues due Scituate, Marshfield, Cohasset and Norwell. The funds were credited to the MBTA.

Collectively, Mariner towns were charged $596,812 last year as peripheral towns in the MBTA district. Those charges could hit three quarters of a million dollars this November.

None of the four towns receives any direct MBTA service. Had there been even the slightest service, a bus connection here, a train connection there, town assessments would be significantly higher.

As it is, the money disappears through painless surgery on the annual state "cherry" sheets when MBTA assessments are deducted from state re-imbursements. There is no way for any town to vote to withhold its money from the MBTA.

"It's kind of like paying for the Emperor's new clothes," one local resident complained.

According to the Grimm version, the Emperor's new clothes were outrageously expensive but they didn't exist. Tailors spent hours, days and weeks weaving nothing while the cost of their services increased for each non-item.

That local observer suggested substituting the MBTA for the naked Emperor of the tale.

The basic argument for charging no-service towns was explained by Pete DiNatale of the T's information office. DiNatale said that the assessments could be considered "inequitable. It depends on which side you're on, how you look at it."

On one hand: "A lot of people from the South Shore are using the T, people from towns which have no direct service..." He cited such examples as Scituate or Norwell residents boarding a T bus in Hingham or others driving to Quincy for the Red Line.

"The flipside is they are paying; they have no service, no direct service," DiNatale agreed, and repeated "inequitable."

No one has offered a logical explanation of how the 22 no-service towns were chosen other than a gerrymander by the 1964 legislature.

Marshfield's MBTA Advisory Board designee is Sam Spencer, attorney/editor. Spencer pointed out the MBTA district is "an arbitrary line which does not make any sense in 1979-80" when dozens of other cities and towns which don't have to pay, benefit from the T and have a vested interest in the MBTA.

Neither residents nor officials in these four towns are satisfied with their MBTA charges for no-service. In recent conversations, it appeared that should anyone take a lead in fighting the assessments, the other towns would march along.

— Norwell ($114,262). Selectman David A. Mayers said of the MBTA charges, "That's one of our concerns...We abhor the idea, if there were an effort, a hue and cry (against the assessments), if anyone ever got to the point of a combined effort, I'm sure that Norwell would cooperate. Norwell would be part of it..."

— Marshfield ($191,224). Attorney/editor Spencer reported that town meeting periodically rails against the MBTA assessment. Getting out — "That has been the sentiment at town meetings (in the past). An awful lot of people don't use (MBTA) in peripheral towns." Spencer also added it was probably "politically impossible" to get out.

— Cohasset ($82,913). MBTA Advisory Board delegate Louis F. Eaton said that such costs are "obviously unfair" when viewed from the point of direct service. Eaton noted, however, the philosophical basis that a great many residents do use the T as well as the fact that deficits have to be underwritten. Such charges may be the price "satelite" suburban areas pay to support the core city, the "price you have to pay for living in the seashore town of Cohasset."

— Scituate ($208,413). MBTA Advisory Board delegate Gerald E. Dwight; "It would naturally annoy people; you can use it if you can get further down the line." Dwight said the charges are "kind of hard to digest" but while the town doesn't "give it gracefully" neither is anyone "up that tight" about the assessment.

Several town officials pointed to sporadic efforts to secede from the MBTA district. Marshfield's Spencer suggested such efforts could be considered "politically impossible... Tilting at windmills."

In order to revise the MBTA formula, a majority of state legislatures would have to support the move. Of the 79 cities and towns in the MBTA district, 22 receive no service but are charged anyhow. Obviously those 22 cities and towns would back revision but where would the needed majority be for a vote?

While the 22 peripheral towns get no service, they are allowed a vote on the MBTA Advisory Board. All MBTA cities and towns have a voice on T budgets through their board members, either selectmen or those designated to the board by selectmen.

However, the votes on the MBTA board are weighted according to the areas' assessment, residents' using the MBTA and MBTA service to the town.

Thus, Marshfield's Spencer pointed out that, on certain recent votes, he and cost-conscious colleagues had a majority of towns favoring slashing the T's supplementary budget. Due to the 'weight' factor, the majority lost resolutions to fewer towns and cities whose votes

ARIENS-MORE THAN A NAME...IT'S A PROMISE!

Women At Work

By Nina Belsan

Gretchen Blomendale, an 18-year-old Bostonian, had the bright idea she could start a profitable business by shopping for busy executives who don't have time to shop for themselves. Although lacking in experience and capital, the enterprising young lady developed "Shopliphters" into an internationally known business. With a good plan and aggressive marketing (otherwise known as perseverance), her service of buying for others became a huge success.

A tremendous number of women have started their own businesses rather than punch in at a nine to five job. Their success or failure will depend on their product, planning and perseverance. There are also the three C's to be considered — capital, cash flow and customers.

Let's use a hypothetical case as an example: Judy and Nancy are women with good sales ability; both are in their thirties, married and have children. Like Gretchen, they see a need they can fill with a service business. They know from their own experience that homemaking is a full-time job which includes cooking, cleaning, shopping, chauffeuring etc., etc., etc. Our two new entrepreneurs are sure that women who work outside the home need help in at least one of these areas.

How will they fill the need? Should their service deal with one aspect of homemaking or several? They decide to be attractive, their product should be inclusive — a one-stop place where working women can go for all their homemaking needs. They approach three other women they know would be assets to their company: Betty is a nutritionist, Doris is an accounting major with good business sense and Janet's field is anything creative.

The blueprint for their business (Chores Inc.) should cover every contingency before the business can be organized. If this first planning stage is not comprehensive, their business will start with a huge deficit. They will have to find answers to such questions as: what is our product; how much time and money will we have to invest; how will we divide labor and work schedules and what are our rates?

Planning should also include marketing the product. The grapevine system is sure to get them their first customers but to introduce their product to a wider audience, they will have to publicize it in some way. An ad in their local classifieds and printed cards left in local shops will help. Depending on cash on hand, they could also print up a small brochure listing services. Have the girls done all they could to market their product? No, not be a long shot. A mailing to friends and women's organizations, a booth at a flea market or craft fair, and personal visits to business offices are additional marketing activities they could try. Remember we said PERSEVERANCE!

Chores Inc. is not a prototype and certainly not the most novel idea ever laid on a drawing board; what will make it unique is its successful operation. Many businesses similar to "Shopliphters" and Chores Inc. have been launched from a shoestring with the help of women who are determined to use their resources and capabilities productively. From drawing board to production, their businesses are sustained by one constant element: PERSEVERANCE.

Sources that will prove helpful in starting a business: "You Inc." Peter Weaver, Doubleday & Co. Inc., Garden City, N.Y.; "Up Your OWN Organization: A Handbook for the Employed, The Unemployed and the Self-Employed on How To Start and Finance A New Business," Donald Dibble, Entrepreneur Press, California. Toll free number for the Small Business Administration: 800-433-7212.

Next week: An unusual business started by two Scituate women.

Watershed Assoc. Meeting

Doctors Paul Godfrey and Steven Leatherman will be the guests of the Watershed Association at the annual meeting on Tuesday, Nov. 13. The meeting will be held at First Parish Church in Norwell Center at 8 p.m. preceded by dinner at 6:30.

The importance of barrier beaches and islands was made very clear in 1978's 100 year storm. Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury are still facing the replanting, rebuilding and protection of their barrier beaches albeit in different ways and with different results.

Godfrey, a coastal botanist at the University of Mass. serves on President Carter's Barrier Island Advisory Committee. Dr. Leatherman is a coastal geologist and director, National Park Service Cooperative Research Unit. He is editor of a recent book on barrier islands. Both have conducted extensive research on barrier beaches and islands along the east coast.

The annual meeting and election of trustees will be preceeded by a social hour at 6:30 p.m. with dinner following. The menu: beef bechamel, brown rice, peas oriental, chocolate bavarian and coffee. Cost is $4. Reservations can be made with Betty Finn, 837-3985 or Persis Sterling at 826-4087 or 826-3135.

Saying No

By Lois Martin

It takes years for women to say "no" and allow themselves to get away with it.

You know what I mean, of course. Women, who are indeed different from men, grow up to believe they are personally responsible for every bake sale and every committee that's held under the auspices of their communities.

The person who wrote the song, "I'm Just A Girl Who Can't Say No," must have been an overused Den Mother or costume maker for annual fifth grade productions of "Peter and the Wolf."

Not all women are inveterate do-ers. But in this world of givers and takers, the majority of the former are females. Whether it's a matter of breeding, training or sex, I'm not certain. But most of us grow up giving and are labeled "Good girls" in so doing. Indeed women are consistently, if they're lucky, rewarded for producing whether it's children or a cake.

PATCHES

But as I mature (as opposed to growing older) I'm getting savvy to a pattern of change in the syndrome of learning to say "no." When wives and mothers are in the 25-35 year old range, they consent to do whatever's asked of them for at least one of three reasons: they want to; they figure there's something in it for them; or they feel guilty if they say no.

So in that time span we drive every car pool, teach Sunday School annually at whatever grade level requested, and we make all the precinct phone calls for the candidate of our choice . . .or even a candidate to whom we couldn't say "no."

But somewhere in our 30s, we start to wear down. We've volunteered for everything by then, sold all the tickets to the square dance (when we'd have preferred a harvest ball). And we tire more easily. Our mothers had forewarned us we couldn't do everything and the prudence of that forecast comes home to us.

So we grow into the beginning stages of saying no. Truth is, the three reasons for saying "yes" have waned. We no longer want to do everything. There isn't as much in it for us as we thought. And we're questioning our guilt about saying no.

But a beginner is different from the intermediate or advanced "no" woman. She listens to the request for service/goods/time /skill, and then says, "If you can't get anyone else to do it, call me back." From that embryonic refusal, she later learns to say a tentative "no," apologize, curse herself for selfishness, take back her "no" and say "yes."

That done, she's mad at whoever called her and furious with herself for not having the knack to refuse outright.

But by 40, she's getting it . . . with gusto. That's the intermediate stage and it's also the most dangerous. By 40 a woman's becoming a fighter, of causes she creates in part. Just let that phone ring asking her to be chairman of the bazaar, based on her valuable experience, and she bellows "no," to the poor soul on the other end of the line who's only 25 and volunteered to do the calling.

Thus we achieve two things. We've actually said "no" because we honestly don't want to be chairman and know there's nothing in it for us save worry . . . But while we're trying to erase the guilt from not contributing, we've instead become rebellious. The intermediate "no" person overreacts with her denial of duty. Her hollering can make enemies.

She merely lacks the grace of the advanced "no." After women reach the endearing age of 45, they're well into the art of "no." They've rethought their positions. They've decided there are some things they still might choose to do. If they refuse to be the one to take oranges to the softball team for nutritious munching, they might offer to send a donation for a dozen or so.

And they've decided they are the singular imposers of self guilt. They recognize they've done their part and won't feel guilty about not responding to every beck and call. Years of home training contribute to this maturity. In the past dirty clothes have been her sole possession. Clean ones, that she's been accused of losing, belong to other people.

There are no flies on the woman of 45. She's gaining aplomb at saying "no" nicely, while saying "yes" to things she'd never considered she could do.

As for myself, I am indeed in one of the above stages of saying "no." If someone were to ask me to take charge of all the papier mache figures for a nativity scene to be placed at town hall during the month of December, I would say "NNOOO!!!" Still if a dear weary-looking 30 year old asked me to teach her how to say that, I'd say "yes."

Academies Deadline Nov.15

Congressman Gerry E. Studds announces that Thursday, Nov. 15 is the deadline for all 12th District students to apply for admittance to the Air Force, Military, Naval and Merchant Marine Academies for the academic year beginning in 1980.

"As has been my practice, all applications will be reviewed by the Service Academy Nominee Selection Committee which I established during my first term of office," Studds said. "The six member committee will recommend to me the most qualified applicants from the 12th District. I will forward those recommendations to the selection boards of the respective academies as my nominees."

The selection boards will then choose from among the nominees — on a strictly competitive basis — those who will be offered appointments for the 1980 class.

Anyone interested should write Studds, 1501 Longworth House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

For many women, planning and giving a party are their idea of fun and this is a good thing, for 'tis said, when the hostess enjoys herself, the evening is a success. Spending a day over a hot stove may be a touch old-fashioned, but today's liberated woman seems to have discovered that the jobs they thought might be glamorous and fulfilling, can't compare with the tranquility and creativity to be found in one's own kitchen. See how your family guests will appreciate Margaret Varnerin's recipe for

CRANBERRY PUMPKIN MUFFINS OR LOAF

Sift:
2 c. all-purpose flour
3/4 c. sugar
3 T baking powder
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. each cinnamon and allspice
Set above aside and beat:
1/3 c. cooking oil
2 eggs
3/4 canned pumpkin until well blended.

Add all at once to dry ingredients and stir until moistened.

Fold in:
2 c. chopped, fresh cranberries.

Spoon into 18 paper-lined muffin cups, or loaf pan. Bake 25 to 30 min. at 400 degrees.

Planning your child's birthday party is no big thing. Just about anything you do is fine by them — a few balloons, reams of crepe paper and pals to share it all spells party to the kids. Decorations are easy; the brighter the better. When it comes to food, the simpler dish is most welcome, for it's really the cake and ice cream they care about. Until someone comes up with a casserole of peanut butter and jelly, topped with M & M's, spaghetti will have to do. Small servings of this dish may tempt them.

PIZZA CASSEROLE

4 oz. pkg. pepperoni, sliced
1 med. onion, chopped fine
1/3 c. butter or oleo, melted
6 oz. thin spaghetti, cooked and drained
1 c. grated Swiss cheese
1 lb. mozzarella cheese, sliced thin
2 cans [8 oz. each] tomato sauce
1 can [4 oz.] mushrooms, drained
1/2 tsp. each of oregano and basil.

Boil pepperoni to remove excess fat for 5 min. in water to cover and drain well. Saute onion in 1 1/3 T butter until golden. Pour remaining 1/4 c. butter or oleo into 11 x 7 x 2" baking dish. Toss cooked spaghetti in butter or oleo. Cover with 1 can of tomato sauce. Add: 1/2 of grated Swiss cheese, 1/2 of pepperoni, 1/2 off mozzarella, all of the mushrooms and onions, then sprinkle with oregano and basil. Top with remainder of Swiss cheese, pepperoni and mozzarella cheese. Bake for 20 to 25 min. in a 350 degree oven, or until bubbly. Serves 6.

Long, long ago when life was more leisurely and our cars weren't waiting in the garage to lure us away, parties were very elaborate. Imagine the planning that went into a "mauve dinner!" The yellowed magazine article I found called for a mauve satin tablecloth, purple mums for a centerpiece, a candelabrum with shades decorated with violets and menus in the form of violets. The ices were mauve, the sweets candied violets and I shudder to think what the rest of the menu might have been. They didn't say. Perhaps they'd add purple coloring to Peg Bracken's

Citizen's Guide To Services Available

The revised Citizens' Guide to State Services is now available and may be obtained at the State Bookstore. Sylvia Apelbaum, Director of the Citizen Information Service (CIS), has announced. The 122 page paperback is a "Selective Listing of State Governmental Agencies" and was prepared by the CIS staff.

Bay Staters and visitors to Massachusetts seeking information on state agencies may find answers to their questions by calling the Citizen Information Service five days a week (excluding state holidays), Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The state-wide toll free number to call is 1-800-392-6090.

New Board At S.S. Arts Center

As the new season begins at the South Shore Art Center on Ripley Road in Cohasset, a newly elected board of directors is to be welcomed.

Janet Tooker of Scituate will serve as this year's President. She has been an active member of the Center in the past having served as Chairman of the 1978 Festival and as a board member.

Janet is a market analyst and sales representative for Pan American Airlines in Boston. As Vice-President, Ronnie Lawton, an artist from Hingham and 1979 Festival chairman, will lend her expertise.

David Piscopo, a resident of Scituate and owner of The Village Real Estate, is the new Treasurer while Cohasset artist, Linda Summers will continue in her position as corresponding secretary. The post of recording secretary will be held by Stephanie Williams. A resident of Cohasset, Stephanie is involved in Rehabilitation Nursing.

Rowland Williams will be a new member of the board. He is currently in charge of Sterile Package Design for Codman & Shurtleff. Another new board member is Penny Aschuler of Hingham who ran the Center's 1979 Film Festival.

In continued service on the board are: Donald Lettis, Dean of Massachusetts College of Art; Berj Kailian, prizewinning printmaker from Weymouth; and Jean Cain, partner in Business Impressions Art Leasing Firm.

This new board will now begin its duties as the Center embarks on a year filled with culturally exciting events including a gala evening Dec. 8 in which artists and the public will participate.

The Center will continue to offer a year round schedule of classes in the arts, some of which give college credit. Works by professional artists of the metropolitan area are always on exhibit in the Center's newly decorated gallery and monthly previews are open to the public.

As a non-profit educational organization, the SSAC sponsors the South Shore Art Festival every summer and underwrites various awards. New members are ever welcome in the Center and annual dues which are tax-deductible are used to promote the general cultural atmosphere of the area.

When time is short, we can help

If you're behind; can't always plan ahead; have to wait for last minute information; just plain forgot, etc., etc., we can help.

We can usually give 24 hour service on camera-ready copy, anywhere from 25 to 2,500 copies of your original.

If your copy needs typesetting or if you want more copies, we're happy to do that, too. Just give us a little more time.

Taking Us For A Ride

counted or 'weighed' more.

Both Spencer and Cohasset's Eaton are adamant about regular attendance at T board meeting. They believe their voting can at least curb the T's appetite for their towns' money.

In his few years as board designee, Spencer said there has been considerable change in attitudes and voting by board members. Two years ago, the Advisory Board could be described as a rubber stamp of T management but that's not so today.

Now, Spencer said, several things have changed. There has been cost-consciousness raised in towns and the advisory board has its own staff member to independently research proposals and costs. Board members are finally starting to "have input on the budgets" because they are more knowledgeable.

Spencer said that he's in favor of fare hikes and that when voting on service, such as a run from Watertown to Harvard Square, he primarily is concerned with whether that will cost Marshfield $42.

With alert advisory board members demanding accountability, MBTA management might rue the day no-service towns even got fraction votes in return for their money. The attitude might be, "If we can't get out, we'll cut costs" or even stronger, the strategy of the Trojan horse, "getting in and solving the problem."

MBTA PARKING

Residents of Mariner towns can drive to Hingham or the Quincy T station to make MBTA connections. That is one basic reason for charging assessments to no-service towns in the MBTA district.

Recently, Scituate Advisory Board member Gerald E. Dwight drove to Quincy. He intended to park and take the Red Line to an MBTA Advisory Board meeting.

As a Scituate resident, Dwight knew that he could indeed drive to Quincy, even take the T train, but, as far as parking in the MBTA station in Quincy, he learned the odds were against him. It was full.

"I pursued it. Did we really have that many commuters?" MBTA officials call the parking facility in Quincy a 1000 space garage for commuters. Dwight found the garage is not what it seems to be. Only an estimated 550 spaces are actually available to commuters.

Dwight himself parked a few miles away in North Quincy. He later learned that while the Quincy MBTA parking facility has space for 925 cars on five floors, all that space is not for T commuters.

"It's quite a mix-up," Walter Henneberry, MBTA Supervisor of Concessions, told the Mariner. He acknowledged that people do get angry when they're turned away and can see empty spaces on the roof of the Quincy MBTA parking garage.

There are reasons for that, if not good ones.

The following deductions must be made to get the true total of commuter spaces at the Quincy Square MBTA garage.

1. The top floor was built and is owned by the City of Quincy. Subtract 185 spaces from MBTA commuters.

2. Subtract an addition 185 parking spaces from MBTA commuters because the fourth floor is reserved for persons who allegedly work in Quincy. Such persons have a decal on their car and are charged for parking.

In reality, only about 550 MBTA parking spaces are available to Red Line commuters whether they're from Quincy, Marshfield or like Dwight from Scituate.

Residents here might be more concerned with the next stop on the Red Line: Braintree. Henneberry assured the Mariner that all 1200 spaces will be available for commuter parking.

Selectmen Stop One-Way Circus Traffic

The traffic they can deal with — noise levels they're not so sure about.

Selectmen told Concerned Citizens last week they will definitely take action with respect to traffic problems in the Music Circus area of town, which are caused by patrons leaving two and three performances a day.

Residents expressed concern that emergency vehicles might not be able to make their way to accidents or medical emergencies if one-way traffic is permitted even for short periods of time.

But while selectmen agreed that the music is loud even inside the tent, the only suggestion they had for attempting to control the "noise-level" outside the tent was made by Chairman Arthur Clark.

Clark suggested selectmen might write a letter to each performing group, asking them to keep the noise to a reasonable level.

It seems unlikely that will work, as Ron Rawson, Circus producer, said groups are asked to be aware that they are performing in a neighborhood.

At the ripe age of 30 plus the South Shore Music Circus is in its prime. One of its special characteristics are the superlatives (degree of noise, music) it generates when it is discussed at selectmen's meetings or at Cohasset coffeeshops.

Sprinkled liberally throughout almost anyone's conversations are the names of Tom Jones, Lena Horne, Liberace . . . amusing. But not to the 29 Concerned Citizens who have never had to pay to hear a performance.

Presently attorneys for the Circus and the Citizens are attempting to negotiate a settlement. This year the Citizens were slapped with a $350,000 lawsuit by the non-profit organization — after they had appealed a decision of the local board of appeals in superior court.

At last week's meeting, Rawson made only one concession to loudness. After Paul Dusossoit of Red Gate Lane repeatedly tried to pin Rawson down on the noise situation, Rawson said: "All you have to do is look at my white hair to know how I feel."

However, Rawson, throughout the discussion, repeatedly said the Circus had made all the adjustments it could make

You're Invited To A Turkey Dinner

An invitation for Thanksgiving dinner is being extended to anyone in the community by Rev. and Mrs. Benbow, Rev. and Mrs. Atkinson, Rev. and Mrs. Muir and their families, at 1 p.m. on Thanksgiving Day at the Second Congregational Church.

A large turkey will be prepared and individuals and families are asked to bring a vegetable dish, and/or any favorite relish or dessert to be shared around the table with others.

This different Thanksgiving dinner was begun four years ago by Rev. Benbow in order to give those who are particularly lonely at holiday times, or who find themselves far from family, or who are new to town with few friends, a place to go for companionship and conviviality.

Many of the past participants have not only enjoyed the comfortable and warm fellowship of community friends, but have found the gastronomic holiday less of a chore with the

Skippers Still No. 1 With Cohasset

By Jennifer Grisdale

The Skippers won only two and lost six of its games this season, but Head Coach John Leone is far from discouraged.

It's his first year as head coach of the football team. Cohasset is the smallest school in the South Shore League, and its size alone has presented certain problems.

"There are 35 kids on the team," explains Leone, "and some of them have to play a lot longer than kids from other schools."

When Leone became coach, he first established his goals for the players.

"I wanted to change their attitudes; make them believe in themselves and work as a unit. If we can do that, we will be successful.

"Each kid has to grow and reach his potential," he continued, "not win. I don't like to use the word 'win.' We do something better every week — I see individual improvements or our running game improves."

The team practices every day for two to two and a half hours. At that time the players first warm up, then work on what they did wrong the previous week. Coach Leone also tries to predict what next week's team will do by watching game films and scouting.

"I spend a lot of time in mental preparation," he says. Leone and his four assistant coaches, two on the junior varsity level and two on the freshmen level, meet on Monday evenings to discuss team strategy.

They won the Nov. 5 game against Holbrook, with a score of 14-0. "We played well," Leone says. "They're a tough team. We knew we were in a football game. We didn't lose the long runs and completed the passes.

Not all the games have gone so well. Injuries are a problem. "In a small school, if one of your quality athletes gets hurt, you don't have anyone to replace him," explains Leone. One of the players was injured during the first scrimmage of the season and lost a month and a half of playing time. Another one broke his ankle during the summer and missed the first two games.

Leone does not believe in making an injured team member play. "Why risk an injured player at the high school level? I try to keep athletics in perspective." At the high school level, I treat it as a game, not a job or responsibility. I tell them it's the last time you can enjoy it as a fun game."

Most kids don't play football before they're freshmen in Cohasset. Other schools have Pop Warner or similar programs which start kids playing when they are younger. "In Cohasset, they've only had four years of football, while in other schools, they've had seven or eight. They're better players because they've had more practice. Experience is the best teacher."

The team has had good parental support, according to Leone. There are even two booster clubs. One supports all fall sports in the town and the other promotes interest in football. The grid iron club has 15 members and raises money to be given as scholarships to graduating seniors.

Sr. Class Presents The Boyfriend

Sandy Wilson's 'The Boy Friend,' one of the most successful examples of British reverse lend-lease on record, will be presented at the Cohasset High School auditorium Thursday, Friday and Saturday (THIS WEEK) at 8:30 p.m. Go!

Seniors Meri Fink and Bob Gunville have the leading roles — Meri having been in the all New England and all-State cast last year. Bob, who plays football well, makes his first stage debut with this presentation.

Civil Service Dragging Its Feet

Selectmen have been "calling" for a Civil Service Examination for police officers since August, but are unable to get information regarding any upcoming examination at this time.

The police department has been "short" two officers for several months as the result of a resignation and a suspension.

Bills to improve the state Civil Service system have been enacted. One being the Civil Service Reform Act which would set up a special legislative commission to review Civil Service and propose comprehensive reform.

Problems frequently cited by municipalities with the system include administrative delays, waste, a backlog of disciplinary cases and unclear career steps which leave over 23,000 provisional employees unsure of their future.

Lt. Governor Tom O'Neill recently said: "Everyone agrees that the present Civil Service system is too cumbersom." According to O'Neill, the reform commission will examine the problems in the contexts of both the unions and municipal management."

Rec Dept. Finds Youth Jobs

By John M. Worley, Director Cohasset Recreation Department

During the past few months the Recreation Department through its job opportunity program, has placed approximately 30 Cohasset youth on part-time, intermittent jobs.

In a continuing effort to place youth on jobs of all types, the department is asking any businesses or individuals who have a need for part-time workers to call the recreation office at 383-6791 to file their worker requests.

Once a job is filed with the department, you will be given names of individuals who have applied for jobs that fall under the guidelines of your request.

From these names you may select any individual(s) whom you feel will best suit your needs. All compensations will be worked out between the employer and employee.

Likewise, Cohasset youths seeking some form of part-time employment may also call the recreation office for a job application. Upon completion of the application you will

"It's not a question of quitting or not trying," Head Skipper's Coach John Leone told Mariner Reporter Jennifer Grisdale during a recent interview.

Leone, a first year coach, met up with a young, willing team this year. A team that didn't have the benefit of playing middle school ball.

One Month Younger Than Elvis Presley

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Sometimes newspapers get calls from the irate public who claim: "I don't know what meeting your reporter went to last night, but he didn't go to the same one I went to."

Last week we sent Frequent Mariner Columnist Chet Ellis to a town meeting in 1984. Actually, we didn't send him because we didn't know about it. He went on his own.

You may take a walk in Whitney Woods and just lose your kids or get bitten by mosquitoes. Two months ago when Chet walked through Whitney Woods he ran into a very interesting hermit.

When Chet does a simple thing like go to the hardware store to buy nails he has fascinating conversations with individuals — E. Carswell Farnsworth to name one.

All of this may at first hand sound simplistic — a grown man telling tales. But Chet chooses his target and ammunition more shrewdly than first reading alone can tell. His candor is obviously artful, without losing its edge.

According to Chet, there will be more and more of these "Ellisms' appearing in the Mariner in the future months because he intends to repopulate the entire town of Cohasset, its town committees — and perhaps the world!

He said he will not be restricted to local news alone. From time to time he will also out-beat the wire services, the Boston papers, the Wall Street Journal. Even now he's working on something about the Yankees stealing all the Red Sox.

WHO IS ELLIS?

When a resident recently asked the Mariner who Chet Ellis was, we said, "Well, he's from New Jersey originally." Before we could continue the caller said "Oh," and hung up.

Chet's an engineer with a masters in business and an MBA from Boston University. A self-employed sales representative for instrumentation, he's active in sailing.

COLUMNIST CHET ELLIS at work on the third floor of his Tower Lane home—creating the characters you've learned to love. (Photo By Derr)

He first came to Cohasset via employment with Dr. Harold Edgerton from MIT who markets underwater cameras. Edgerton was recently in Hull with on-loan dolphins, which he was training to tote cameras in order to film the Loch Ness Monster.

He started writing a column for the Mariner two months ago because, "I had a lot of hots one day to do something besides sell."

Once Chet ran for selectman and he served on the town's drug committee around 1970-71. But he is through with all that. "Now I only do things I want to do. I decided to do only what I wished about five years ago. Now I want to write articles and I will."

Other than the above, Chet hangs around the post office and the Log and Line a lot. "At 55 I'm the same age as Elvis Presley would be — only he's a month older."

Chet gets the ideas for his interviews and news from the Cohasset news. He feels the sewer problems are "Beautiful...they involve, for one thing, a bunch of interesting characters.

"Selectman Snit and Miss Looney are not any specific individuals, nor is LaDuc." He added, "Neither am I trying to nail anyone."

Regarding the sewer issue Chet feels, "There are two schools of thought in this town. One group wants development, one doesn't. My purpose in the articles is to keep things in perspective, try to keep the town's sense of humor. A few years ago we had some unbelievable school committee battles."

One thing nice about Chet (Chet feels) is that he practically never mixes personal feelings with political feelings ..."Unless somebody's vicious.

Because he works out of his home, and his wife Jane leaves the home to teach school in Hingham, he considers himself to be a "househusband." Jane said, "He doesn't do windows."

Chet's and Jane's offspring are Suzie, away at college in Hull, England; Mike, a sophomore and Pam, a sixth grade student at Deer Hill School.

Mooring Suit Settled

Lobsterman Matthew Marr's suit against the town has been settled out of court.

The town agrees that Marr can moor his 38-ft. vessel, the "Sally Marie," from Nov. 15-May 1 in the winter mooring area of the harbor.

In order to moor in the harbor, Marr must first obtain the permission of an individual with a mooring to use that mooring and must indemnify the town for any damage caused while the vessel is berthed.

He also has the responsibility of providing his own tackle.

In the resolution the town acknowledged that Marr is the first person on the list for a 38-ft. mooring.

Editorial

Humorously

From time to time we're going to introduce you to the people who contribute frequently to the Mariner.

In this week's issue we chose Chet Ellis because we also wanted to wrap our editorial message to you — around him. Chet has that rarest of talents of being able to make a point humorously, without offending.

A famous person once said "Humanitarianism consists in never sacrificing a human being to a purpose." That's a rule we try to remember with each news article, editorial, whatever we write. Although some insensitivities sneak by us.

Last week 10 different bylines appeared in the Mariner. As we go to press a publisher, editor, general manager, layout artist and community editor all analyze further what has been written. Then we write headlines, size pictures, write captions, make final corrections (or mistakes) and finally bring forth the package which you receive sometime between Wednesday night and Thursday night.

We don't feel anyone should be afraid to open the Mariner during any week of the year. People do get involved with issues of course and their comments on the issues are newsworthy.

But if you want to observe the sound and the fury that occurs at some meetings then we suggest you attend the meeting itself. We might report that "tempers flared" (we may even use a cliche). but our first obligation is to bring you the facts, to write the meeting so that a person who was not at the meeting can understand what happened– what action was taken.

That does not mean that we propose to be dull.

Quotes — lots of them — are like spices in a stew. Sometimes we miss them. Once when a reporter was asked why she had missed an important quote which was reported by two wire services and all the Boston papers she said: "I yawned at that very moment." Human.

A Cohasset resident recently asked why we hadn't written what we wrote that week — two weeks previously. We didn't know all the facts at the time. Nobody did.

Newspapers are rough drafts of history. News grows. It changes. Someone learns a new fact and the complicated issue is either further complicated . . . or solved.

Sometimes people accuse us of taking the news "out of context." Until we start publishing complete transcripts all of the news will be "out of context." But when we agree we could have reported something better than we did — we'll "fess up."

Over the ages we've (newspapers) gotten a lot of flak. Inevitably at high school graduation a student (or adult) speaker lambastes usand gets applause. Recently a town board blamed the press in general for confusing an important issue.

Other critics:

"Four hostile newspapers are more to be feared than a thousand bayonets." — Napoleon.

"Every editor of newspaperspays tributeto the devil." — La Fontaine.

"Newspapers are the world's mirrors (Mariners)." — James Ellis.

"Reading the Mariner is like reading about one large, happy family every week." — a Cohasset subscriper.

We liked that last one the best.

But please note we published the others.

Logical Site Is Jacob's Meadow

Letters

To the Editor:

The complexities of the Cohasset wastewater treatment problem are rather artificial and the crux of the matter has so far been consistently overlooked.

Since Whale Meadow and the Music Circus sites were turned down by the Town Meeting October 22, the logical remaining site for a new plant is Jacob's Meadow. We have been there for ten years with a disposal plant that no one in its neighborhood seems to object to.

No further expensive surveys of Cohasset and ocean dye tests really need to be done for the O'Hagan Report of 1974 is the most thoughtful study done so far, regarding the preservation of Cohasset's lobster and marine life with excellent ocean and Cohasset Harbor dye studies along with concern for the preservation of Cohasset's beauty and future.

Taking a hard, cold look at the present and future of our wastewater concern, it is clear that tuning in one wave lengths emanating from the U.S. Department of Health in Washington, the plan of the future is for tertiary plants with an effluent of drinking water purity, or its close equivalent, in all communities except large cities.

Not only is our land being robbed of its underground water but with growing populations, our drinking water is close to becoming an endangered species.

The logic of Jacob's Meadow for a new plant of tertiary type or a close equivalent like the Dutch Carrousel would eliminate the need for a long and expensive ocean outfall versus 80 per cent of standard American plants. Its construction cost is estimated at 49 cents to $1 per gallon of influent per day, depending mostly on local labor costs.

My past year's study and research concerning alternatives to the Sewer Commissioner's present recommendaand allow, as today, the use of James Brook for discharge of effluent.

The Dutch Carrousel, well tested on the European continent and in England, has many features suitable for Cohasset. It is simply constructed, reliable, well automated and easy to operate. The initial cost is 25-30 per cent less than conventional American models and reputed to be 35 to 50 per cent less in operation and maintenance.

Its BOD removal is 95-97 per cent, so it is very close to tertiary American plants in the purity of its effluent. Furthermore, the EPA looks on the Carrousel with great favor, considers it still innovative and pays for 90 per cent of it tion boils down to the Dutch Carrousel placed in Jacob's Meadow to replace the present plant as the logical and most cost-effective alternative to the expensive single plant design offered for the town of Cohasset to vote on.

At least the Cohasset townspeople should have the privilege of a scientific, unbiased, engineering opinion concerning the Carrousel or a tertiary plant in Jacob's Meadow as the best, the simplest and cheapest solution to our wastewater treatment problem.

Getting Your Pictures To You

From the Editor:

Your response to our picture board at the Cohasset News Co. has been gratifying. Every so often we do something right and when we do we breathe a sigh of relief.

Both the Mariner and the News Co. have had many questions about what pictures are on or will be on the board, our schedule for pinning up fresh ones, etc. This is an attempt to clear all that up.

They don't know. Even we don't know.

Normally, the picture-pinners stick up new ones on Monday. But last week they did it on Thursday and Monday. Sometimes they wait a whole week. There is no firm schedule. You will just have to look.

A caller last week chided us about being unorganized about pictures and asked why in fact all newspapers seem to be so unorganized.

Well, we and they really aren't. All newspapers greedily keep and file the pictures they might need for future reference...the one of Selectman Arthur Clark with a lollipop, the one of Noel Ripley putting the numbers back on the town clock incorrectly. Those don't get on the picture board.

We're in the people/news business — not the picture business. We're not taking pictures of you in order to "sell" pictures of you to you. Nor does our photographer, Gregg Derr, wish to begin cataloging negatives for orders. We keep him too busy to do that.

We are interested in getting your pictures to you. That's why we have the picture board.

Normally speaking, pictures from the current week of the newspaper will appear on the board at some uncertain time on Monday. But our picture-pinners say they won't be pinned down. It's the best we can do — unless you come up with something better. And if you do — we'd like to know!

Logical Site Is Whitehead Road

To the Editor:

How much longer will Cohasset Voters need to understand that Cohasset is positively going to have a wastewater treatment plant and that is must be placed somewhere in the Town? The Federal Government is insistent upon it. Do taxpayers understand that there will be a penalty for NON-COMPLIANCE?

An emotional vote at the last Town Meeting has left the situation nowhere. To break the dead-lock the Selectmen are about to arrange for a joint meeting of all Cohasset Committees but they will have no other site to consider and discuss.

Therefore to provide a site for consideration this letter is written to again recommend a site at the further end of Whitehead Rd. In that location it would be at the greatest possible distance from almost everything in the Town.

A few people live nearby but they should have no valid objections. The plant would not produce any noticeable odor. It would not be unsightly and it would not make any noise. The importance of this matter would justify every Taxpayer to visit the Wastewater Treatment Plant in Plymouth on the street surrounding Plymouth Harbor. It is towards Duxbury from the ship "Mayflower" and is about 200 ft. from the Mayflower Restaurant to which it is not objectionable.

There are nice houses just across the street. A passerby might think it to be an art museum. The proposed site at the further end of Whitehead Rd. will need to be surveyed to locate the facility somewhere on ground that is largely grown up with tall marsh grasses which prevent complete inspection. The assessors map #31 shows the area very well.

The Town of Cohasset has priority to use this site for a very important Town project. It would be a fine gesture for one owner if she would give some land to the Town or sell

Joseph Osgood Centralized Town's District Schools

By Peter Barnicle

How often have you heard out-of-state or foreign visitors say "Cohasset is a beautiful town!"

We don't know who first said it, but in looking back we find that Rev. Joseph Osgood recalled making the remark when he first arrived in 1839. A graduate of Harvard Divinity School, the young minister made the trip from Boston to Hingham by boat and then overland by stage coach.

He told friends in later years that when he first saw the Common he said to himself, "This is the town where I should like to spend the rest of my life."

And he did just that.

He served as pastor of the First Parish Church on the Common for more than fifty years, and his pastoral work alone would have assured him a place in the town's history. Not only did he serve his own parishioners but was also generous in counseling Portugese and Irish Catholics who had no church of their own in town at that time.

It was in the field of education, however, where he made his mark in town. He became interested in the schools shortly after his arrival and for forty-five years served on the school committee or as superintendent of schools.

Undoubtedly the Cohasset school system would have evolved from the haphazard program he found into the present day modern system. Rev. Osgood just happened to be a little ahead of the times with his innovations. Or at least that was what many of the townspeople thought at the time.

Osgood's introduction to education in Cohasset was received at the little school on the rocks where St. Stephen's Church now stands. He immediately saw the need for some changes and year after year advocated methods to make the schools more efficient.

It wasn't until 1885 that he convinced the town that the eight district schools should be centralized.

He ran head-on into the same problems currently facing a number of communities endeavoring to institute more efficient methods of operating their schools. First, there was the out-cry to preserve neighborhood schools and then there was the protest that the cost of transporting pupils would be exhorbitant. In the end the schools were brought together. The Beechwood and North End schools, however, held out until the end of the century.

Once he had the ball rolling, Dr. Osgood convinced the school committee, after years of futile effort, that the schools should be divided into a more structured system; with four years for primary schools, three years of grammar school and four years of high school.

Prior to this time a pupil was allowed to enter school at whatever level of ability he or she guessed they had. Some stayed the whole academic year, others came in out of the cold in the winter. Pupils were moved to high school at the age of 13 regardless of scholastic achievement.

The high school, started in 1841, had a shaky beginning. During the first decade classes were held during the four winter months in the old Cohasset Academy. In 1851 a full program was instituted and in 1857 the school moved into the lower floor of the new town hall. And there it stayed for 34 years.

The need for new facilities soon became apparent and in 1887 the school committee presented the townspeople with a report calling for the construction of a new central school to relieve overcrowding and provide amenities not then available.

As might be expected there were all sorts of objections. The first was the cost, the second was transportation. There were some parents who expressed fears for the safety of the younger kids in the same playground with the older kids. And then was the cry "we got along without all those things when we were in school." That was addressed to the plans for ventilation and modern sanitary convenience.

The school committee took to the hustings. They presented their case to meetings in Beechwood and the Jerusalem area and to any other group willing to listen.

The town meeting of March, 1890, approved the plan, but by this time the original estimate of a cost of $8,000 had risen to $12,000. Some residents threatened to boycott the new school and keep their children home, or send them to the old schools.

By the time the cellar was dug the cost estimates had risen again and a special town meeting in August, 1980, refused to appropriate more funds. However, construction continued and at the next annual meeting another $9,000 was voted. In the end the big ten-room building on Elm Street cost more than $32,000.

The land for the project was a gift from some friends of Dr. Osgood. It was donated with the proviso that the new school be named in his honor.

Dr. Osgood lived to see the new school in operation, the result of a half century of devotion to the cause of better education in Cohasset. He died in 1898.

His memory is preserved today in the Osgood School at Ripley Road and Sohier Street.

Whitehead Road

it to the Town for the assessed value. Some area would regrettably have to be taken by eminent domain.

Mrs. S.H. McVeigh, 55 Atlantic Ave., has a house and tennis court between Whitehead Rd. and Whale Meadow. Naturally she will oppose being disturbed but the Town may have to be tough and resist an emotional appeal such as was made at the last Town Meeting.

A two-thirds vote will be required so that voters will have to have the guts to put the Town's interest above those of an abutter. There is also another small house in the grove of trees near the ramp leading to the Herrington house on Big Whitehead.

That site at the further end of Whitehead Rd. will be on the direct discharge pipeline to the outfall towards Sutton Rock. The outfall pipe can be buried in the sand under the beach between Big Whitehead and Little Whitehead. The treatment plant will have to be at an elevation above maximum high storm tide such as was experienced in February 1978.

That proposed site was the first one favored by the engineers. All other suggested sites have been vetoed so that the Whitehead Rd. site seems to be the only one remaining to consider.

Let's hope that the members of the joint committee will inspect the site if they have not already done so, and satisfy themselves that no mistake will be made in deciding upon that site. An engineers map will have to be made to determine boundaries and the size of the treatment plant shown on the plan.

There will have to be a hearing so that nothing will happen suddenly, but the Town must vote with determination to decide upon a site in order to go ahead with plans for the system of pipes.

Village Shop Talk

By Larry Fone

We can all look forward to the fun and entertaining of the holiday season. The shops will soon be decorated and full of wonderful giftwares, cookwares and items to make the festive season convenient and colorful.

The church fairs, the first of December, will have so many hand-crafted decorations, gifts and food. A must for all of us to "look-see" and support the many groups represented.

The Cohasset Village & Harbor Association has made extensive plans for the holiday decoration of the town, more than has ever been done. Also, plans are now finalized for a wonderful punch party at the Lothrop House on Summer Street, Sunday, Dec. 2 from 5-7:30 p.m.

MORE SERIOUSLY

A more serious discussion which affects all of us . . . we need foot patrol of police in our retail areas. Ugly reminders are with us daily of vandalism — the north wall of the bus stop shelter has been kicked out. The thoughtful people who have done plantings there just cannot continue . . . continual rip-offs in the village take place. Broken signs, lanterns broken, window boxes torn off . . . not to mention cash theft and shoplifting.

Our town must have visable law enforcement!

Foot patrol from 4 to 10 p.m., as most other towns, is vital. The Cohasset Village & Harbor Association believes law enforcement visibility must be reinstated.

A petition was circulated last Thursday, all but one merchant signed. As consumers we all pay for this intimidation, but the ultimate loser is the retailer. Insurance does not pay for this.

Having a shop in Cohasset Village is really difficult, outrageous rents, insurance, taxes. So we don't need any other deterrents to being in business. We are all hoping the selectpeople will listen to our request and organize the time of "one man" to help us.

☐It's hard not to feel moved and saddened by the current situation in Cambodia and with Cambodian refugees elsewhere in Southeast Asia. Over the past week, WGBH TV showed "World Special Report: A Nation is Dying," twice. It should be, and hopefully will be, shown again.

No one could fail to be devastated by the text and exclusive film footage presented by Channel 2 that told the story of the Cambodian nation, of a people, dying from starvation and disease. Esti-- mates that millions more Cambodians will soon die unless food and medical supplies reach them immediately has made people feel compelled to do something to help.

Since this problem is so urgent, and many people have inquired about where to send a check, we are devoting this week's Around Town column to this issue. We will save current people news for next week.

Listed below are the major organizations providing relief for Cambodians. UNICEF and the International Red Cross lead the biggest effort in dollars and supplies, but they are experiencing delivery problems because they are negotiating directly with the Cambodian government so that they may work within the borders.

It is reported that $300 million has been pledged to them for a world-wide drive. Their efforts will have the greatest impact when they are allowed to deliver.

Oxfam-America has reportedly had success in getting aid into Phonom Penh and the western areas through the Thai border; they are not negotiating to enter Cambodia.

The following are involved in refugee resettlement and funds for relief, including relief for refugee camps in Thailand:

UNICEF — U.S. Committee for Unicef, 331 East 38th Street, New York, New York 10016; International Red Cross, Cambodian Relief, American Red Cross, National Headquarters, 17th and D Streets, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006; Oxfam-America, 302 Columbus Avenue, Boston, Mass. 02216; Fund for Cambodians, 660 First Avenue, New York, New York; New England Agency for Refugee Settlement, 899 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass. 02116; International Institute, 287 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, Mass.; International Rescue Committee, 140 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass.

The following are involved in providing food and medical supplies for Cambodian refugees in Thailand:

The American Friends Service Committee, 1501 Cherry Street, Philadelphia, Pa. 19102; Catholic Relief Services, 1011 First Avenue, New York, New York 10022.

Church World Service, Elk hart, Indiana 46515; Committee to Aid Indochinese Refugees, 211 East 43rd Street, Suite 1401, New York, New York 10017; United National High Commissioner for Refugees, UNHCR Regional Office, United Nations Headquarters, Room C301, New York, New York 10017.

Also World Vision, 919 West Huntington Drive, Monrovia, California 91016.

Further information can be obtained by calling UNICEF toll free at 800-221-2870.

☐Many South Shore skaters with the Silver Blades Skating Club, Cohasset, participated in the 1980 New England Championship Competition held at the Colonial Figure Sk ing Club, Boxborough, Nov. 7-10.

Jill Frost, 11, from Walpole, became the Novice Ladies Champion and is qualified to enter the Eastern Championships to be held the second week of December in Danvers. If she places in the top three in that event, she would qualify for the National Championships.

Other Silver Blades skaters who competed were: Pam Breach, Weymouth, in Junior Ladies; Kristen Harris, Cohasset, Junior Ladies; Betsy Briggs, Marshfield, Intermediate Ladies; Laurie McVay, Scituate, Intermediate Ladies; Tracy Maceachern, Novice Ladies; and Susan Spence, Junior Ladies.

Silver medal winners in the Dance competition were Lennie Colarusso and Diana Goldman; Doug Bartlett and Lauren Happ won a Bronze medal in that event. Both couples qualify to go onto the Eastern Championships.

☐Benjamin Blake of 143 Atlantic Ave., is a member of the Wentworth Institute of Technology Industrial Advisory Committee which convened for its fall meeting this week at Wentworth, 550 Huntington Ave., in Boston.

☐A Cohasset woman was voted "Runner-up Honor Students" for her class performance and contributions to other students during a Successful Practices course, sponsored by the Gallery of Homes.

Eileen Corbett, sales associate at Dean and Hamilton Gallery of Homes, 18 Elm Street, won the honor on a vote of her 36 fellow classmates at the intensive, weeklong course held at the Somerville Holiday Inn.

Cohasset artists Rosalind Farbush and Claffy Williams will be among the artists featured at the Third Annual Copley Artists' Auction, Sunday, Nov. 18, 6-9 p.m. at the Copley Plaza Hotel, Boston.

The Copley Society of Boston will auction more than 150 art works donated by some of New England's foremost artists, collectors, and galleries to benefit member artists.

Skippers Fall To Hanover

By Rob Tis

The Skippers played their final home game against Hanover on Saturday to a sad note.

The men in blue charged onto the field with victory in their eyes sparked by the seniors who were playing their last game at Milliken field.

Cohasset rallied to a 6-0 lead on a two-yard pass from Tim Libby to Bill Duffy. Once again, for the conversion, the Skippers tried the same play but this time it failed.

In the second quarter the Indians climbed back on their feet and marched to three touchdowns making the halftime 20-6.

As J.T. Price put it, "We were all fired up in the first quarter, we just couldn't seem to keep it together throughout the half."

In the third quarter Cohasset narrowed the score to 20-14 when Tim Libby found glue-fingered Bill Duffy again this time for a 21-yard touchdown. Libby then took the pigskin into the endzone himself for the extra two. Unfortunately the tribe scored two fourth-quarter touchdowns finalizing the score at 33-14.

The Skippers had a good chance to win. The passing game, like two weeks ago against Holbrook, was terrific with Libby mainly going to Bill Duffy who accounted for about 75 per cent of the scoring so far this season.

Unfortunately, the rushing game just wasn't present this week. In the first half the Skippers only rushed for a dismal 15 yards.

The Skippers have a vacancy on Saturday, but everyone is looking forward to the single most important game of the year, the Thanksgiving classic against Duxbury. The Cohasset gridsters will meet the Green Dragons in Duxbury at 10 a.m.

Although it is an away game the Skippers will probably receive the biggest crowd of the season.

LUNGING OVER THE GOAL LINE is Skipper Tim Libby, who successfully completes a two-point conversion.

regarding loudness. The only additional arrangement which might be made, Rawson said, would be to construct a hard-top roof at the site and baffle the sides of the tent.

"That would become a co-operative venture. We would have to go before the board of appeals. My group will not go into the situation without co-operation."

Several weeks ago Rawson told the Mariner the Circus has no expansion plans at the present site. However, others, who wish to remain nameless, fear if the town in some manner claims a portion of the abutting school lands for a wastewater plant, that transaction might allow the Circus to reclaim a portion of the land it sold to the town — as the town would not have utilized the land for its stated purpose.

Concerned Citizens last week did not deny that the Circus was a desirable operation.

On an average week 150-200 area residents are on the payroll. Many employees are youths. Local businessmen get spin-off trade from the numbers of people the Circus attracts.

However, the theater capacity is 2,256 — one of the largest if not the largest on the South Shore. The Circus tent holds 344 less people than Boston's Symphony Hall, and it is the only theater of its kind in a residential neighborhood.

Professor Mary Gainor, spokesman for the Concerned Citizens, told selectmen: "We feel you do have a right to issue a license under conditions."

She took issue with the Circus having expanded its season over the years into the school year. She said her group would like a terminal limit on night performances.

"There are certain things in your power to control."

Selectmen said as Rawson has already signed up a majority of his performers for next year they felt they could not intervene in scheduling this year.

Around Town Hall

DOG RESTRAINED

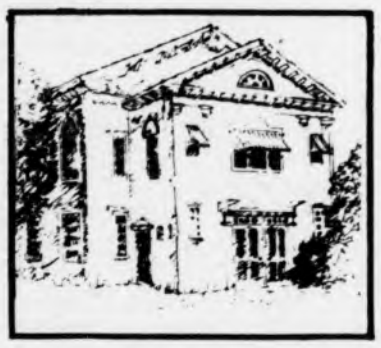
On the recommendation of Dog Officer Jack Barrett, selectmen unanimously voted to restrain a Springer Spaniel dog owned by Police Sgt. Richard Barrow.

ACTION THREATENED

Last week selectmen referred to town counsel a letter from Lobsterman Dana Salvador in which Salvador threatened to take legal action against the town.

Salvador alleged that a mooring in the harbor is rightfully his as the result of a recent boat sale. Selectmen contend there is no proof that the boat has been sold and maintain that an individual, according to harbor regulations, can maintain a mooring for one year from the date of a boat sale.

NO RIGHT ON RED



On Jan. 1 when the right-on-red bill goes into effect, there will be no right turn allowed at Sohier Street and Ripley Road. Selectmen voted the same after receiving a letter from Mrs. Bruce Pratt, who requested that the turn not be permitted.

HARBORMASTER

Selectmen noted that Harbormaster Harry Ritter would be on vacation the week of Nov. 11 for one week. It was agreed to write a letter to Mrs. Ritter, informing her of the vacation, as last year she had to read it in the newspaper.

CLOCK NUMBERS

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark informed the board that he had given the job of gold-leafing the town clock numbers to Noel Ripley. The board was in accord with Clark's action. The job will be accomplished for under $2,000.

SEWER MEETING

Tuesday, Nov. 20 is the date set by selectmen to meet with the sewer commissioners and other boards regarding the ongoing issue of a wastewater treatment plant site.

EMERGENCY CONTRACT

Last week selectmen signed a $2,000 emergency contract for the temporary repair of the flood tide gate at Straits Pond. The action was asked for by the Department of Labor and Industries through the Hull Board of Selectmen. The towns of Hingham, Cohasset and Hull will all share equally the $7,000 estimated repair bill. Cohasset's share will be approximately $2,000.

HARBOR PLAN

On Wednesday, Nov. 28 the Harbor Study Committee will hold an open meeting at 8 p.m. at the town hall on the master plan for the harbor.

APPOINTEE

Perry England of Old Coach Road has been named as the town's representative to the MBTA. The MBTA is forming a new committee of "riders" only.

Slide Presentation Of China Trade Nov. 18

Americans to the Orient — The China Trade, 1784-1845, will be the subject of a slide-illustrated talk to be given in Cohasset by Ellen Woolf.

This journey into a most interesting and colorful segment of American History will take place Sunday, Nov. 18 at 3 p.m. in Treadwood Hall, Unitarian Parish House.

Mrs. Woolf has long been interested in this period and has served for several years as a docent at the Museum of the China Trade in Milton.

This program is another offering of the Friends of the Cohasset Library and as usual, no admission will be charged.

Butts—Fairchild

Jennifer Maria Fairchild, daughter of Mrs. Richard Fairchild and the late Mr. George Fairchild of Cohasset, was married on Oct. 20 to Joseph Mathew Butts of North Quincy. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Joseph Butts of North Quincy.

The ceremony was held at the First Congregational Church of Milton. The Reverands Donald Tatro and Thomas Garrett performed the ceremony.

The bride is a graduate of Milton High School and is employed at the Kluwer Boston Publishing Co. The bridegroom is employed at the Norfolk County Agricultural School.

Mrs. Lucinda James of Newton served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Jane McLeod of Milton and Miss Kathryn McDonald of Rockland.

Michael Butts of Weymouth served as best man. Ushers were Raymond Hackett of Weymouth and Domenic D'Archagelo of Scituate.

Mr. & Mrs. Butts

Following a reception at the Hingham Community Center, the couple left for a wedding trip to Vermont. They will make their future residence in North Quincy.

Hines—Wall

Residing in Cambridge after a wedding trip to Bermuda, are Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Paul Hines, the former Anne Colleen Walls. They were married recently in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset, at a nuptial Mass celebrated by Rev. Dom Gregory Floyd, headmaster of Portsmouth Abbey School, Portsmouth, R.I. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Walls of Cohasset; the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hines of Cohasset and the late Mr. Hines.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by Jane Hall of Cohasset as maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Carol Walls and Laura Hines, both of Cohasset, Gail Claypool of Lincoln, Linda Revers of Dover, JoAnn McGovern of Stoneham and Karin Kelly of Cohasset.

John J. Hines of Cohasset, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Barry Hines and Brian Hines of Cohasset, Robert Walls of Spokane, Wash., Michael Walls, Jeffrey Walls of Cohasset, and John Littlefield of Maryland, and Kevin Burke of Newton.

The bride attended Manhattanville College and graduated from the University of New Hampshire. She is employed by International Paper Co. in the Boston sales office.

The bridegroom graduated cum laude from Portsmouth Abbey School and cum laude from Harvard College and is attending Harvard Business School. He was associated with Chemical Bank, New York.

Scott—Sanford

After a wedding trip to Florida, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Scott (Anne E. Stanford) are living in Cohasset.

A reception was held at the Canoe Club, Bridgewater.

They were married in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset, Rev. John J. Keohane, pastor, celebrated the nuptial Mass.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stanford of Cohasset; the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Scott of Weymouth.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by her sister, Kathleen Stanford of Cohasset, as maid of honor.

Bridesmaids were Florence Stanford and Kerri Vallas of Cohasset, Donna Coughlin and Dianne Stemoppcous of Cohasset and Janice Devine of Weymouth.

Meet The Cast!

LET THEM ENTERTAIN YOU this Thursday, Friday, or Saturday at the Cohasset High School Auditorium—with the Senior Class production on "The Boy Friend".

(Photo By Greg Derr)

The Boy Friend

us is embodied in the cuckoo instinct. We will not go to great length over this interesting bird, but the composer who captures other birds' nests makes them work for him, enriching the quality of his artistic progeny.

In 'The Boy Friend's' case, none of the play's 12 songs ever become famous — but the seniors who perform the songs add a youthful zest and zeal that a more mature group could never accomplish. They're young, fresh, talented and occupy a permanent perch alongside the greatest musical cuckoos that ever lived.

Other players will be Lyn O'Toole, Lisa O'Toole and Gina Frio as Meri's real and theatrical classmates at boarding school. Disa Pratt is cast as the head-mistress, and others in the cast include Ellen Hanlon, Ronald White, Lance Norris and Karen Smith.

Ron Emmons doesn't usually direct the Senior Class Play, but as many of his favorite Drama Club Players are graduating this year, he decided to do it. Thank goodness. According to Ron, he's "very pleased with this show."

Assistant director is Susan Buckley, choreographers are Alexandra Mullen, Yoanna Zotos. Musical director, Michele Fahey; costumes are done by Linda Curley, Loraine Caroll and Alicia Gurnis.

The second session of the Oct. 22 special town meeting got a brief preview of this production — and it was certainly more interesting than what they were doing. Yuk. Don't miss it!

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting applications for the following part-time positions:

Game Time Instructor — Tuesdays 3-5 p.m., low-organized games and activities for Grades K-3.

Afternoon Sports Program Instructor — team sports and structured activities for Grades 4,5, and 6, Thursdays 3-4:30 p.m. Ideally, one individual could fill both positions.

Tennis Instructor — for adult tennis classes, one evening per week year 'round.

Applicants must be a minimum of 18 years of age and have demonstrated teaching ability. If interested, please call the Recreation Department Office at 383-6791 for an application and interview.

YOUTH SOCCER LEAGUE

Many thanks to Mr. Thomas Myers and his staff of coaches who donated considerable time conducting this year's youth soccer league.

This year 267 boys and girls participated in the league, that is designed to offer teaching and playing experiences to youth in grade 2-9.

The league is divided into 2 divisions consisting of 12 teams which play games each Saturday morning, throughout the fall.

The philosophy of the Soccer Program is to provide recreation as well as a learning experience. Emphasis is taken off playing to win and applied to sportsmanship and fun.

Scientific Skin Care is not a gimmick or a fad promoted by an agile publicity-minded industry. It is imported that you do not equate Scientific Skin Care with ordinary facials which serve no specific purpose. Modern Esthetics is the science of properly caring for the skin with scientifically formulated, specialized products in combination with individual techniques and regimens. The positive results obtainable through Scientific Skin Care for all types of skin, acne, blotchy, aging, dry, dehydrated, oily, sensitive, etc. have often been termed miraculous.

What's Happened To The SAT Scores?

Testing... Testing... Testing...

By Judy Foley

In today's world of computerization and specialization, schools are being forced to take a close look at how well students have learned the fundamentals of reading, writing, and mathematics.

Educators, parents and the general public are concerned about basic skills, and the emphasis is returning to the basics across the country.

College admission test scores are dropping. High schools and colleges have introduced basic reading and math courses to bring students up to an accepted level. And experts are puzzling over dozens of reasons why today's children are not testing as well as they used to. In Massachusetts, minimum competency testing and remedial programs in basic skills will be required in all towns by 1981.

Every year, over one million high school students take the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), a standardized entrance exam that measures verbal and mathematical reasoning abilities. For more than 10 years, SAT scores have been declining.

Results of the latest SAT's taken in the spring were recently released by the National College Board, which administers the exams. Local students have traditionally scored higher than state and national averages, but most area schools have seen declines following the national trend. The tests are scored on a scale of 200 to 800, and separate scores are given for verbal and math sections.

LOCAL AVERAGES

In the verbal portion, the national average in 1979 was 427 and the state norm was 428, a drop of 24 points in both since 1972.

Cohasset students averaged 452; Norwell, 455; Marshfield, 437. The Scituate School Department has declined to release the scores until they are presented to the school committee with results from the town's total standardized testing programs, generally given in the spring, according to Supt. Dr. John Kulevich.

In math, the decline has been continuous but not as pronounced as in the verbal section, dropping about 14 points since 1972. The national and state averages this year were 467 and 465. The average score in Cohasset was 502; Norwell, 491; Marshfield 469.

Generalizations made on the basis of SAT scores must be limited, school officials caution. Norwell Guidance Counselor Peter Kapolka said, "The test is meant primarily for college admissions and not for evaluating or comparing school systems. But it is taken by more than a million students, and in that respect, is one uniform measure for colleges to judge skills when schools have different curriculum, ranks and marking systems."

Marshfield High School Principal John Erickson called the tests, when used by themselves, "a stifled way to monitor progress."

The scores only represent how a certain group did on a particular test, Erickson said. "You can't compare one school with another, or one year's class with another," he said. "It is possible to have a superior class come in one year and score tremendously high. The next year's class may just not have so many high achievers."

Cohasset Guidance Counselor John Leary added, "More and more students are registering for the exams in New England, unlike the rest of the country. You have to look at the character of those taking the test.

"Where traditionally the top performers may have taken the exams, now we have a higher percentage of the class looking for college admission," Leary said. "This can certainly affect the averages."

There is no single reason for the declines, Leary said. "The College Board studied the problems and isolated some areas, but no one area was pinpointed," he said. That study, conducted in 1977, attributed most of the recent decline to a variety of changes; including relaxed teaching and learning standards, television, changes in the family's role, and "unprecedented turbulence in the nation's affairs."

Television, poor study habits, and less reading by students are some of the culprits, Leary agreed. "I see very little reading for pleasure by kids these days," he commented.

At Norwell High School, SAT scores have been going against the trend and rising for the past two years, and based on preliminary tests taken by this year's seniors, are expected to rise again this year. But Kapolka noted, "Just as nobody knows why the national averages are going down, we aren't sure why ours have risen. Ultimately, those students who take the test are the ones who deserve the credit."

COMPETENCY TESTS

In two years, every town in the state will be required to give minimum competency tests to each youngster three times during their school careers, twice in elementary school and again at the high school level.

The tests will evaluate accomplishments in reading, writing and math. The following year, speech and listening skills will be added. Under state regulations, towns must also develop remedial programs in those areas for students who fall behind minimum standards.

Each community will do its own planning and testing, and will also decide its own standards, according to Elton Smith, Asst. Director of the regional office of the Dept. of Education.

The tests may either be locally designed or an approved commercial test, Smith said. The state has also prepared a test for secondary schools.

Most towns have established committees to oversee the testing program. In Norwell, a committee of teachers, administrators and parents have been studying the tests. Cohasset has added high school students to the panel, and is looking for representatives from the general public and potential employers for that town.

In Scituate, teachers studied the alternatives and sent their recommendations to the school committee, who will establish an advisory committee there, and Marshfield plans to set up a committee with members from the public.

Norwell and Scituate High Schools will give pilot tests to students this year. Norwell Asst. Supt. Robert Neely said, "When we get the results back, we can determine a suitable cutoff for passing." Norwell, Cohasset and Scituate will utilize the test prepared by the state. According to Special Education Director Stephen Hart of Cohasset, "It's difficult for a small town to develop its own competency test." Marshfield High School, the largest in the area with over 1,700 students, has not determined which test will be used, said Principal John Erickson.

The state is also expected to develop a standard test to measure speech and listening skills at the high school level. Most officials agree this is a new area for secondary education. "We generally monitor these skills in early elementary schools, but certainly haven't done much formal testing in high school," Hart said.

SALE STARTS NOVEMBER 15

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Just when November seems all doom and gloom, Thanksgiving looms on the horizon and there's little or no time to think of the weather. Lolling on a Florida beach, or basking in the California sun seems tempting on a bleak November day, but if you've ever spent Thanksgiving elsewhere, you know how one longs for the traditions and bracing cold that is our New England heritage. But, looking beyond that happy day and thinking ahead to the inevitable leftovers, I take hope when a recipe such as this one from Millie Carr comes my way. This is but one of a batch of recipes Millie says were a hit with her family and friends; even her husband enjoys being surprised at dinner time. Actually, this recipe calls for chicken, but I'm sure left-over turkey would be a good substitute and we all do thank you, Millie, for your many contributions.

TURKEY-HAM CASSEROLE
1/2 c. chopped onion
2 T butter
2 T flour
1 c. half & half cream
1 3 oz. can mushrooms
1 5 oz. can water chestnuts, sliced
2 T sherry
2 c. cubed turkey
1 c. cubed ham
1/2 c. grated Swiss cheese

Saute onion in butter. Blend in flour. Add mushrooms, half and half and sherry and cook until bubbly. Add turkey, ham, cheese and chestnuts. Mix all together. Top with mixture of 1½ c. breadcrumbs and 3T butter. Bake in 9 x 13" pan at 350 degrees for 40 min. Yields 8 servings.

Turkeys have been the order of the day since Indian Chief Massasoit and 90 braves are said to have presented the Pilgrims with gifts which included wild turkeys — a far cry from our plump birds! At the Cohasset home of John Langmaid, school committee chairman and native New Englander, a traditional Thanksgiving meal is observed by grandparents and sons, Jamie and Willie. A favorite dish at their house is this cheesy casserole.

CREAMED ONIONS
2 jars bottled onions, liquid drained and discarded
Combine and pour over onions:
1 c. light cream
1/3 c. sherry
1/2 tsp. salt
Dash pepper

Dot top of dish with 3T butter and 1/3 to 1/2 c. shredded cheddar cheese. Cover with foil and bake at 350 degrees for 20 min. Serves six to eight and can be prepared ahead of time and warmed in the oven just before serving.

The bogs are harvested now and the John Garretsons are pleased. The yield from their 35-acres of cranberry bogs in Marshfield was very good this year and it took over a month to pick the berries, even though they are gathered and loaded by machine. Ellen says they truly enjoy the "fruits of their labors" and has many recipes to share, such as this

CRANBERRY ICE
Cook and strain (Ellen uses a Foley food mill),
4 c. cranberries
2 c. water
Add:
4 c. sugar
3 c. water
2 c. orange juice
1 lemon, juice of

It's best to make this the day before serving, to insure freezing. Ellen usually uses a 1/2 g. plastic container.

This is an old, old recipe Ellen says they particularly enjoy on a cold winter's night. With biscuits and whipped cream, it makes a wonderful sauce and is called

MOCK STRAWBERRIES
1/2 c. crushed pineapple
1 c. chopped apple
1 c. cranberries, chopped
3/4 c. sugar

Let stand overnight to mellow.

skills came from doubts raised by the general public, according to Marshfield High School English department head Virginia Ross, who worked on the state advisory committee that developed the program.

"The competency testing is a response to a certain kind of feedback the Dept. of Education was getting from local communities; parents, citizens, and primarily from businesses," Mrs. Ross said.

"The feeling was that students were going through high school, getting the diplomas but not the skills," she said.

"The idea was endorsed by the Association of Secondary School Principals and the Mass. Teachers Association, and English and math teacher groups have been actively involved," she added. "We are the only state that opted for competency testing that has received approval from its teacher organizations."

Women At Work

By Nina Belsan

Ever take a tranquillity bath or "pamper, soothe and calm your body with a fragrant blend of relaxing herbs of Lavendar, Rosemary and Pennyroyal?" Or how about a tonic bath: "Derive pleasant and nervine relief from soaking in a bath of Camomile, Sage and Strawberry leaves."

The attractive purple card attached to the herbal bath bags from "Natures Way" continues: "Camomile relieves weariness and contains azulene, a skin youthener and soother; sage was the secret used in Roman baths to ease tired, aching limbs and muscles; and strawberry leaves are a further soother for pains and aches of the hips and thighs."

The company, "Natures Way" and its product, herbal bath bags, are the creations of Deborah Tate of Scituate and Suzanne Thompson of Norwell who formulated the idea that herbal bathing is not only salubrious but marketable.

Suzanne, whose mother is an herbalist in England, "grew up" around the herbs in her mother's garden. When plagued with a headache she would often receive lemon balm tea instead of aspirin. Debbie Tate, Suzanne's business partner and think alike, wasn't fortunate enough to have an herbalist in the family but her research of the subject has made her just as knowledgeable. Debbie, an ex-Chief Stewardess and Suzanne, a nurse, have adopted the ancient concept of herbal bathing and developed it into a successful business venture. Through resourceful planning and inventiveness, their less than a year old company is now represented in 20 states.

But it wasn't easy. The greatest difficulty, according to the girls, was finding the exact packaging they wanted. The packets of herbs are contained in a purple box and wrapped in purple tissue paper. "It had to be purple and we had a devil of a time finding a box company that would give a purple box; it took three months," said Suzanne. Before an Atlanta company was found to make the paper bag which holds the herbs, Suzanne and Debbie had to buy paper by the rolls and cut and make the bags themselves. Imported herbs are bought from New York; more common herbs such as sage, thyme and mint are from the garden.

Once they had a complete package, they decided to use a mail order advertisement in Yankee Magazine for their first marketing tactic. When it proved less then successful, they approached mail catalog houses to place their product. Orders from the Adam York catalog and from Carol Reed which has just accepted them, have made their first problems seem less difficult.

The item to which the two business women have devoted almost all their time and their own capital, is sold in specialty shops, boutiques, hospital gift shops and small department stores. In the South Shore area, the Linen Chest in Cohasset and Oleander in Duxbury carry the attractively packaged and enticingly redolent product.

Before Tranquillity, Tonic, Joy, Youth and Love baths reach the home, they have been entirely produced, packaged and delivered by two energetic capricorns who'd rather climb a mountain than graze at its base.

Their "mountains" range from how to buy expensive French rose buds at a moderate price to filling two thousand orders in two weeks. If their enthusiasm is any indication, they are two business women who will make the top.

Realtors To Sponsor Poetry Contest

The Plymouth County Board of Realtors has announced an essay-poetry contest entitled "America, You're Beautiful," open to all students in Grades 7 through 12 in the 14 towns served by the Board.

These towns are: Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Halifax, Hanover, Hanson, Hingham, Kingston, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth, Plympton and Scituate.

This week, members of the Board have distributed to the principals of all appropriate schools in the area, a supply of instructions on entering the contest which will end on Dec. 15, 1979.

The prizes, to be presented early in January of next year, are $50 U.S. Savings Bonds; one to be awarded to the top entry at each grade level.

"It's an effort by Realtors to help young people understand what free enterprise is all about and what it means to them," said Ruth Keefe, Cohasset Realtor and chairman of the public relations committee of the board.

"We, as Realtors, are for the most part, individual entrepreneurs and would like the youth of this area who are our homeowners of tomorrow, to realize that this country is one of the few places in the world in which an individual can buy, sell, or even own land. We give this contest our enthusiastic support and look forward to reading how our young people feel about our system," said Vin Doyle, president of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors. "As someone has said, our system is not perfect, but there hasn't been anything better in the history of the world."

All entries of an essay or poem, not over two pages in length, should be mailed to the Plymouth County Board of Realtors office in Hanover by Dec. 15. More details are available at the Junior High, Middle and Senior High schools of the area.

'Importance Of Being Ernest' Wows 'Em In Cohasset

By Tanna Kasperowicz

No one has ever said so many acute things in the guise of paradox. By shifting the viewpoint, Oscar Wilde forces his audience and players to look at life from unaccustomed angles and enlarges the boundaries of whatever truth the current generation believes.

The major criticism I had with the Importance of Being Ernest, performed last week by the Cohasset Dramatic Club, is that the first act was a trifle too long.

In retaliation over the slow beginning, the troupe overresponded to the dialogue. Wilde intended the play to be performed seriously — with the lines getting all the laughs. Plays were a vehicle only for his words.

But then, modern performers take modern liberties.

As the tempo picked up, this talented troupe rose to a startling level of accomplishment.

The play's blessings were manyfold. Good choreography . . . and two English brothers (Walter & Felix Dijk) playing the male leads were excellent.

In the end we saw that rarest of things on stage — a drama of ideas . . . difficult for even the most accomplished troupe to perform on stage.

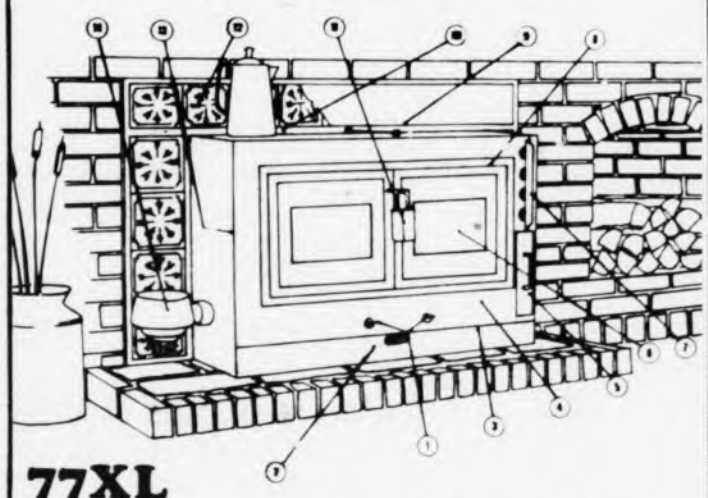
Moving with ease and authority over a variety of lines were both Judith Chute and Helen Ketcham.

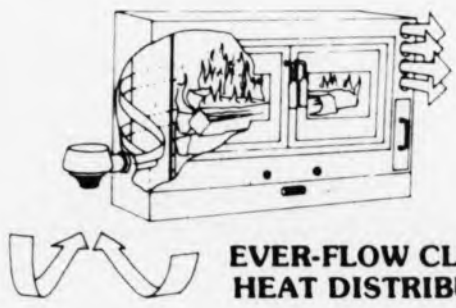
Ms. Chute gave us a running commentary on an existence that reported on conversations overheard everywhere and reminisced about the self-indulgences of everyone throughout the acts.

She recounted both the ease and the impasse of various love affairs that were happening, about to happen and recorded the proliferation of petty cruelties, failures and absurdities that take up so much space in any given day of any given life.

The thrills breaking forth from Helen Ketcham as Miss Prism safeguarded her from audience-pity and the gaucheries of melodrama. She appeared very much to be making her way through a scheme of things that could veer wildly off course, blow up or break down at any minute.

Nobody has an obligation to be wonderful. But Ms. Ketcham and Ms. Chute were charged. They glittered.





Other fine performances were by Beth Donahue in the guise of Cecily Cardew who started high and maintained her pitch throughout the third act; Bob Schultz, the Rev. Canon Chasuble, D.D. is one of those rare delights you want to see again and again just to share his sheer joy of acting.

During a dialogue with "Cecily," Sarah DeLima as the Hon. Gwendolyn Fairfax takes charge of the dialogue and performs in a locus of moods, impulses, ideas, behaviors, external forces — a joy — and one of the best scenes in the play.

Sarah Delima (Gwendolyn Fairfax) receives a marriage proposal from John Worthing (Felix Van Dijk) without so much as a swoon. She came 'round though.

'Painters Painting' On Film At Art Center

Sunday, Nov. 18, the film, 'Painters Painting' will be shown again from 6-8 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center on Ripley Road in Cohasset.

Having met with great success last Spring, this film once more affords us the opportunity to witness virtually first hand some of the foremost contemporary artists at work in their studios and to hear them speak about their work. Some of these included are Stella, Johns, Olitsky, Frankenthaller, de Konning, Newman and Poons.

The film is a fine example of the various cultural and educational events provided by the center which is affiliated with Mass. College of Art's Continuing Education Program and offers courses for graduate and undergraduate credit.

A donation is requested by those attending the film to help support the Center's educational programs.

Studds Fundraiser Nov. 21

The Studds for Congress Committee announced a major fund-raising event for Congressman Gerry E. Studds which will feature Senator Edward M. Kennedy. Studds, said he was deeply honored that the Senator had offered to take time out from his schedule to act as both host and guest at the cocktail reception.

The party will be held on Thanksgiving Eve, Wednesday, Nov. 21 at Tabor Academy's Lillard Hall, Front St., Marion from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Donations are 150. The committee suggests anyone who wishes to attend and did not receive an invitation contact the Studds for Congress Office at 401 County St., New Bedford, MA 02740 (617-992-2700).

Energy Workshop At Chamber Meeting

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce will hold an Energy Workshop/Seminar entitled 'Energy — The Present, The Future, and How To Make The Most Of It," on Thursday, Nov. 15, 1979 at Valle's in Braintree.

Program participants are acknowledged authorities with registration 8 to 8:30 a.m., including coffee, pastries and juice ending at 1:45 p.m. after a steak luncheon and speaker.

Alternatives To Moping & Hoping On The X-Way

(This is the third of a three-part report on commuting to Boston. Ed)

By Laura Griffin

A taste of salt air, a skim across ocean, genial company, no traffic...

Boat commuting got a massive public sell last year when the Massachusetts Bay Lines subsidized by the Department of Transportation offered the high speed Hovermarine ferry from Hingham to Boston.

The Hovermarine is drydocked now but officials expect service will resume next Spring. A State spokesman said paperwork should be completed this week extending the Hovermarine's warranty.

Conventional boats for commuters got a boost along with high speed sea travel. Conventional boats are available year-round now as they have been for over a decade. Commuters board at both Hingham's Industrial Park and Pemberton Pier, Hull.

Currently, ridership from Hingham is double that of last year, according to Murray Gintis, Senior Planner for the State Department of Transportation.

"The whole program's doing very well," according to Gintis who estimated that about 150 persons leave Hingham daily.

Departure and arrival in Hingham (7:20 a.m. and 5:20 p.m.) and Hull (7:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.) are geared to business hours. The charge for a ten ride ticket is $15; a one way ticket, $1.75.

Weather rarely interferes with the runs, noted Norman Rogers of the Bay Lines. In fact, Rogers suggested that bad weather, blizzards, rains not only attract commuters but point up the advantages of the boat.

For example — when heavy rains stalled drivers several weeks ago, Rogers said boat riders were delayed only five to ten minutes. One of Roger's best examples is the '78 blizzard when the Hull boat brought 98 commuters home the same night that cars and buses were blizzard-bound in Boston. The Hull run is not state-subsidized.

Still, speed and staggered hours are major factors in commuters' lives. These are attractions of crafts like the drydocked Hovermarine which ran six trips daily for commuters and carried approximately 35,000 passengers while in use.

Both Gintis and William Spence of the Bay Lines expect the Hovermarine will be operating Spring through October, 1980.

A new agreement allows the state to "extend our option to return the craft through October," according to Gintis. With a new season, Gintis believes there will be better information on reliability and annual upkeep. "There's still a lot we don't know."

In addition, Gintis pointed out that should the Hovermarine be returned, a new purchase would take six months hurdling the state purchasing procedures. Under the new agreement, scheduled to be signed shortly, commuters will use the Hovermarine while the state has more time to make a decision.

At this time, commuters who find the departure hours of the conventional boats inconvenient have access to an 8 a.m. bus from the Hingham yard. The bus is only on a trial run and will be dropped this Friday if full ridership is not met.

Commuter boat tickets may be used on the bus.

Interested persons should contact David Porter of Hingham. Friday will be the last day if there is not sufficient number of riders.

"There's still a lot we don't know"

PRIVATE PLANE

Owning and flying a private plane is not a rich man's fancy alone. It has become a sometimes practical and, believe it or not, an economical alternative to commercial air transport or driving for local businessmen and executives.

Over the past two years, Jim Mitchell, manager of Marshfield Municipal Airport, has watched individual use and ownership of private planes increase.

Mitchell said the person who has found a plane practical and economical is usually a salesman, executive or owner of a local company for whom "time is money." They own or rent planes at the airport.

Because of the gas crunch, such people find the private airplane practical. Mitchell noted that planes get 25 to 30 miles on a gallon of gas and that's "straight travel from point A to B in half the time."

Of the 68 planes parked at Marshfield Airport, 61 are privately owned. The balance are used by Jovair, Mitchell's company for flight school, sightseeing rides and rentals.

Asked how much the least expensive used plane would cost, Mitchell answered, "$5000."

"That's cheaper than a car. Will it run?"

Mitchell said then it would be a small older airplane, maybe 25 years old but that such airplanes never wear out. They must be maintained according to strict standards and a 25-year old airplane just doesn't look its age.

More than half the planes parked and in Marshfield's hangars are strictly for pleasure "like the acquisition of a boat," said Mitchell.

The small plane for business or pleasure is a good bet for trips within 500 miles, according to Mitchell, who said efficiency then decreases rapidly.

Marshfield Airport is owned by the town and contracted to Jovair, a town based company. Owners pay parking and upkeep.

While owning a plane, operating it and using it for business might sound like a reasonable travel alternative, a pilot's license is a must. The flight school at the airport offers pilot's training for approximately $38 an hour. A minimum of 40 hours of flight experience is required before consideration for a license.

AIRPORT LIMOUSINE

Limousine service from Mariner towns to Logan Airport is available four times daily and once on Sunday through the South Shore Cape Cod Airport Limousine Service.

The firm owned and operated by Brian McKenny of Marshfield has quadrupled its fleet and services since opening in 1977.

Dispatcher Mike Corwin said that among the stops now made on regular limousine runs are the Rockland Credit Union, Hanover Mall; Stinger's Restaurant, Rte. 53 and Tinker's Dam Restaurant, the Marshfield-Pembroke line.

Riding in style to the airport cost approximately $10 per person with half-rates for young people under 16. The fares, prorated according to destination or pick-up point, are approved by the Department of Public Utilities.

Corwin said a 24-hour reservation is required because all trips are booked ahead. However, Corwin said that efforts are always made to aid stranded travellers either way. Drivers check in by telephone twice each trip and are occasionally able to help.

The limousine schedule offers a wide spectrum of hours covering early and mid-morning and early and mid-afternoon on the nine daily trips. Busiest days are Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Shoestring Players Present 'Patches'

The Shoestring Players, creative dramatics group from the South Shore Conservatory, will present 'Patches,' a program of short pieces, at the Hingham Public Library on Saturday, Nov. 17 at 2 p.m.

These young people, ages 9-12, belong to the newly formed repertory company made up of members of the advanced workshop at the school. Under the direction of Ellen Kelly, they plan to give a number of programs at various places in the South Shore area. Taking the show on the road, Kelly feels, gives the actors and actresses a new dimension in their exposure to the craft of entertaining.

This program is free and the public welcome.

On Hold

By Lois Martin

Power is the hold button on a telephone.

Since the inception of Ma Bell's clever contraption, sharp engineers have taught us to do a lot of tricks with the telephone. We can push buttons and talk with about anyone anywhere on a pink, white, or even a Mickey Mouse mouthpiece. Personally, I fear the day a caller gets to see the answerer. Lifestyles will change then and many a bathrobe will be replaced.

But we don't have to be in the 21st century to know the might of the hold button. Any of us who've made business calls (friends don't put you on hold) have been victims of an abuse of that power.

In the olden days, someone answered, or no one did. None of this getting a call through and then sitting there on hold while the other person goes out for coffee or whatever.

If we make a long distance call, we're particularly nervous about being put on hold. As soon as the official answerer gets on the line, we ask for our "party" (odd term for a business call recipient). But often before we can fudge through the initial formalities, she says, "Can you hold?" But she usually doesn't wait for an answer.

There we are . . . holding without having consented to it. Every now and then the hold doesn't hold and we're disconnected. I consider 30 to 60 seconds the maximum hold time. The assertive person hangs up after that. But the hold button makes a statement. You know where you stand in the day's priorities with that business if you're immediately put on hold. It isn't unusual to call some firms and be answered by "Please hold," instead of "Hello," "How's it going," or something pleasant.

What happens to the people who put us on hold? I've no idea. While I'm holding I often picture the other end of the line. Is it possible we've called in the middle of an emergency operation or during the good part of "As The World Turns?"

Naturally, businesses became aware of our pique in sitting with a telephone between our jaw and shoulder while we're stirring the spaghetti sauce or painting the woodwork. So they got this swell notion to install music for the waiting caller. One long Monday I called a car dealer, was put on hold, of course, and got to hear "I Do All My Crying In The Rain." That was a chorus rendition of the mournful ballad. Usually we get the instrumentals only. Seldom are the tunes sprightly. By the time we're taken off hold, we're too depressed to conduct our business.

It surprises me they haven't branched out in their fill up of hold time. I'd worry if I heard the start of a recital of Samuel Taylor Coleridge's "Rime of the Ancient Mariner." That was a long poem and it would let me know I needed a longer cord so I could vacuum the house or give the dog a bath.

How come they aren't selling advertisements for those time periods. There's a large source of revenue in the holding pattern. We could learn about grocery specials; listen to political candidates; and catch up on public affairs announcements.

Or how about some funny recordings? Maybe a few of Ogden Nash's lighthearted rhymes or the best of Bob Hope's quips. On the other hand it could become a source of public education. There's plenty of time for a brushup course in Spanish or a brief synopsis of Balkan life. In fact we should have options on hold if we have no choice about being held.

There's a major debate about whether it' s more pleasing to be stranded on hold or morse scintillating to talk to a recording machine. Few people are self-conscious on hold but everybody's leery about communicating with a recording. We clear our throats, poised for the starting beep and stammer through our message.

Frankly I'd consider the perfect revenge to be as follows: let them return from lunch, take us off hold, only to find a recorded message from us telling them what they can do with that button.

S S Artists To Exhibit In Quincy

From Nov. 1 - Nov. 28, the Gallery Artists of the South Shore Art Center will be exhibiting their work at the State St. South building in North Quincy. The paintings and drawings will hang in the exhibit area near the dining rooms from 9-5, Monday through Friday.

The variety of media and techniques on view make the exhibit a very interesting one. While there are several landscapes included they are all distinct; R. Farbush, E. Burke, A. Belson, J. Smonjeski, K. Macniel, J. Marson, M. Dillon, and T. Lucas have, with acrylics, oils, watercolors and oil crayons rendered a broad range of landscapes.

In the category of Still Life, watercolor acrylics and pen and ink are used respectively by V. Avery, K. Calnan and E.M. Francis. L. Koopman-Wyman with colored pencil and R. Boyer with oils have contributed two fine portraits, aqndand the shoe is complete with abstracts by L. Kalish and M. Callahan.

Center To Establish New Hotline

The South Shore Women's Center has recently been refunded under a CETA Special Projects Grant and will continue their work in establishing the hotline and shelter. The group is conducting a "needs assessment" for the 27 towns in the Plymouth County area.

The "needs assessment" consists of a statistical survey of the incidence of domestic violence to determine the needs of Plymouth County and is an essential part of the funding proposals which they have been submitting to state and Federal funding agencies. The group has been visiting community agencies in the area to establish a referral network between all agencies providing the services utilized by victims of domestic violence.

The Center is still in need of support, donations of any kind, and in need of mature adults who are concerned with the problem of domestic violence and who would like to volunteer to assist the Center in their efforts. Anyone interested may call Evelyn Valler, at 746-2664.

'Abuse And Neglect' The Topic At Children's Council Meeting

"Advocacy Strategies on Child Abuse and Neglect" will be the featured topic of the Plymouth Area Council for Children meeting Wednesday, Nov. 14 from 7:30-9:30 at 130 Court St. in Plymouth.

The Guest Speaker is Mr. Harold Goldmeyer, Executive Director of the Massachusetts Committee for Children and Youth, who recently filed suit against the state of Massachusetts for not providing services to abused children. Goldmeyer alleges that welfare agencies fail in their constitutional mandates to protect abused children because of a lack of trained service workers: at one point last month there were 160 uncovered cases in the New Bedford Regional Dept. of Public Welfare office. Some of the reported cases had been waiting assignment for over two months! "The reason why we went to court is that we've tried everything else," says Goldmeyer. "The single issue involved is how to get services delivered to children."

Those Days Of Chatterton. . . Silvia. . . And

History Of The Holiday Football Game

By Rob Tis

The most noteworthy custom adhered to at Thanksgiving, right behind the famed turkey dinner, is a good high school football game.

There is an amazing history to Thanksgiving football in Cohasset. Cohasset's first real rivalry started in the early 1950's when it played Holbrook on Thanksgiving.

Then in 1957, Hull formed its own high school after breaking away from Hingham. Holbrook, in the meantime, was dropping in talent and size so Cohasset immediately initiated its series with Hull as its Thanksgiving day opponent. This was by far the biggest event of the year for all of Cohasset.

In these years almost 80 percent of the male student population went out for football. Clark Chatterton, high school athletic director, remembers crowds of four or five thousand people attending these Thanksgiving festivals. He also remembers Cohasset coming out on the winning end quite a bit.

These rich years in C.H.S. football history fielded such living Cohasset legends as

Attorney General Threatens Action

By Tanna Kasperowicz

The Attorney General's office has announced its intentions to move against the town for its having not dealt with its effluent problems.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark received a phone call and follow-up letter from Atty. Ann Rogers of the Attorney General's office last week regarding the same. The Mariner was unable to contact Ms. Rogers before press deadline, Monday.

In a phone call interview Sunday, Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said he did not know exactly what "appropriate action" might entail, but suspected any action taken by the A.G. might force the town to a special town meeting sooner than expected.

Fines up to $10,000 a day have been threatened by the state long before the Oct. 22 special town meeting — which was offered two sites. That meeting voted down Whale Meadow, looked a little more interestedly at the school lands abutting the Music Circus — but hit a snag on that offering when the school committee voted 3-3 to not release the lands for a wastewater facility.

Although the school lands are town-owned, Town Counsel Blake Thaxter advised town meeting that only the school committee could release that land (10 acres) back to the town.

The only step forward the town has taken on the sewerage issue came through a resolution at the Oct. 22 meeting when it was voted favorably to finance a plant — at location X.

In the meantime, Clark said Sunday the selectmen had not appointed their one representative on the newly-created five-member citizens' advisory committee on the wastewater plant.

That committee was formed by the sewer commissioners on Nov. 5 — at the urging of selectmen.

Pat Hurley, chairman of the advisory committee, also said that his committee had not

May The Best Team Lose?

By Chet Ellis

"What's this? Another column on football? What possibly could be left to say! Hasn't football been analyzed and discussed ad nauseum by both serious and not-so-serious sports writers ever since St. Francis kicked the head of the last Roman Consul over Hadrians Wall and started the game in AD 374?"

Not so, there's still plenty left to say. After all, it's Thanksgiving and anyone who has already proved himself an expert on the energy crisis, sewer politics and bridge jumping should be able to come up with an original gridiron thought or two. For example, ponder the following:

While rummaging through old yearbooks and newspaper articles looking for a story idea on Cohasset football, I discovered, much to my surprise, that over the years Cohasset has in fact lost most of its

Arbitrator Finds For Police

Selectmen voted last week to appeal to superior court an arbitrator's ruling that the town is in violation of its collective bargaining agreement with the police department.

According to Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark, Arbitrator John E. Higgins said the town went into violation when it failed to offer regular officers shift assignments and hired two permanent intermittents.

The arbitrator awarded compensation to be distributed among the regular officers in the unit working on the dates involved (Dec. 1978-May 1979).

While the association contends that an overtime situation is created when a shift falls vacant for any reason, Atty. Charles Humphries, acting on the town's behalf in the matter, told selectmen he disagreed.

Clark said in a similar case in Rockland the arbitrator found in favor of the town.

According to police department officials, there are two regular openings in the police department and one forty-hour a week temporary vacancy resulting from a suspension — which represents a total of 120 man-hours a week or 60 overtime hours. However, not all shifts are covered.

In the meantime, Police Chief Randolph Feola spent $17,000 of his $25,000 overtime budget in the past five months. In a letter dated January 26, 1979 Chief Feola told selectmen there would not be enough money in his budget to pay for the overtime shifts — noting that it was unlawful for him to spend money not in his budget.

In a related matter, the Village and Harbor Associa-

Applications For Fuel Aid Being Taken

If your gross annual income falls below the federal income guidelines and you need money to pay for heating oil, natural gas or electricity, you can now contact the Quincy Community Action Organization, Inc. at 478-8181. No money is yet available but they are taking applications.

Selectmen last week voted to appoint Alfred Odermatt and Marie McCarthy to a local action council which will assist residents with how to apply for fuel assistance or housing improvements needed to reduce fuel costs.

Odermatt told selectmen that up to $400 maximum would be alloted to an individual family. The program is not designed to pay all fuel bills incurred but will assist homeowners in an emergency.

Rob Tis And Mike Ellis On Rob Tis

Favorite Drink: Lemonade — "I'm famous for it."

Last Book Read: Jaws II

Hobbies: Playing tennis, fishing for smelts and hanging around the harbor in general.

Likes: Biology — "I love it, but I'm awful at it"; and writing for the Mariner. The feeling's mutual.

A couple of months ago we decided we needed someone at the high school who knew the kids — an insider — to write Mariner sports. Someone who could make deadlines, write a quick, clean piece of copy with little or no supervision — and someone who had a natural style. Tis fit our high standards.

After we interviewed Tis last week we interviewed Mike Ellis on Tis. As it turned out, Mike had more to say about Tis than Tis had to say about Tis – so we included Mike's remarks about Tis in bold face type throughout the article.

As a high school sophomore, Tis takes biology, Spanish, math, geology and as of two months ago he decided he might like to be a sportswriter. We reminded him that he already was a sportswriter. "Well, yeah," he said.

As a result of his job with the Mariner, he's obtained power, and he uses it. He hands out complimentary copies of the Mariner to all his teachers and friends. He also jumps off the Mill River Bridge.

Not only does Tis write for the Mariner and to go school full-time, he holds down a part-time job at the Red Lion Inn in the kitchen during the school year and works at the Jesuits' Bellarmine Vacation House as a kitchen boy during the summer. He also volunteers for community service, and took a very active part in haunting the JC's haunted house this year.

In spite of his many activities, Tis denied that he is ambitious. "My Mom kind of gets me all the jobs. I kind of get stuck."

He used to play football but quit when he discovered "It hurts."

He wants to be a nationally-ranked tennis player — he's good for his age. This year he'll play basketball, but he's short. His knees buckle in when he stands straight.

"I really like duck-shooting, but I don't shoot now because my Mom doesn't want me to have a gun," Tis said.

"I tried water-skiing, I can stay up. But I just don't feel like I look right (on water skis)." He doesn't go to the movies that often, and he likes ping-pong.

In ninth grade he went out with a girl. He mooches boat rides from people. And every summer he wears the same cut-off pants all summer. They're inscribed MAHO BAY — he got them in the Virgin Islands.

Mike added: His father is the PR man at Plymouth Nuclear Plant, but Rob told us his dad owned the nuclear plant!

Born on Babe Ruth's birthday, Feb. 6 — Tis said "My parents attribute no significance to that."

TIS WITH TREE on the Cohasset Common — that's where he can usually be found "romping" after school hours. He's the guy to talk to about Cohasset sports — on the field or in the bush.

tion petitioned selectmen last week for a foot patrolman in the village area which merchants feel would deter vandalism.

Selectmen unanimously agreed to endorse that request, but Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he felt the request might be impossible to meet in the near future.

According to Clark, Civil Service has not yet responded to the town's August request for a Civil Service exam for police officers. However, the board agreed to invite Chief Feola to their next meeting to further discuss the matter.

Response Asked From Circus

John Hayes, chairman of the board of trustees of the South Shore Music Circus, has been asked by selectmen to respond to several requests recently made by Concerned Citizens.

Selectmen have reached a concensus that a stronger attempt should be made to restrict the Circus with regard to loudness, traffic and performance time — but still have reservations about how to tack conditions onto the Circus' weekday entertainment license.

Two weeks ago Professor Mary Gainor, spokeswoman of the citizens, requested that selectmen have the circus maintain a "noise" level of not more than 50 decibles; permit no one-way traffic on Sohier Street, and allow no performances after 10:30 p.m. on a night before a work day.

Selectmen said they would not take any action on the matter before obtaining a response from Hayes to the matter.

Over past weeks, circus officials have stated that they have made all the adjustments they can possibly make, barring a cooperative venture which would mean constructing a solid tent roofing and sound barriers outside the tent to detour noise.

made an appointment. It is thought that sewer commissioners will make their two appointments at their Monday session.

Moderator David Place said he was unaware that he had an appointment to make to the committee or that such a committee existed, as he had been out of town on business most of the month.

Town officials planned to meet this past Tuesday at the high school to further discuss the sewerage matter.

Fuel Aid

relative to family size must be as follows:

If you live alone you can make no more then $4,250 a year before taxes. A family of two can make no more than $5,625; three, $7,000; four, $8,375; five, $9,750 and a family of six, $11,125. For each additional family member add $1,375.

Your income must be verified by the following documents at the time of application: letters for AFDC monthly allowance, Social Security monthly allowance, SSI monthly allowance and for unemployment, any retirement income or other monthly allotments.

If you are employed a copy of six recent pay stubs or a letter from your employer will be necessary. The program will require information based on 125 per cent income eligibility.

President Jimmy Carter is shortly expected to sign a $1.35 billion fuel aid bill. Massachusetts will get $66.27 million from that, but the money will not arrive until at least mid-December.

In the meantime, the state last week approved what amounted to a $10 million loan to itself to fund the program until the federal money comes through.

time. All are honor students.

That's a record to be proud of. Just think what might have resulted if they lost all their games. They all would have gotten into Harvard easily!

If my theory appears to be far out, consider the Boston area Class I schools that are always football powerhouses; Framingham, Woburn and Weymouth North win practically all of their games all of the time. Can anyone think of anyone famous from those schools? Of course not! Obscurity is their lot and deservedly so.

From 1962 through 1972 the record was a mediocre 36 and 38, not really a good solid losing record but close enough to produce a U.Maine, a U.Mass., a couple of BCs and one Notre Dame. Long hair, rock music, and mini-skirts were probably the cause of the demise.

The real clincher came when I looked at the late fifties won-lost record. Prior to 1957, the team had had six consecutive years of an enthusiastic, hard working coach whose knowledge of the game was unsurpassed.

Coincidently, as 1956 passed into history, there emerged at the High School a group of potential triple threats whose raw talent was maturing into a cohesive, high spirited football team. The team of 1957 was ordained to lay flat the rest of the South Shore League.

There was just no way to stop the disaster that occurred. The team was too strong. From 1957 to 1961, Cohasset High School won 26 and lost 8, a record the town has been trying to live down for years. I tried to find people around town who could think of anyone who played football during that time who had become successful. Not one came to mind, a lost generation.

This Thursday, when Cohasset meets Duxbury in what is affectionately referred to as games. This of course applies only to the modern era, 1952 through 1979.

Now I have attended CHS home games regularly since 1964 but I had never really paid much attention to the score. I go primarily to purchase Gridiron Club raffle tickets, listen to the Band, and partake of the camaraderie and fellowship that exists at the games, especially in the the Turkey Bowl, I hope everyone present will keep in mind the single, overwhelming lesson of our football past; May the Best Team Lose!

Murray Charges Civil Service Inflexible

The Special Commission on Civil Service has finally begun its work, and Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (Cohasset, Hingham and Hull) is watching with interest the progress it is making and will analyze closely the Commission's recommendation this January.

The Special Commission has established subcommittees to study the existing civil service system in Massachusetts and to move as quickly as possible to bring its recommendations to the legislature next session.

In December, the Special Commission will hold public hearings on the civil service system throughout the state and the public is encouraged to attend and voice their opinions for an improved system for selecting, training, managing and disciplining public employees.

Rep. Murray said, "Our civil service system is almost one hundred years old and needs major modifications and modernizations. Last July the legislature established a special commission to develop these changes, but no appointments have been made so far."

The Third Plymouth Legislator continued, "The current civil service system is inflex ible and glacially slow. So many state employees have been hired on a provisional basis that a third of all state employees are now subject to patronage and arbitrary firing. Very little in the personnel parts of the civil service system cannot or will not respond to the obvious needs of managers and employees.

"Massachusetts is the next to last state to manage the personnel practices of municipalities. Paper work has to be duplicated and cities and towns are discouraged from developing creative and fair methods of meeting their individual personnel needs."

Rep. Murray concluded, "Our state's personnel system needs to be modernized and made more effective if the people are to receive in full the services for which we pay so dearly. Employees too would benefit from these changes."

WDRCO Sounds Off

To the Editor:

I'd like to think that the ommision of the answer to the Superman Cryptogram in the Nov. 15 issue was unintentional, but I doubt that it was. If you can promise the cryptograms will get more difficult, you'd probably leave out the solution just to see who'd notice.

You hope readers will buy the next issue for the new Crypt. Not me. I buy the paper for last week's answer. Some people may relish puzzle solving, but I don't. I'm a cartoon speed-reader and get very frustrated when the illustrations don't have captions I can decipher. So how come you left it out?

My guess is that Superman is saying: "I was turned down for the job because I can't decode crypt!"

A Hard Look At Plymouth

To the Editor:

In your November 15 issue, Gilbert Tower recommends that every Cohasset Taxpayer visit the sewage treatment plant in Plymouth. He says that Plymouth's plant is about 200 feet from a restaurant, and that a passerby might think it to be an art museum.

Anyone visiting that plant last summer would have come away with different ideas. I would like to quote parts of a July 23, 1979 Patriot Ledger news item to illustrate how Plymouth people must feel about their sewage system:

•Work crews were to begin extensive excavation around the broken water street sewer main today.

•Progress has been slow on the project, which began June 23, when a sewer main broke next to the sewage treatment plant. The break forced the dumping of unprocessed sewage into Plymouth Harbor. All harbor beaches have been closed to swimming because of the pollution threat.

•This is a much larger project than we originally thought, selectmen's executive secretary William R. Griffin said.

•Since last week, the town has employed a full-time construction inspector from the Boston engineering firm of Metcalf and Eddy, Inc. to supervise the project. Also working on the project are two part-time Metcalf and Eddy engineers, including the engineer who supervised installation of the sewer line 10 years ago.

•Officials believe that an 8-foot length of pipe broke completely and other lines around it are sagging. The area around it has been flooded with spring water, sewage and tidal water from the harbor.

□•Department of Public Works Director, John J. McKinnon estimated that the repair of the sewer line and the road will cost between $100,000 and $150,000. The expenditures would be applied to next year's tax rate."

It is interesting to note that Cohasset's consultants, Metcalf and Eddy were the engineers for the Plymouth System. It is also interesting to note that, in a system which is only 10 years old, it is the Plymouth taxpayers who will pay for the repairs in next year's tax rate. The State and Federal governments have disappeared.

Cohasset's Sewer Commissioners are compaigning hard for an expansion here which would be 15 times larger than the current system. I think, the Taxpayers, as Mr. Tower suggests, should take a hard look at Plymouth's experience and ask some serious questions.

The best way to predict the future is to look at what has already happened. Is this what we want in Cohasset ten years from now?

Cohasset Chapter #34

Cohasset Fish Needs Volunteers!

By Gertrude Hooper

Cohasset offers a unique service to its residents that the surrounding towns do not match. It is called FISH. From seven in the morning until seven at night, seven days a week, it stands ready to serve as a good neighbor to anyone in the town needing help.

Mainly this help takes the form of driving people to doctors' offices and clinics in nearby towns, but it also takes patients from the local nursing homes to the pool for therapeutic swimming in summer and on foliage drives in the autumn.

It will telephone daily to people living alone, who request it, to make sure that they are O.K. FISH drives one patient to Boston three times a week for dialysis treatment, and has driven others to the Brockton Hospital on a daily basis for four weeks for chemotherapy. In short, it does whatever a good neighbor would do to help someone out.

Anyone wishing FISH's services may call the Answering Service at 383-6600, if possible a few days in advance of the need. There are two FISH volunteers on duty each day. One fills the calls that have come in, while the other, the back-up, stays home to answer the phone and find a driver from the emergency list to fill subsequent calls.

FISH volunteers are asked to serve only one day a month, and their day of duty is arranged to suit their convenience. It takes about 100 volunteers to maintain the service, and more volunteers are urgently needed. Drivers are in particularly short supply at present, but people who don't drive are welcomed as back-ups. Anyone who would like to serve in this important and fulfilling way may call the chairman at 383-1111.

FISH relies for its support — it costs about $200 a year to mail the monthly schedules — on three of the Cohasset churches: St. Anthony's, St. Stephen's, and the Second Congregational Church. The Unitarian Church duplicates the schedule and supplies the paper therefor in lieu of a cash contribution. Occasional grants are made by local organizations and gifts from patients also help to balance our budget.

FISH's name is rooted in history. The early Christians, persecuted and hunted, used the symbol of the fish to identify themselves secretly. To His pioneer disciples, the Nazarene was known as Jesus Christ, Son of God, Savior, which, translated into Greek, was Ieous Christos Theou Uios Soter.

The initials of these words spell the word for fish in Greek. When a Christian met someone along the way, he would quietly make a single arced mark in the dirt. If the stranger were a Christian, he would complete the sign of the fish by adding a reversed arc.

FISH today serves all Cohasset residents, regardless of race, creed, color, age, or sex. Unfortunately FISH cannot serve people from other towns, because it has all we can handle in providing service to our own residents. FISH welcomes the help of any volunteers — men and women — (383-1111) or the chance to serve those who need our help (383-6600).

Please Write This

This is the Good News Column. You'll notice it's short this week.

That's because you're going to write it.

Good news will contain all the countless hundreds, possibly thousands, of nice things Cohasset neighbors do for their Cohasset neighbors day-in, day-out, week-by-week.

When our staff happens to hear of something noteworthy, we'll slip that in. But we're depending upon you.

Put your good news on a post card and mail it to us at the Mariner, Box 71, 02025. Or slip it in our drop box at the Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy. If you prefer that we not use your name — that's fine. Say so on your card.

Good news can be anything from a whole church group working to raise funds for a worthy cause...or it can be as simple as the "older brother" who slipped 45 cents under his little brother's pillow one morning when the tooth fairy "forgot."

Cohasseters Have Kept Their Passports Handy

By Peter Barnicle

Americans are known as a nomadic people. They are always on the go.

The millions who daily jam the Southeast Expressway, the Los Angeles Freeway, the Long Island Expressway and other arterial highways leading into urban centers give witness to this restless spirit. A vacation is not a vacation unless we 'go' some place.

After all, a lot of us wouldn't be here today if our forebears didn't have the get up and go which led them to shake off the oppression and poverty of Europe in the hope of a better life. Their sons and daughters, imbued with the nomadic spirit, pushed westward until they spread across the continent.

Only recently we had a visit from Mrs. George Pratt of Williamstown, Mo., and Mrs. Catherine Pratt of Blackwell, Okla. The ladies were interested in the history of Ezekial Pratt who left Cohasset early in the 19th century to travel west. And a hundred years or more before Ezekial left Cohasset the ancestors of the sixteenth President of the United States left town to trek over the Alleghanies and settle in Kentucky.

Today Cohasseters (or is it Cohassetites?) have a different rationale — but they still keep their passports handy. How about the neighbor who has taken off for a three year assignment in Japan? Or the man on the next street who is headed for an oil rig in the North Sea. In both cases they have probably rented their home for the duration, with every intention of returning.

Of course a number of Cohasseters go South for the winter, but that is nothing new. Residents of our town have been going South for the past century and a half.

In looking back we find that many vessels in the fishing fleet operating out of Cohasset packed up their gear and headed for the warmer climes with the first onset of blustery winter weather. The schooners would pick up cargo in Boston and sail for Charleston, Savannah, New Orleans and other ports in the Gulf of Mexico.

During the winter they would handle cargo between the Gulf ports and the West Indies. They returned in the spring to outfit for the summer fishing season.

In the course of this work they came in contact with ship owners and merchants who recognized their seamanship and offered them berths on vessels sailing to foreign ports.

Capt. Ephriam Snow and his brother, Capt. Henry Snow, were born in Truro and came to Cohasset in 1807. They lived on Black Horse Lane. At one time the street was known as Snow Place in their honor, but later the original name was restored.

Capt. Ephriam made at least fifty trans-Atlantic crossings. On one trip to Liverpool in 1810 he and his crew fell afoul a press gang and had to battle their way out. This was one of the incidents which led to the War of 1812.

On another voyage to Spain he met Salvador Sabatey Morell and brought him back to Cohasset. The young Spaniard who was born at Willaseca, Tarragona, in 1790, became a naturalized citizen in 1816 and took the name Samuel Snow. He married Betsy Pratt and they bought a house on South Main St., built in 1796 by Laban Worrick.

Capt. George Hall, who was born in town in 1790, was another seafarer. His voyages took him to the Mediterranean and like a good many other Americans venturing into those waters early in the 19th century he was captured by pirates. For a time it looked like he had seen the last of Cohasset as the pirates started to loot the vessel. Then, according to the captain's story, the pirate captain discovered Hall was a brother Mason. The looting was called off and the ship was freed.

Capt. Philip Fox (1795-1832) was born in Lincolnshire, England, and owes his Cohasset connection to a marriage with Anna Willcut of this town. He was master of his own vessel, the Herald, at age 24. Fox was noted for his record breaking trips between Liverpool and Boston, some sixteen and seventeen days. He always brought a bundle of English newspapers with him to prove when he had sailed.

However, his reluctance to reef sail in heavy winds, is reported to have made his insurance agents very nervous. They appreciated his fast trips, but not at the expense of losing the vessel.

The Herald often left Boston with a cargo for Charleston where it would pick up a cargo of cotton for England. On the third leg of the run the ship would carry passengers and general cargo back to Boston. The entire trip usually took four months.

Life aboard ship in those days was only for the stout-hearted. Crews were difficult to sign on if the captain had the reputation of being a hard task master.

Capt. Peter Pratt, one of the toughest, solved the problem by staying below decks until the ship had cleared the harbor. When he finally appeared on deck Boston Light was dropping astern and it was too late to jump overboard.

Every town where young men get the urge to run away to sea has had its Southward Pratt. He was a young fellow who used to dream of foreign shores as he drove the cows out to pasture in the morning and brought them back at night to be milked.

One evening the cows waited in vain, Southward had gone to sea. This was back in the early 1800's. The Pratts took in Mercy Gannett of Scituate as a hired girl and she went after the cows each evening.

Three years after Southward had disappeared she was on her way to the pasture one spring evening when she discovered a tall young man taking down the bars of the pasture gate and rounding up the cows. It was the sailor home from the sea.

And, so the story goes, they were married and lived in a house on Black Horse Lane where they brought up a family of ten children. Southward had gotten the sand out of his shoes.

New Preschool Safety Program

Chief Feola today urged all parents of preschool children to pick up a set of free traffic safety booklets at the Police Station.

Cohasset is cooperating with the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau and the Mass. Division of the American Automobile Association in the new Preschool Children in Traffic program, and booklets are available on a first-come, first-served basis to all residents who have children under age six.

"This program is primarily aimed at parents," Chief Feola said. "It provides them with the teaching materials necessary to help their children develop safer habits."

The preschool child teaching program was developed by the AAA and is being funded by the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau. The program consists of an attractively packaged set of five booklets. One is Parents' Guide for Action, which explains why and how the entire teaching effort should be undertaken. The other four booklets are designed for parents to use with children.

The series includes simple language and drawings to illustrate the dangers and characteristics of streets and traffic. The books are to be used progressively.

As children learn the lessons of one, they move on to the next. These booklets have been distributed to the kindergarten students at Osgood School. There are a limited number available. Sgt. Rhodes will have them available at the police station anytime between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Deer Hill Council To Meet Tues.

The Deer Hill Communications Council will be held Tuesday, Nov. 27 at 9 a.m. at the Deer Hill School.

Stephen Hart, administrator of special education, will address the group with respect to the South Shore Collaborative program.

Around Town Hall

TREE LIGHTS

The Village and Harbor Association has been given permission of the selectmen to light a tree next to the bus stop at St. Stephen's Church. The association will supply the lights and the timer.

AGREEMENT SIGNED

Selectmen signed an agreement which will enable the Paul Pratt Memorial Library to auction two Audubon copperplate birds in New York. The library will retain the funds received for its own uses.

CETA EXTENSION

A communication from Quincy CETA last week revealed that the five CETA employees presently employed by the town hall will have their time extended another six months for a total time of 18 months.

NEW AGENCY

Mary Jane England informed selectmen last week that persons are being sought to serve on an area board for a new agency being formed by the department of social services.

NOTED

Selectmen received correspondence from Norfolk County Hospital which urged support of house bill 6430 for Blue Cross coverage for chronic disease hospitals.

The Boy Friend. . . Yes! Unanimously

A Review
By Tanna Kasperowicz

I am afraid this is going to sound like a football awards assembly. Because I liked everything — beginning with the mini-courses down to the finale.

The Boy Friend was not a haphazard event.

As a play/musical it never even came close to being my favorite, but last week it served its purpose well enough. That being to blast the audience out of its seats with Director Ron Emmon's vast talent reservoir of seniors — some of whom he has been nurturing along for as long as five years — Lisa O'Toole for example.

The display of talent was frightening. It was like reading a volume of John Chiardi all in one night.

A large undertaking, requiring three scene changes — nothing dragged.

Behind the scenes everything clicked effortlessly. Michele Fahey, pianist, worked on her piano like someone possessed. David Zobel pitched in with bass and percussion.

Disa Pratt gave an outrageously fine performance as Madame Dubonnet. The Friday night audience gave her special applause after her song/talk "Poor Little Pierrette." She was just breathtaking during her racey "You-Don't-Want-To-Play-With-Me-Blues" number.

SOUS? Karen Smith was a darling French boarding school maid in the Senior Class play held last weekend. All photos on this page by Greg Derr.

CARI GOUDEN TOUCHES UP DISA PRATT who gave one of many outstanding performances last week.

THEY DANCED, THEY SANG, THEY FLIRTED their way through three fun-filled evenings!

AS BUBBLY ON STAGE AS OFF — pretty Meri Fink, who had one of the main leads in "The Boy Friend."

Twins Lisa and Lynn O'-Toole probably sparkle wherever they are. They did here, too.

Lisa O'Toole and Lance Norris duoed one of the finest songs in the play when they flirted-sang "It's Never Too Late To Fall In Love." The wack-a-doos and squeals were an added delight.

But I don't believe Lance Norris is a high school senior.

Bob Gunville has gorgeous eyes that flash even from the back of the auditorium. He and Meri Fink were nicely stage-mated.

Every musical must have its star songsters and Meri Fink, Lisa O'Toole and Disa Pratt were mine . . . with Lance Norris my first choice all-around among the men.

In spite of her cold, Meri Fink probably has the best natural stage voice of the group. She also dances and sings, and seems quite comfortable doing it all. Her clown suit at the end was adorable.

Ronny White san "Be My Baby," although I can't find ,t on the program — and the audience was charmed.

The whole review is strangely impervious to summing up.

I just liked it. If you missed it — I'm sorry.

around town

☐Edward and Kathleen Brennock of 136 Doanne Street are the parents of a daughter, Holly Marie, born on Nov. 5 at South Shore Hospital, and weighing 8 lbs. 2 ozs. The Brennocks also have two daughters, Heather Ann, 5, and Katie Lynn, 4. The proud grandparents are Mary and Henry Brennock of Cohasset, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mulvaney of No. Weymouth.

☐On the Saturday before Halloween, Marie Price and many of her second grade students visited the Children s Museum's Last Good-Boo Haunted House in Boston. Helping out with driving and chaperoning were parents Jim Story, Bill Anstead, Bill and Robbie Roycroft, and veteran volunteer Joseph Dockray, who said, "It wouldn't be Halloween if I didn't drive the kids!" (I wish I was a second grader in Mrs. Price's class.)

☐Three Cohasset young women, all 1979 graduates of Cohasset High School, are freshmen students at Simmons College, Boston:

Gerda Cahill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cahill, 24 Buttonwood Lane, is a pre-nursing major;

Sally Sisson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Sisson of 392 So. Main St., is studying communications; and Barbara Curelli, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Curelli, 149 Linden Drive, is enrolled in the physical therapy curriculum.

☐Miss Jo-Ann Churchill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Churchill, Cohasset, is engaged to be married to Mr. John Sterling Hubbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hubbell of Scituate. Miss Churchill is a Cohasset High School and Mt. Ida graduate employed by Suburban TV & Appliances in Weymouth. Mr. Hubbell, a graduate of Sterling Academy, is employed at Weymouth Honda. The couple is planning a winter wedding.

☐Plans for the 5th annual New Year's Celebration at Kimball's-By-The-Sea are under way and celebrators, Don and Marcia Clark, Parker and Janet Gondveer, A.J. and Marjoire Antione, and Tom and J.J. Healy have organized a terrific party. The 24-hour affair will begin with relaxing around the pool and rooms; dinner at 8 p.m.; dancing to the music of a professional band until 2 a.m.; (Probably some relaxing around the pool and rooms); and will conclude with morning Bloody Mary's and breakfast at 10 a.m. The rooms at Kimball's are filling up fast, so give one of the above a call to reserve your place in the merrymaking!

☐Bouquets to the Friends of the Library for bringing the New England Theatre Guild for Children's production of the Pied Piper to Cohasset last week. The touring company's production of this classic story was fresh, lively, and very entertaining. The troupe's songs, dances, and mime were original and full of talent.

HALF DAY OF SCHOOL produced these pretty laughs recently. L-R: Lauren Smith, Kelly Beale, Bebe Lagrotteria, Nancy Donahue and Georgia Flanagan.

☐Mrs. Eric Pearson of 72 Church St. was one of the Doric Dames recently honored at their annual meeting with an award for volunteer work at the State House.

☐The Christmas Show House, to benefit the Eunice Kennedy Shriver Center for mental retardation, will be held in the 19th century home of authors Doris Kearns and Richard Goodwin, Concord. Their home will be decorated for Christmas by designer florists and open to the public from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Nov. 28-Dec. 1 and Dec. 4-9. Mrs. James Whelan, 137 Atlantic Avenue, is cochairman of the affair and Mrs. James Donovan, also of Cohasset, is Regional Chairman. Direct tickets sales and inquires to the Community Affairs Office, Shriver Center, 893-3500, ext. 278.

☐Sarah Chase, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Chase of 39 Nichols Road, and senior at Wheaton College, Norton, has been names to the annual dean's list there.

☐Here's an item that will make you feel that you really missed out last winter! Ann and Roger Pompeo spent several weeks at Lake Placid, New York during the Pre-Olympic games and saw the athletes, mechanics of an Olympics village, and contests without crowds or expense! The Pre-Olympics go on all winter with teams from 28 countries competing and being eliminated for the real games which will be held in February 1981 at Lake Placid. They're a "warm-up" for everybody and open to the public! That's the part you missed!

Dr. Roger Pompeo applied for and was accepted as team doctor for the U.S. Nordic (cross country) ski team. Ann says, "Roger has the job; I'm just the tag-along." She managed to find plenty to do last winter assisting Ursula Trudeau, Head of Protocol, the department responsible for assigning linguists to teams and getting them settled. Ann says, "It was very exciting. We worked long days, but were wined and dined at night!" After spending a year at Berlitz, brushing up her French, Ann hopes to find something useful to do again this winter.

She recommends that people visit Lake Placid in December and January to see and use the facilities where the Olympic competitors will bob sled, speed and figure skate, and ski, before the real games, the real crowds, and the real high admission fees! That's the part you haven't missed.

☐The Boston Zoological Society recently announced that John Thompson of Cohasset, President of Massachusetts Blue Shield, has accepted the chairmanship of the New Zoo Capital Fund Drive.

Thompson begins the challenge of raising $2.5 million from corporations, foundations and individuals with an encouraging $750,000 already in hand, which includes the gift of two lowland gorillas from the Fuller Family Foundation.

Thompson is married and has three children, John Jr., Edward K. and Sarah W. He is a trustee of the New England Aquarium, Director of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Chairman of the Board of the Boston Opera Association and has been involved in many other cultural and business associations.

At the monthly meeting of the South Shore Safety Officers League, held October 17, at Fall River, aboard the battleship U.s.S. Massachusetts the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Andrew J. Nyari, Falmouth Police Department, president; Ted Baldwin, Norwell Police Department, vice president; John J. Rhodes, III, Cohasset Police Department, treasurer-secretary.

☐May your Thanksgiving feast be bountiful and celebration fun!

A Message From The Clergy

On Thanksgiving Day

Let Thanks Come From Within

By Rev. Mitchell Jacover

As I was putting together some ideas for this article I was wondering if writing a real beautiful essay about Thanksgiving would create another false image that very few of us would actually experience. I could remind us of how Thanksgiving began, telling the story of the Pilgrims, or I could tell you to look at all the good things in your life and count your blessings. Yet when it comes right down to it, each person will care and feel for whatever they wish.

For most people Thanksgiving has become a tradition. The gathering of family and friends, the football game or other TV specials, and of course the big turkey dinner. While all of the activities of our Thanksgiving are fine in themselves and each one has its enjoyable moments they are all things that quickly become part of our past.

I remember when I was a small child I ordered one of those products advertised on a cereal box. Each day I would hurry home from school anxiously anticipating its arrival. When the toy finally arrived it turned out to be made of a cheap plastic that took me only a half hour to break.

What a disappointment! in my mind I believed the toy to be more than lifelike, something I definitely needed, and couldn't live without. As I look back on other experiences I can note time after time that what I got wasn't as good as it was made out to be.

What I have learned from those kind of experiences is something Jesus speaks of in the Bible. When confronted with people who were putting their trust in riches Jesus spoke of the difficulty they would have entering the Kingdom of God, and as his disciples marveled at who could then be saved Jesus said, "With men it is impossible, but not with God: for with God all things are possible."

The point I wish to make here is that in our modern world there are many things and situations we are exposed to on a daily basis. On many occasions these "things" can turn out just like the small toy I purchased as a child. Instead of looking for things outside of ourselves to bring fulfillment or satisfaction, I am reminded by both science and religion that life works from the inside out. If we are to bring thanksgiving into Thanksgiving, let it come from what you have inside. While the situations, holidays, and things all come and go we can remain comfortably seated in changes by recognizing they are created into the world from places within ourselves. I caution those of us who become too attached to the things and situations of life because at one point you may experience a much unneeded let down. Maybe in renewing a thanksgiving for the many things we have to use rather than own we can manage them responsibly and let go of them when the time comes.

When the Pilgrims gathered at the table of their feast they offered their thanksgiving to God. This is part of the tradition I hope we as a people never lose. Maybe for a few moments during our holiday we can gather with friends and family, close our eyes, and give thanks to the Source of all things that are possible.

My wife and I want to wish you all a beautiful Thanskgiving and pray that that which is beautiful inside each one can further manifest into the earth and be shared equally with all mankind.

God Bless You!

Consistency, Stability, Security

By Rev. Scott Newell, Jr.

Every Thanksgiving there is something to be thankful for, but it's a lot harder to be grateful for consistancy and stability and security, than it is for a new start and positive changes and growth.

That's why the Pilgrims were so thankful back in the fall of 1620. The new colony had survived the first winter's hardships and begun to develop positively. The first harvest was safely gathered in. Comfort and security seemed as close as their newly built homes and hearths, for there was food to eat and plenty of firewood to keep them warm.

Rev. Scott Newell

Cohasset Community Nazarene Church will be enthusiastically celebrating this Thanksgiving and thanking God for His abundant provision for the church's first four months.

The first service was held in the Pope Memorial building on Jerusalem Road July 8. Although we had learned only three days before that we could rent the building, 25 people attended that first service. The average attendance is about 35 now and once, when the Mansion Heirs, a singing group from Wareham, came, there were about seventy happy foot tappers in the congregation. Thanking God for His goodness.

Our God is able, and he has graciously met many of our needs. At first there was no one in the congregation to play the organ. My wife played her flute and in time God added another flute, a clarinet and guitar to accompany our singing.

But we longed for someone to play that beautiful pipe organ. We hoped, prayed, and did our best with what we had. Then one Sunday a young student guest preacher and singer visited us and that evening called and volunteered to drive 50 miles each Sunday to play the organ. All I could say was thank you Lord.

Not long after that we had another guest speaker. He stirred our hearts with his challenging message and I invited him to come back again. He agreed. But several days later he called to sayhe could not come because his new church in Pennsylvania wanted him that next Sunday. They did not want the bus he owned, however, and would I want it if he gave it to me?

Once again I said thank you Lord. Now I'm praying, Lord, send us a bus driver and I'm saying, Thank you Lord, I know you will.

The unpaid ministerial staff now includes two ordained ministers and a student assistant to serve the community along with a concerned congregation of lay ministers. We all gather to worship on Sunday and filled with His love, return to our own neighborhoods to serve God in whatever way he opens up to us.

I began my ministry 30 years ago in Wareham, Mass., in a small church. I worked hard and it grew a little and I was proud of my accomplishments. But in my heart I knew that I had not really succeeded. I pastored three more churches in Missouri and Pennsylvania without any greater success. So I became a school teacher. I still am.

But six years ago, when a small Methodist church in Wareham asked me to conduct Sunday services for them I agreed to do it for a short while. Soon they asked me to stay in the parsonage on weekends. I did my best, but since I was there so little of the time it was obvious that God was keeping His promise, "I will build my church." Attendance, finance and spiritual life fervor and harmony all increased.

My intentions in Cohasset are to let God build His church and use me any way he chooses and I will say, Thank you Lord.

St. Stephen's, the First Parish, the Second Congregational and St. Anthony's Churches joined together this Thanksgiving to raise funds for the Cambodian Children. Rev. John Benbow wrote the following Message:

For Cambodians. . . 'What Can I Do?'

By Rev. John M. Benbow

In the daily papers and on the network news, I look at the pitiful pictures of starving Cambodian children and their desperate parents. Having once held my own children in my arms, I empathize immediately with their parental love; but I cannot even imagine their desperation. I can no more conceive of it than of starvation itself.

Defensively, I turn away from the pictures, which haunt me nevertheless. I tell myself that misguided leaders and tragic events are responsible for the anguish I can't bear to see. I ask myself, "What can I do?" The question is self-defense, and I know it.

Within a matter of weeks, most of us will celebrate two holidays which must seem to the rest of the world a display of our affluence. In that period of time, we will turn our minds to thanks-giving and to the promise of peace on earth; we will speak, at least, of goodwill toward the human family.

If, like me, you've asked the self-defensive question, "What can I do?" regarding the suffering of Cambodian people, consider this: you can reduce by a tenth your expenditures for Thanksgiving and Christmas or Hannukah, and sent that tenth to your church or synagogue, labeled "Cambodian Relief."

You can be sure that it will be forwarded to one of the several agencies, ranging from CARE to UNICEF (and including the relief agencies of nearly every religious group). The agencies, in turn, will turn your money into food as quickly as they receive it.

Talk it over with your family. Would anyone miss that 10 per cent withheld from our abundance? Would we really miss 20 per cent — or even 5 per cent — of the items we'd otherwise buy? And is there any better way to celebrate those holidays intended to remind us of God's goodness and love?

A list of relief agencies was printed in last week's edition of the Mariner. Of course you may forward checks directly to any of them.

As a minister, I urged my congregation to contribute through our church as a sign of common concern, but the important thing is that each of us find some helpful answer to the question: "What can I do?" — and do it.

Thanks - Living

By Rev. Robert Campbell

Rev. Robert Campbell

Another Thanksgiving Day is upon us. What are some of the images and emotions that come to mind? Fields of golden stubble, shocks of corn like tousleheaded sentinels, orange pumpkins clustered around, clean sunlite on a nippy morning, and the realization that another harvest is in, bringing a sense of fulfillment and a feeling of well-being.

We think of tables heaped with appetizing food, and people brought together in festive family gatherings. Soon we will have full stomachs — and, I trust, full hearts. Truly, we are blest, and surely, we should be grateful.

May I suggest that the best way we can demonstrate and express our gratitude is to live a life of praise and generosity — praise to God and generosity toward our fellow human beings. We might call this "thanks-living." We not merely voice our thanks, we live it.

Mariner Editorial

Have Glimpses Of Hope

"The world is too much with us...," said William Wordsworth. And especially during the holidays when we would like to clear our minds of confounding, unhappy matters that get in the way of happy, simple thoughts.

So it seems this week. We are individually and collectively struggling to form a policy by which President Carter could deal with the Iranians. We have contributed canned goods locally or money for far away starving Cambodians. And we are nervous wrecks about everything from the MBTA to our thermostats.

Wordsworth continued in a later line..."We lay waste our powers." Indeed we do if we perpetually seek to buffet all ills outside the realm of our distant, even immediate control. When was there a holiday time, period of thankfulness and family sharing, that all the nuts and bolts of humanitarianism, justice and generosity fit together well. Last year we bemoaned Jonestown. Before that we were on pins and needles about the Egyptian/Israeli dispute.

We must remember we have celebrated Thanksgiving annually, yea, in the midst of World Wars I and II, the Korean Conflict and the Vietnam Horror. In fact, if there were no self-imposed holidays through which we allowed ourselves release from misery/despair/danger, we might never have fears allayed, even for a day.

Be thankful Thursday, not only for the bounty of your table and your lives, but because somewhere along the line we have been sharp enough to deal ourselves a day of respite. Our forebears had the perspicacity to slip in time for renewed hope, that we might suffer peace, even in passing.

From a simplistic approach, you've got a lot to be thankful for if you've got a roof over your head, leftovers in the refrigerator and a week's supply of fuel oil.

But more pleasing philosophies emanated from residents who were asked the reasons for which they'd be grateful Thursday.

People of all ages spoke of their good health, their families, their sharing together on the day as being matters that led them to bow their heads with gratitude. It was Charles Lamb who noted anyone could say grace before a groaning board laden with bountiful food. It was the truly grateful, though, he said, who gave thanks before a meal of porridge.

Many people see porridge as their theoretical fare this Thanksgiving Day. Lamb would have us appreciate that. Therefore, those with more are duty bound to rejoice proportionately. And many of us have more indeed.

What we need in addition to humble expresions of thanks is what Wordsworth requested for himself finally in the poem we have quoted. He asked that he might "Have glimpses that would make me less forlorn."

That is what we would wish for the people of Cohasset on Thanksgiving Day. Have glimpses of hope when you see your family joined round the table. Be less forlorn by knowing the year has special moments and special reasons to give thanks.

Reynolds Named Fellow

Allen (Allie) Reynolds, of Cohasset, has been nominated and named a "Fellow" of the American Society for Nondestructive Testing (ASNT).

He was installed in a ceremony at the Society's annual convention held in St. Louis, Missouri, on Oct. 15.

Mr. Reynolds is Past Chairman of the Boston section of ASNT, and is presently on the National Educational Committee. He is employed in the Quality Assurance/Nondestructive Division of Stone and Webster Engineering, in Boston.

The American Society for Nondestructive Testing is a nationally and internationally recognized engineering society, organized for the purpose of advancing scientific, engineering, and technical knowledge in the field of nondestructive testing, and materials evaluation.

The principle aims of ASNT are to promote the use of nondestructive testing (NDT), and to educate and encourage its members and nonmembers in the scientific testing and evaluation of materials and components.

In addition, the Society sponsors various educational and technical programs nationally, and in the local area. The Society publishes a national magazine called Materials Evaluation to help promote the science of nondestructive testing. For additional information call Mr. Reynolds in Boston at 973-0813.

More specifically, a nondestructive test is an examination of an object or material in any manner which will not impair its future usefulness.

Mr. Reynolds has been a Cohasset resident since joining Stone and Webster five and a half years ago, moving here from Boulder, Colorado with his wife, Helen, and their five children. He was formerly employed by the Dow Chemical Company.

"SPIRIT" TROPHIES, voted by team members at the recent Booster Association banquet, were awarded to: Scott Benbow, boys' cross country; Mary Jo Mahoney, girls' cross country; Bob Gunville, football; Pam Johnson, girls' soccer; Craig Langford, boys' soccer and Janet England, girls' field hockey.

Village Shop Talk

By Larry Fone

Many of the shops in the village are selling tickets for the Cohasset House Tour and the Christmas party at the Lothrop House.

Don't miss these two holiday events.

Shoppers — note! There will be extended shopping hours in the village, harbor and 3-A stores for your holiday convenience.

Special hours for the men in the family will be announced shortly, with participating stores serving refreshments.

Cohasset Garden Club aprons and tote bags are available in selected shops. Handsome hand-screened graphics on natural-color fabrics. Nice, usable gifts with a special Cohasset motif.

Christmas cards are also available of the Cohasset Common, other special Cohasset gifts will also be available shortly.

The Cohasset Historical Society had a successful dinner-lecture meeting last Thursday with about 100 people attending. The lecture on "Collectibles" was just great with slides showing the aray of items that have become available because of the specific interest of collectors.

Any of you folks in town who would like to join the Cohasset Historical Society please contact Connie Parker, Parker Ave. The membership dues are modest and you will enjoy the many interests and activities of this fine group.

Enjoy Thanksgiving with family and friends and for any shopping needs . . .

Don't be fuelish — shop locally!.

Weil Decision

The board of appeals recently granted Susan Weil of 619 Jerusalem Road special permits for the construction of a porch and a French drainage system at that address.

In its findings the board found that the proposed drainage system and porch met all the requirements of the zoning code, and did not derogate from the purposes of the flood plain and watershed protection district or the purposes of the bylaw.

Harbor Workshop Wednesday

The Cohasset Harbor Study Committee has announced plans for a workshop meeting Nov. 28, 8 p.m. at Town Hall.

Charles Fink, chairman of the harbor study committee, said the purpose of the workshop is to acquaint the public with the recently initiated master plan program.

Representatives of local boards, groups interested in the harbor and Federal and State officials have been invited to attend.

The committee is utilizing a grant from the Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management Program to carry out the study. Anderson-Nichols, a Boston consulting firm, has been engaged as the Committee's master plan consultants.

Fink noted this would be the first of four workshops to be scheduled over the next six months. The first workshop has two purposes: to outline the scope of the study and to solicit ideas from those in attendance about major areas to be addressed.

The committee is desirous of utilizing an open planning process. Subsequent workshops will cover reviews of the initial studies of the consultants and alternative plans to improve the use of both water areas and adjacent land areas.

Over the years a number of ideas and plans have been put forth for increasing the number of moorings, developing marina facilities, improving traffic circulation, expanding parking, preserving the historic character of the harbor and implementing other improvements. The committee will be weighing such ideas along with those generated by the public at large and the consultants to the committee.

Explorer Scouts Always On The Scene

THEN AND NOW — Explorer Scouts learning first-hand how to be emergency medical assistants. 1971 or thereabouts.

By Karin Bartow

If you are between the ages of 14 and 21, in good scholastic standing, and interested in belonging to a co-ed youth group with medical service, high adventure, and recreational activities, read on.

The 11-year old Cohasset Explorer Post 28 is such an organization and is looking for new members to join them anytime.

The Post is sponsored by the Rotary Club and is registered with the BSA (Boy Scouts of America), however, members need no prior scouting experience. They are dedicated to emergency medical service and have just begun a first aid course to train Explorers to carry on with their tradition of assistance during local emergency.

Mark Trask, a former Explorer and currently E.M.T. with the Cohasset Fire Dept., is instructing the first aid course. The 12 Post members, led by the President, Robert Lindsay and guided by Advisor, Arthur Lehr, Jr., meet at the Joseph Osgood School at 7:30 p.m. every 2nd and 4th Sunday of the month.

As a medical emergency backup team, Explorers are always on standby and linked to one another by a telephone chain for quick mobilization during emergencies. During last winter's fire on Jerusalem Road, they manned their field kitchen trailer dispensing hot coffee to firefighters. They assisted near their homes during the Blizzard of '78.

Members are certified and actively participate, when needed, in lost person searches, water rescue, first aid, traffic accidents, C.P.R., and forest fires.

When Cohasset acquired its first ambulance and subsequently trained firefighters in E.M.T. (emergency medical training), their reliance on Explorers lessened, although they are still called upon for assistance. Before the ambulance came, however, there were many touch and go situations, according to Lehr.

Explorers were always on the scene of auto accidents; one young man tried to save the life of a man who collapsed in church. Many former Explorers have gone on to save many lives as nurses, E.M.T.'s, and medical corpsmen in the armed services.

Not all do, but the experience of leadership, community service, outdoorsmanship, and social activities, all combine to give these young men and women valuable training for adult life.

In addition to their theme of medical service, the Explorers also participate in many outdoor activities, such as hiking, camping, biking, canoeing, and sports.

They sponsor dances, ice skating and ice fishing parties, and other social events and every year in May, organize a very popular Road Rally. The Rally, which operates out of the Music Circus, is a 50-mile mini-course that requires accuracy skills of the young drivers. Sheldon Ripley assists as the Road Rally Master.

The Explorers have also underwritten "Operation I.D." for years. This project encourages people to mark their personal items with special marking pens (available from Post 28) so that they can be easily identified in the event they are stolen.

There is a great deal of service Explorers give to their community and a whole lot they gain from the experience. If you are interested in participating in this program, call Arthur Lehr, Jr. at 383-0388.

Village Xmas Fair

By O.F. Ingram

Children will once again be Very Important Persons at Cohasset's Village Fair on Saturday, Dec. 1, with many attractions appealing particularly to youngsters in buildings around Cohasset Common that day.

The Village Fair is the annual cooperative church benefit which this year for the first time involves all four of the Village churches — St. Stephen's Episcopal, St. Anthony's Catholic, First Parish Unitarian and Second Congregational.

It will run from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in the Town Hall, Congregational Church, Unitarian Parish House and the Community Center, with the Village Fair Dinner in St. Stephen's in the evening.

Center of attraction for younger children will be on the Common itself where Santa Claus will again hold court, listening to the hearts' desires of a line of tots as they come before him. Snow or no, Santa will be there through arrangements made by Mrs. Donald F. Steele and her assistants. In case of inclement weather, Santa will move indoors.

Lending a festive air to the entire Village Fair scene, with scores of people moving from one building to another, will be balloon vendors under the direction of Mrs. Louis H. Conklin.

As popular as Santa Claus, but attracting a slightly older clientele will be the Children's Midway in the Community Center. There a group of enthusiastic pitch men under the direction of Clifford Mitman, will operate a number of games of skill that always find waiting lines of prospective young customers.

Popular, too, with the younger set will be the Bargain Bazaar which attracts bargain hunters of all ages to the vestry of the Second Congregational Church which each year is filled with used but still useful items. Mrs. Gordon M. Stevenson, Jr. and her committee have been collecting these items for weeks and still expect a flood of new deliveries in the days before the Fair.

Of interest to mothers and grandmothers will be the items on sale at the children's table in the Town Hall. Here they will find dolls of all types, toys, novelties and children's clothing. These have been crafted and assembled by a group headed by Mrs. Robert Ciciotte.

To satisfy young appetites, Philip Shockman and a staff of volunteers will provide endless hot dogs and soft drinks at a snack bar in the Town Hall, and Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Hobson will again be turning out hot buttered popcorn from their colorful popcorn cart.

Along with grown-ups, children will be eagerly awaiting the drawing of prizes in the raffle at about 2 p.m. in the Town Hall. Prizes will be headed by a television set and include dinners at popular local restaurants and items donated by local businesses.

John Mullet has made arrangements and solicited donations for the raffle and tickets are being sold through the following church representatives: Mr. William D. Ditmar, St. Anthony's; Mrs. Donald Sisson, Congregational; Mrs. Roger Nast, Episcopal; and Mrs. Michael Bliss, Unitarian.

Art Center Party

Plans are now underway and reservations are being taken for a Christmas party to take place at 5:30 Sunday, Dec. 9 at the South Shore Art Center. The gala event will be the Center's first fundraising activity of the year and the proceeds will benefit the Scholarship Fund. The party promises to provide everyone with delicious food, outstanding entertainment, and terrific prizes.

Donations for the evening will be $2.75 per person and tickets will be available at the door. Those who wish to participate in the International Pot Luck Supper must bring a culinary specialty of their own choosing and should call the Art Center in advance to inform us of their contribution and to reserve their places at a table.

With background music by the "Pro Arte Singers," the charming atmosphere of the Center, and the company of artists, art lovers, and all who enjoy cultural events, the evening will be a memorable beginning of the holiday season and of the fundraising efforts of the Art Center.

Congregational Fair

By Geraldine Ainslie

The Beechwood Congregational Church of 53 Church St. will hold its Holly Fair Dec. 1, from 10-3 p.m.

Once again the members and friends of the Beechwood Church have been busy preparing for the fair.

On Wednesday evenings the ladies have been making ornaments and fancy work. The smell of peppermint, anise, clove, lemon, lime, spearmint, wintergreen and orange fills the kitchen as our beach glass candy is being made.

Everyone must come and enjoy a bowl of our famous fish chowder made under the supervision of Connie Jones which will be held from 11-1 p.m. For those who don't find fish chowder to their liking a variety of sandwiches will be available.

Judy O'Donovan is in charge of fried bread dough which will be served in the morning. Coffee, tea, cold drinks and donuts will be available throughout the day from Ruth Mitchell.

For the children there is Santa's Chimney filled with grabs, Ruth Wagner in charge. A Children's Table filled with the wants and desires of any child's heart, Janice and Charlene Turner in charge.

Last but not least Santa will be there at 2 p.m. to talk and listen to your child.

Displayed on a Christmas tree will be hand made ornaments, Barbara Campbell and Bobbie Richardson will be more than happy to help choose the ornaments right for your tree.

The fancy work table displays the creative talents of all church members, May Merritt in charge. Homemade cakes, candies, cookies and pies will be on sale at our food table. Members of our Ladies Aid Society will help you "bake" for Christmas.

Our candy table under the direction of Helen Lincoln will display our famous Beach Glass Candy as well as fudge and other sweets.

A variety of plants will be on sale and Miss Marion Ellis will help you choose the plant just right for your window.

Everyone's favorite table is the White Elephant Table, where it is not uncommon to find that certain something you have been looking for. Emma Damon and Grace Mitchell will be in charge.

A silent auction table will display a variety of items. Take a chance — a little could get you a lot, Jeanita Burnside will be there to help you.

And every Christmas Fair would not be complete without fresh green wreathes on sale.

Looking forward to seeing you on Dec. 1st between 10 and 3 p.m.

History Of

Walter Sweeney, Richard Silvia, Clark Chatterton, and Bernard Mulchahey.

The football teams were coached by Evie Dorr, who was undoubtably the most famous and beloved man in C.H.S. history. Dorr coached from 1949 to 1968 when Frank Almeida took over the coaching reins. In 1968, there was a major shakeup in the then Mayshore League.

The Skippers were placed in the South Shore League with their rival Hull as well as Hanover, Norwell, Middleboro, Holbrook, Abington, East and West Bridgewater, Apponoquet, and Marshfield.

This didn't bother the CHS fans, but the league ruled that the Skippers were to play Marshfield on Thanksgiving Day. This sent a great many townies through the roof and to this day that judgment is being petitioned.

From 1968 onward Frank Almeida led the Skippers against Marshfield in an uphill battle which nobody got too excited about. Thanksgiving, in a way, came earlier in the season against Hull in those years.

Finally in 1972 after Marshfield trounced the Skippers 34-0, the league officials realized changes had to be made. Marshfield, West Bridgewater and Apponquet were moved into the Mayflower League which left the South Shore League like it is today.

Unfortunately, to the protest of many CHS fans, Hull wished to keep on playing Holbrook. Hull claimed they developed a good rivalry with Holbrook while Cohasset suffered with Marshfield.

At this time many townspeople suspected that Hull enjoyed beating Holbrook, (the doormat of the South Shore League) on Thanksgiving and were in fact running away from the real competition. To this day the big game of the season is coming early for CHS fans.

When Marshfield left the league Cohasset began playing Duxbury. In 1973 under the guidance of Goose Goslin the Skippers lost. In 1974 Coach Henderson took over. The Skippers lost again in '74 but under the rebuilding powers of Coach Henderson the Skippers won in '75 and '76. In 1977 under the tutelage of Dennis Walsh the Skippers won again.

Last year the Skippers lost a heart-breaker. They were behind 7-0 with two minutes left. With all their might the men in blue pushed but were held on Duxbury's 2 yard line. That game tied the series at three apiece. This year under head coach John Leone the Skippers are looking ahead for a big victory, to move one up on the Green Dragons.

The winner of the game will be awarded the Duxbury Police Association Trophy and Vinnie Clifford of Cohasset News also sponsors a M.V.P. Trophy.

PREDICTION

The game will be played in Duxbury this year at 10:00 a.m. The Skippers have been concentrating on this game for the better half of the season and I'm sure there will be a capacity crowd. This sportswriter's prediction for the Turkey Day classic is Skippers 12, Green Dragons 8. Let's make sure that Cohasset is well represented at the game.

Holiday Game

upper stands where the fathers of the players congregate.

In analyzing the yearbook statistics more closely, there began to emerge an apparent correlation between games lost and the success of the players after graduation. That is, the more games lost in one's senior years the more successful the future life participant. After all, figures don't lie, suffering pays off!

For example, in the years 1973 through 1979, Cohasset had three head coaches, several assorted principals and superintendents, and a won-lost record of 14 and 43. All of which resulted in sending 10 senior players to further gridiron glory at Middlebury, Colby, Bowdoin, BU, URI, U.Maine, and Mass. Mari-

Bills Sign Keating

By Chet Ellis

On Nov. 25 one of our hometown boys made good in returning to the gladiator stage to do battle with our local heros — the New England Patriots.

Chris Keating, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Keating of Stevens Lane and the Cohasset Post Office, has signed a contract as a linebacker with the Buffalo Bills professional football team.

As a squeaky-clean rookie, he is in charge of "sticking" running backs, "bumping" wide receivers and "plugging" holes in the line.

After his first training year he will be given a nickname such as "Kruncher, Killer or Krazy," and given additional responsibilities such as blitzing, quarterback disablement, and shown how to perform undetectable cheap shots.

A standout defensive player at the University of Maine, Chris is now 6'3", weighs 235 lbs. and prefers to be called Mr. Keating, with a smile of course.

I'm sure we all wish Mr. Keating the best of luck in Saturday's game and in his new career as a gladiator.

Duck & Deer Hunters Abound

Now that the fall sports are coming to an end and the winter sports have not yet begun, the main sport around town is duckhunting.

I strongly suggest you not wear your duck costume around Lily Pond, the Scituate Grades of the Beechwood River now that duck season is in full swing.

For the first time in a while there are three split seasons, the second of which (Nov. 2-25) is in full tilt now. The third is Dec. 28 to Jan. 12.

There are quite a few high school age duckhunters including Bruce Maynard and Bob Healy who are tracking down deer in Maine this week with Bruce's father.

Also noted for duck shooting abilities are Brian Cogil, Rick Barrows, Matt Brown and Chip Figuredo. These hunters are very skilled but it is unlikely they will ever outshoot such living legends as Dick Barrows, Sheldon Sladen and the unstoppable Frank Jason.

State Ethics Prepares Legislation

The State Ethics Commission at its Nov. 14 meeting authorized its staff to prepare legislation providing for public disclosure of certain interests and associations by key local officials. The Commission's proposal is in response to a specific mandate from the Legislature.

The legislation, if enacted, would become effective in 1981 and would require key elected and appointed officials in municipal government to make public the following information:

— Associations with businesses and non-profit organizations
— Gifts, honoraria and reimbursements received from those who do business with their city or town
— Interests in real estate
— Debts owed to, or forgiven by, those doing business with their city or town.

Under the Commission's proposal, officials would not be required to disclose personal financial information such as income and securities. The Commission's proposal also makes special provisions for officials who serve in a volunteer or part-time capacity.

Women At Work

Dear Nina,

We enjoy reading "Women at Work" and especially liked the start your own business column since we are two of those women who chose to start a business rather than punch in from 9 to 5.

For the women who want part-time work for personal stimulation or extra income, the current job market doesn't have much to offer. Education and experience play a very small part in seeking part-time employment unless you have a specialized field. Inflation has forced too many women into jobs below their educational level paying only minimum wage. To overcome these difficulties we have chosen to become self-employed by starting "Serendipity," a catering service for people who want to entertain but don't have the time to cook themselves.

We decided to take the plunge after so many requests for help with menus and party planning. As a result, the step to a professional service business was an easy one. We realize the difficulties we have yet to face but we'll take your advice and "persevere."

Sincerely,
Jan Fossella and
Susan Sack
Marshfield

Author's note:

Emerson graduate Jan Fossella learned the art of hospitality as a flight attendant and has for years entertained large numbers of people at her home. She founded a gourmet dinner group eight years ago which is still in existence and was a member of the Scituate Gourmet Guild.

Susan Sack has cooked for N.Y. Times food critic Craig Claiborne and was delighted to find her dinner written up in his column.

Their partnership is enhanced by the special abilities of each. Susan, a former Miss Connecticut and T.V. personality, brings enthusiasm and style to the sales endeavor. Jan is a business degree candidate at Northeastern University and explores market trends and cost accounting for their business.

Both women feel their special touch and experience offers the harried hostess a break from the responsibilities of entertaining.

Their offerings include hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, casseroles, soups, vegetarian and ethnic specialties, desserts and menu and wine suggestions. They are willing to cook your specialties to order, will prepare and serve in your home. Also offered are frozen foods for the freezer.

A Relative Thanksgiving

By Lois Martin

Among Thanksgiving's achievements is its ability to gather distant relatives around the dining room table with the rest of the family.

It's seldom those "uncles-by-marriage" or "father's second cousins" come out of the woodwork to celebrate with the regular relatives. Distant relatives often live in far-flung places or they'd not have been so uncommon a sight in the living room to begin with.

Surely you remember those seemingly unrelated strangers when you first met them. You were introduced, told of the relationship, and kinship was established. There has always been a proclivity to base a family tie through physical resemblance with a better known, closer relative. If the barely remembered kin has your mother's dimpled chin, or even your grandfather's ruddy cheeks, you felt somewhat closer to the person immediately.

Often, though, I've noticed distant relatives don't have the same habits their cousins or their grand nieces do. But they shared one thing in common. All of them seemed intriguing. They had different lifestyles and manners about them than my direct aunts or grandparents seemed to conduct.

I remember Aunt Hattie. But for the life of me I don't recall exactly through what relationship she was "aunt." She was somehow connected to my father's side of the family. And our lives overlapped only for a few years. From my point of view, mightily limited in scope, she was a very, very old woman with snow white hair and a cane, who always was sitting down in Aunt Ruth's kitchen chair. Indeed I never saw Aunt Hattie standing up. Clearly the woman had more of a viable impression to offer but she was faced with leaving her mark on too young a life when her own was so advanced.

Then there was Uncle Jim from the same side of the family. I really liked him. He was jocular, always had time to jest with his small grand-grand (?) nieces and nephews.

I learned something from Uncle Jim. He lived in New York or somewhere I never expected to go and asked me if I'd like to go with him. I assured him I would, that I could be ready in a matter of minutes. This immediate acceptance of his hospitality regaled Uncle Jim and other relatives. They laughed while I packed. And it was with some disappointment, year after year, that I came to recognize Jim was joking while I was dead serious.

Gussie was on my mother's side. She was a proper woman with a grown daughter who came home a lot. Now and then we would call on Aunt Gussie to share the spirit of family and holidays together.

And it was in her parlor I first encountered a fruit cake that made my eyes water. As I said, Gussie, in my mind, was demure, orderly and endowed with a strong sense of propriety. But her fruit cake was laced with brandy, something I hadn't encountered in any form and found more than I could handle with raisins, citrus and nuts.

Aunt Essie and Uncle Carrol, again from the maternal part of my parent's merger, were most endearing. They, too, were well along in years when I knew them. Uncle Carroll had a car dealership. They drove a handsome vehicle, and could be seen pulling in the driveway in their grand car.

Aunt Essie was forever cloaked in her mink cape. Seems to me Uncle Carroll was topped by a straw hat, which he was swift, ever gentlemanly, to remove in deference to any number of people.

Mind you, I saw them through the eyes of a child. And Essie made a lasting impression on me with her nail polish. Her hands were freckled, attractive, I thought, and roundishly soft. On her nails was a genteel shade of peach/pink. To this day, and I've been looking, I haven't been able to find the polish shade that was so becoming on Aunt Essie.

This dear couple was later to shoot out across the Dennys River in Maine while in an auto. They'd been parked by a restaurant in a lot that overlooked the river. Aunt Essie was driving and she inadvertantly accelerated forward when she should have been in reverse.

The car plomped down on the river, commenced to flow downstream as the oranges from their grocery bags drifted beside the car. A man fishing on a nearby bank saw the couple and saved them. Later that day Uncle Carroll would say that he and Essie were thinking of joining the circus.

Heck, I've made no mention of Louise and Red, two Faiths or distant cousin Mary Whitney. But this is the season I remember them all fondly. They were part of earlier Thanksgivings. There's a new batch of distant relatives now leaving their marks on young people.

And the minute I find that peach/pink polish, I'll know I've left a lifetime impression on a small distant kin.

Electrical Firms Merge

Two electrical firms have combined forces in Whitman to offer a broad range of services in power tools and electric motors.

Handyman Power Tools, formerly of Marshfield, and Blanchard Electric, Inc., are now operating out of Blanchard's building at 384 South Ave. (Rt. 27), Whitman.

Joseph Daniels of Marshfield operates Handyman, specializing in power tool repair for commercial and industrial users.

A master tool technician for 20 years, he was with the Skil Co. for 14 years as manager of a service center. He also worked for Blanchard Electric before starting his own company.

Blanchard Electric has been in the business of repairing and rebuilding industrial motors for 16 years, servicing units as large as 200 horsepower. They also retail Skil, Black & Decker, Powermatic, Dayton and Makita tool lines; Michigan abrasives; and tool bits, blades, and accessories. And they manufacture sump pumps.

In the year since Blanchard Electric has been owned by Donald E. Rust of Scituate the company has increased its sales by 50 percent.

Handyman services major power tool brands for several major retail firms, as well as for individual owners.

The new association of Handyman and Blanchard provides a combined service, while retaining individual ownership of the two companies.

Rockland Credit Union Elections

Edward Lylyveld of Plymouth was re-elected President of the Rockland Credit Union at the organization's 57th annual meeting at the Rockland main office.

Hobart A. Capen of Hanover was re-elected vice president; Joseph V. Forti of Norwell, treasurer and Robert P. Forti of Marshfield, assistant treasurer.

The Rockland Credit Union has assets in excess of $121,000,000 and more than 58,000 active accounts.

Shareholders re-elected five directors for three-year terms: Vice President Capen, President Lylyveld, Mark Lelyveld, Atty. Paul F,X. Moriarty and J. Richard Young.

Ralph J. Lordi and Dr. William E. Perrault were elected for two-year terms to fill unexpired terms caused by the resignations of former directors Henry B. Stanley and Robert L. Tedeschi.

Named to the credit committee were David C. Bond, Atty. Morris M. Lelyveld, and Lawrence B. Shearer.

Auditing committee members are Ernest J. Bourque, Mr. Capen, and Atty. Moriarty.

Advertising committee members are Mr. Bond, Robert P. Forti, and Mark Lelyveld.

Other members of the board of directors are Norman C. Poole, Mary M. Skatoff, and honorary members Joseph Ingle and Mr. Stanley.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

In no way can I be considered an authority on stovetop cooking, for ours is a home that is yet to be graced with a wood-burning stove. After visiting our oldest son in his new home in Rowe where the kettle was steaming and turnips doing a slow boil on one of their four stoves, I think it would be rather cozy. It would also give me great satisfaction to boycott Arabian oil in my own little way. Unfortunately, my husband isn't ready to make the switch, so I've turned to others to find out how they use their coal or wood stoves for cooking.

It seems a steaming kettle is a must to keep the air humid and Diane Valenti offers a tip that came via Kathy Kuss, suggesting the addition of cinnamon or vanilla to the water for a fragrance that permeates the air. Pat Roy, manager of the Marshfield realty office of Jack Conway & Co., says the idea is recommended in one of their brochures, advising that the aroma of bread baking in the oven and kettle of herbs (rosemary has an especially lovely fragrance), steaming on the stove top, has helped sell more than one house.

Susan McCarthy often has something simmering the day away on her wood stove. Their stove not only provides heat for the downstairs but chicken cacciatore, spaghetti sauce and stews combine with fragrance of bread rising near the warm stove and make their's a place to scurry home to on a grey November day.

Rita Dunbar has a coal stove that her husband feeds each morning and again around dinner time. Last summer he built a bin in their garage and bought two tons of coal. The downstairs is warm and the gas stove idle while a stew is readying for the evening meal. To two pounds of stew beef, Rita was adding everything but the proberbial kitchen sink — six qts. of water, seasonings, celery, tops and all and later in the day, potatoes, carrots and other vegetables would be added to the nourishing brew.

Talk about coming full circle! The Pilgrim women cooked their first Thanksgiving dinner over a wood fire and here we are, learning to live without the little luxuries we have grown up with and must now sacrifice in the energy crunch. Another of our sons discovered a baked beans recipe in a magazine called 'Alaska'. Your favorite beans can be baked on an indoor or outdoor fire in a coffee pot. For the best beans we've ever served in our house, we used an eight-cup Revere Ware percolator (minus the insides, of course) and steamed the pea beans on the back burner of our electric stove. When done, the remaining ingredients were added and the beans simmered away until dinner time. At least we contributed a little something to energy savings by not having our oven going all day.

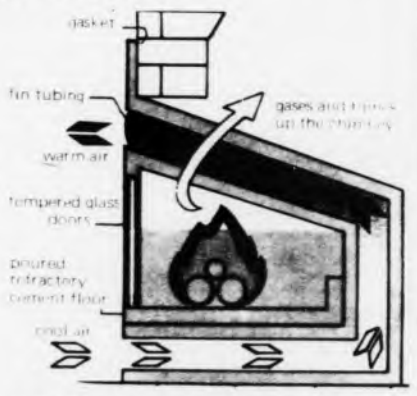
Perhaps after tommorrow's feast we'll all be ready for a bowl of hot soup come the weekend and this could simmer on top of your wood stove, filling the air with mouth watering smells.

LENTIL SOUP

1 c. lentils, washed and drained
2 qts. water
1 small hambone
4 carrots, cut up
1 bay leaf
1 stalk celery
2 potatoes, peeled and cubed
6 frankfurters, thinly sliced



Place lentils in large saucepan with water, ham bone, carrots, bay leaf, celery and potatoes. Cook 1 hour, or until lentils are tender. Add frankfurters. Season to taste. Serves 6 to 8.

Happy Thanksgiving!

Judge To Act Friday

Pre-Trial Hearing Concludes On Feola Case

Wareham District Court Judge Dennis Colari will act Friday on motions filed in the case of Randolph Feola, Jr.

Feola is facing charges of driving to endanger, one count of possession of a dangerous weapon (a stilleto), failure to keep to the right of the road and several moving violations, on May 8, 1979.

At Tuesday's pre-trial hearing, David Peckerman, 25, a warehouseman from Braintree and Miriam Sciarappa, a bar maid at Jimmie's Irish Lounge in Hull, corraborated Feola's testimony that he was not drunk as charged.

Last week Cohasset special police officer Lawrence Ainslie, testified that Hull Police Officer Peter Treanor was unfairly biased against Feola.

Feola's attorney, Thomas Hensley of Brockton, asked the court to surpress the motion for the reason of no probably cause.

Atty. Hensley said Treanor had no power to arrest because he had dropped out of the police academy after injuring his foot.

"The statute requires police officers to be trained," he said.

Asst. Dist. Atty. John Rogers noted that testimony which the pre-trial hearing produced "has been quite contradictory. To believe the defendent would be to believe the police force framed someone. I suggest probable cause for arrest. During the course of arrest a knife was found. I ask that you deny the defendent's motion."

Last week Judge Colari continued for one year without a finding charges made July 21 against Feola for driving to endanger and driving under the influence of alcohol.

Feola had been involved in a one-car accident on Atlantic Avenue July 21 when he was arrested by Hull police. He was found lying on the ground next to his van which had crashed into a utility pole.

Feola must make restitution for the utility pole that he hit July 21. In addition, Judge Colari requested that Feola complete a driver education course as a condition for the continuance.

Cohasset selectmen suspended Feola from the Cohasset force without pay following the July 21 incident.

When Peckerman, Feola's cellmate of May 8, arrived at Wareham Court this past Tuesday to testify, court officers arrested him on two default warrants: one for speeding and one for child support.

Santa Comes To Town... ...In A Twinkle

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Some now say they never saw him come through the door of the Log & Line last Saturday morning. In a twinkle he was just there... having coffee at a back table with the coffee shop's regulars.

Others claim to have seen him on the beach, at Watson's Hardware Store...Dependable Cleaners...driving down Nichols Road in a green Rabbit. But obviously he couldn't have been all those places at once, Saturday. Or could he be?

This is the kind of story that tries a reporter's mind.

Luckily, I just happened to be at the Post Office Saturday morning collecting the mail, when I saw the crowd gathering at the Line. The adrenalin went through my body. Something was happening over there — and there wasn't another reporter in the whole town, except maybe Jim Kuhn, advertising manager for Boston Magazine. But I knew he couldn't break this story as fast as I could.

Upon entering the Line Santa's eyes immediately caught hold of mine — and he conscripted me into service — taking down the wishes, dreams and Christmas desires of residents.

School Committee Vice Chairman Frank England asked for "A four percent budget including energy," Jack Karle wanted a five handicap, while Clark Chatterton asked for a year-round license for the Music Circus. "Ho Ho" Santa said to Chatterton's request.

George McCullough wants a "Winning football team for Cohasset," while Ed Andresen said he would be happy to have all the hostages home from Iran.

William J. Smith, Thomas Geary and Jack Buckley all asked for peace on earth and to have the hostages brought home from Iran. While wise guy Ed Goff wants the weekly advertising rate to go down in the Mariner.

AG Files Against Town For Violation Of Permits

Late last Wednesday the Attorney General's office filed a suit against the Town in Suffolk Superior Court for its violation of State and Federal permits and the National Clean Waters Act.

How quickly the Attorney General will expedite that suit is anyone's guess. But Ann Rogers, Attorney in the A.G.'s office, said Cohasset has been in violation of permits since 1977.

"It will be up to the judge. Basically we're asking for an injunction against the Town. The Town will have 20 days from last week (Wednesday) to answer our charges," she said.

Advised Town officials had more or less decided to wait until April to act, Atty. Rogers said she felt the Town would have to act on the matter within a month or two.

She felt evidence against the Town would be determined an "open and shut case" by Suffolk Superior Court. If a judge were to grant an injunction, the Town would have to adhere to a schedule to deal with its effluent problems.

Sold That They Need Sewage—But How Much??

Approximately 30-35 town officials met two days before Thanksgiving to discuss sewage plant options and a direction for the town.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark took a quick poll of those present and was surprised to find that not one wished to hold a special town meeting on the question before April Annual Town Meeting — in spite of the A.G.'s threat to take immediate action against the town.

Assistant Town Counsel Murray McLaughlin said "This really is a sewage problem, not a legal problem. There's plenty of time to come up with a good plan." A majority of officials seemed to agree.

Many town officials expressed their desire to have a citizens committee with a broader scope then site selection. Some said they wished to have the committee consider new sites, study areas of the town to be sewered, and questioned the need for the town to sewer commercial areas.

JONES LAND SITE?

William Montuori, sewer commission chairman, noted that one additional possible sewage plant site had come to the foreground at a commissioner's meeting.

The late Paul Jones left 27 acres to the town almost directly across from the school lands — also under consideration for a plant site.

Montuori said in a recent phone interview that unless the conservation commission, the trust of which the land has been left to, voted to release the land for sewerage use, Montuori would not advise studying the use for a site.

He added that the sewer commissioners had also asked town counsel to research a legal way of obtaining the school lands abutting the Music Circus — over the school committee's vote — because "I feel a water site won't fly." He added that the Jones land might be a possible inland alternative.

In order for the Jones land to be considered as an alternative site the conservation commission would have to vote to turn it back to the town, and agree that it was not needed for conservation purposes.

A two thirds vote of town meeting could then transfer control of the land to the sewer commissioners, after which a two thirds vote of the state legislature would be needed to legalize the two previous actions.

John Hubbard of the conservation commission said he felt that not all sites had been investigated. When he asked why Beechwood to the Scituate line was planned for sewerage in the first phase, Sewer Commissioner Lot Bates said Cushing Plaza had extensive ground water problems.

Later in the week a phone check with Craig Swain of Crown Investments, owner of Cushing Plaza, said that Crown had invested $20,000 total in sewer expenditures and there hadn't been a problem in the area for some time.

Bates said commissioners had records of systems failing, repaired systems failing. Montuori said that a fecal show occurs in water testing throughout the town.

Planning Board Chairman Pat Facey advised that the town look into water conservation: "Many communities across the country are doing so and building smaller systems."

But Montuori said the town has a general ground water problem. "You could put a tea cup a day into a system and it would fail."

Frank Sampson, Metcalf and Eddy Engineer, said the quantity of water was only a part of the effective cost. "Whether the town eliminates certain areas or not (for sewering) would not change the basic steps the town must take." Sampson said sludge treatment and pipes were the biggest cost factors. "When contractors know they will hit rock and hardpan surface they know that will produce a higher cost."

Thomas Burke of the advisory committee complained commissioners had offered the town few site choices.

Sewer Commissioner John Hobbs said commissioners are reasonably optimistic at this time as a result of a resolution at the Oct. 22 special town meeting that the town watns sewerage.

"If we turn the subject lose again, we could be back much further than we are. I feel the real question is the site."

Facey said he felt people needed more information regarding operational costs.

Sampson said the town needs a one half million gallon plant to serve areas in trouble at present. He said the engineers recommended the town to use its money more cost-effectively. "It would be wise to invest in a one million gallon plant now," he said.

School Committeewoman Diana Kornet said she felt the commissioners had not effectively educated the public, and suggested methods.

"Much of what you advocate has been done," Hobbs said.

Sampson said the sewering or non-sewering of 3-A would not effect the size of the plant. Under state mandate, the town must anticipate a need to expand to 1 M gallons, Sampson said.

School Committeeman Frank England said "I feel we're sold that we need sewerage. But I don't know how much we need. I feel the town meeting needs to be re-educated on the problem right at the town meeting. I feel commissioners should address the problem.

Clark noted that the sewer commissioners were attempting to meet with the Attorney General's office early in December in order to try to stave off litigation.

Although town officials appeared excited by Sampson's statement that the town would need $1.4 M minimum of its own funds to respond to immediate effluent problems, Sampson added he was not sure it would solve the planning problems which the state has mandated that the town prepare for.

"Nor would the $1.4 M solution include dealing with the septage situation which exists in the town."

Mary Jeannette On Pay Raise

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull) announced today that she had filed legislation for the 1980 legislative session which would put state representatives back in Job Group 19. All legislators were once included in this Group of the State Civil Service salary structure as late as 1976.

At that time, the legislature voted to remove itself from any salary structure and vote on their pay raises separately. In light of the huge pay raises voted for themselves and other state government officials as recently as last month, Rep. Murray believes this current legislative pay structure is not working.

"If we vote to put ourselves back into the state pay scale then what happened last month will never happen again," sa[illegible] Representative. "Out[illegible]ld occur the same way every other state employee's does, on an annual, graduated basis.

"There are certain pay limitations built into the state pay structure that just do not exist if we continue voting on our own raises," Mary Jeanette continued.

Rep. Murray concluded, "I do not feel there is anything incorrect about legislator's receiving pay raises. What I do object to, and the reason I am filing this legislation, is the manner in which we obtained raises this year.

We should receive our raises in the same manner as all other state employees and that means putting ourselves into the State's Civil Service salary structure."

Request For Patrolman On Spring Budget

The Village and Harbor Association's request for a foot patrolman will be budgeted for next Spring, but Police Chief Randolph Feola told selectmen he doesn't see any urgent need for an extra man at the present time.

"I go through the village several times at night — There's no big necessity for a patrol — maybe in the summer months." He added that response time to calls was still in the vicinity of 1-3 minutes and that police auxiliaries are used on the weekends, but mainly to deter car thefts in the town parking lot.

"If I had an extra man at present he wouldn't be earning his keep."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he felt an extra man might be warranted because there was now more activity in the village area with two liquor establishments and community center activities.

But Feola again stressed that he hadn't seen the need himself.

"It would be ideal to have a man in the plaza, the village and the square. But you people talk to the advisory board as well as I do. If I haven't got the money I can't do it. When we chase them out they come out some other place."

However, the Chief said he would put a man in there as often as possible.

When Laugelle complained about the parking situation in the village and said the police department was not tagging vehicles, Feola said: "That's the trouble with Cohasset. Everyone wants law enforcement for someone else.

"In what way has any parking escal[illegible]ed accidents, injury? We hardly have any accidents at all. If you read the daily newspapers you'll see we're doing pretty well. We've got a good system now.

"The reason people run to the malls is because they can park. If we start nabbing them they'll park where they won't be nabbed."

Editorial Faux Pas

The Bride Wore Slime Green

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Most subscribers read the news first, detour to advertising, catch a feature or two, see what's happening in a once-over scan of the Mariner.

Advertising salespeople read advertising. They seldom know what the news is — but they can tell you the column inch of every ad in their own newspaper and everybody else's newspaper.

Publishers read everything. They catch crooked lines, holes, all kinds of mistakes. Consequently, they are miserable, miserable people.

Editors, community-types, I have recently discovered, read corrections.

Reading the Globe's corrections always excites me. I especially enjoyed the correction it made on a recent editorial. I don't remember having read the editorial in question, but I will always know what was wrong with it.

I howled when the bride wore "slime green" in another weekly. I was gleeful when a column slug in another newspaper read "Dead Editor," and not Dear Editor. Ha Ha I said.

I was charmed by the caption which gave details about two realtors under a picture of George and Martha Washington.

But when something is wrong in the Mariner I don't like it very much. I am dismal.

We spend all day laying out the Mariner on Tuesday.

But when I see the Mariner Wednesday night, fresh off the press, it's like I never saw it before. I see the pictures I cropped too closely, the article incorrectly headlined, the strip of news which nervously runs off line, the giant hole I meant to fill with something.

Just a year ago I was reporting for another newspaper. I was naive then. I didn't know about layout, resizing wheels, ambers, wax machines, headlines.

I can recall in those days front page articles that were continued to nowhere, inside articles that said they started on the front page but when one looked — they weren't there. I gave my editors an earful.

In those days when subscribers called me about the accidents we were united by a common enemy — THEM. THEM was everybody and anyone at that newspaper but me.

Last week I called Margie Knox, a friend and idea person, and she said:

THEY messed up Chet Ellis' article this week. How do you read it? It starts on page 1 and then something happens on page 3, but it doesn't seem to go together. And what's on page 15? Does that go with it?"

Me: "No, THEY didn't do it. I did it, somehow. I still haven't figured it out."

Margie: "It's a shame. It sounded like a good article. I'd like to be able to read it."

Me (defensively): "Well, I didn't do it on purpose."

Margie didn't even listen to my explanation. Nor did I listen to THEM a year ago. I hope THEY are reading this. It's an apology of sorts.

CORRECTION: CHET ELLIS IS 44, NOT 55.

Editorial

Use Your Clout!

The political reality of the wastewater treatment plant question is that voters will ultimately have to make a decision. About something.

The right decision will be the politically expedient one. Simply, the plant will go at whatever size — where it can fly.

Where it can fly may in fact not be the best site, but that's the way a Democracy operates.

In recent months we've been hearing voters complain about everyone from the moderator through the sewer commissioners, and how they should have done this, or that.

We have a question for you. What should you have done? If you feel strongly about not having a new plant, about having a one half million gallon plant or a million gallon plant, want it at Whale Meadow, school lands, the Greater Brewster Corporation site or wherever — why haven't you done something about it?

Town meeting form of government allows for considerable voter input. Just 200 of you can demand a special town meeting at any time you choose without anyone's consent. At the written request of 100 registered voters any article must be put on the warrant.

Have we found town officials to be arbitrary? Definitely. Unfair? They're tyrants. Mariner reporters and editors could have always made a better decision.

But do we think for the most part town officials think they are using their best judgment and doing what is best for the town? We think so.

It would be nice if Cohasset voters stopped offering their opinions "after " the fact . . . "after" the committee has been voted, "after" the warrant is closed.

If you're serious about change, justice . . . whatever. Do something about it. If you want more information, voice that concern in an article at town meeting.

And by the way, when we think you're getting the run-around, we'll say so. Or you can use our pages to champion your own cause.

Actually, you've got quite a bit of clout.

Why don't you use it?

Can Hardly Wait

To the Editor:

As if the "no answer" Superman Crypt wasn't enough, you're now introducing a new puzzle without even letting your readers know what the rules are! May The Best Team Lose? by Chet Ellis is probably another good story full of "Ellisms," but after five tries, I've given up figuring it out. I don't know which is worse: tough cryptograms with no answers, or "story scramble" with no rules, clues, or answers. I can hardly wait for next week's paper!

MUSIC CIRCUS

Selectmen said last week they will not act on the Music Circus' request for a weekday entertainment license until John Hayes, chairman of the board of trustees for the circus, reponds to a letter from the selectmen.

Two weeks ago selectmen wrote to Hayes requesting that he respond to several requests made by Concerned Citizens.

Presently attorneys for the Circus and the Citizens are attempting to negotiate a settlement. Last year the Citizens were sued for $350,000 by the Circus — after they had appealed a decision of the local board of appeals in superior court.

The Citizens appealed the decision of the board which said the summer theater on Sohier Street did not violate the town's zoning by-laws, with regard to traffic, noise or expansion of seats.

Yesterday's Headlines Dead But...

Sewerage Saga Lives On...And On...And ...

By Peter Barnicle

It is said that news is a highly perishable commodity, and that "nothing is as dead as yesterday's headlines."

That is an over-simplification. There are many continuing stories which run from edition to edition ad infinitum. Certainly, if I may be forgiven, our present problem with sewerage falls into this category.

To prove that sewerage in Cohasset is a continuing story we can go back to the first issue of the Cohasset Cottager, March 30, 1882. There we find that the selectmen had granted Messrs. Crocker and Hollingsworth a hearing on their petition for a sewer line on Jerusalem Road.

The rest of the town took a dim view of the proposal and so Messrs. Crocker and Hollingsworth undertook to build the line at their own expense. The estimated cost was $6,000 — and there isn't a word about a treatment plant or out-fall.

Actually, I was not the least bit interested in sewerage when I started looking through the earliest copies of The Cottager. The Cohasset Historical Society has the three earliest file volumes of the weekly newspaper and they make fascinating reading.

As with any new publication the editor introduced his newspaper with an editorial, short and to the point:

"We publish herewith the initial number of the Cohasset Cottager, a new candidate for public favor. Our aim will be to give the people of this historic and ancient town by the sea, a high-toned and enterprising journal that shall be of benefit to every moral and material interest here."

The publisher went on to show just how enterprising he was. He announced that two free copies of the first issue were being delivered to every home in town. One copy for the householder and the second for mailing to a friend or a neighbor who had moved away and was still interested in Cohasset.

Just under the editorial was a column of Cohasset news briefs. The first was:

"The Sears place on Jerusalem Road has been purchased by Mr. Dickinson Jr., and Henry D. Hyde. The estate comprises fourteen acres."

Not very newsy by today's standards. But consider this: a home, located on 14 acres had changed hands. There wasn't any Welcome Wagon in those days, so the merchants had to let the new residents know what they could supply. The local carpenters could call to find out if any repairs were contemplated.

The second item was:

"Mr. William Eddy has on the stocks a fine yacht thirty feet in length. Her builder, George Steers of New York, built the famous yacht America. The new yacht will be available for the accommodation of sailing and fishing parties the coming summer."

And crime was also covered:

"Young John O'Brien and his chum, Jimmy, being suspected by our Station Agent, were arrested for stealing a box of raisins from the depot. They acknowledged their guilt. O'Brien has stolen before and a number of our citizens have never received freight sent them."

Young O'Brien seems to have been accused of being a one-man crime wave, but there is no indication as to disposition of his case. And there is nary a word about his chum, Jimmy.

In column two, half way down the page, is a report on the annual town meeting. There were 22 articles in the warrant and a total of $24,400 was appropriated.

The paper reported that Art. 16 "in regard to female suffrage extending to women, who are citizens, the right to hold town office, and to vote, were both passed over without a vote."

Even back then the men knew better than to go on record as opposed to giving women the vote.

The Cottager was a four page "blanket-size" paper. It had eight columns per page, each 24 inches long. In addition to Cohasset news, it also carried items from South Scituate, Scituate, Marshfield and even went as far as Duxbury for its items.

While covering the local news, it also devoted considerable space to stories from all over the world. Not the spot-news stories covered by today's wire services, but odds and ends picked up from Lord knows where.

More about that later.

Complaints Issue

Quincy District Court informed the Mariner last week it will issue three complaints of the local zoning bylaws against Kenneth Schult, owner of Ocean Bay Nurseries on 3A.

A complaint to issue by the clerk of courts means that the clerk has found sufficient cause under the seal of the Commonwealth to serve an alleged violator of the zoning bylaws with notice. A day will be set for a hearing on the complaints as charged.

In early September Building Inspector James Litchfield cited the nursery with four violations of the zoning bylaw and registered that complaint in Quincy court.

The office of Dennis Ryan, clerk of courts, charged the nursery with three violations: violation of the bylaw by the continuous use of a trailer as an office, no sign permit, and a structural permit not issued as required.

The court issued no complaint about the display of goods too close to the street or off-street parking on a state highway — two additional complaints cited by Litchfield.

Kenneth Schult is co-owner of both the Cohasset nursery and Arcadia Gardens in Hull. He is also a member of the Hull Planning Board.

Santa

Peter Laugelle who owns ALCO Oil, said he would be content with lower oil prices. Selectman Arthur Clark: "I just want to sit on Santa Claus' lap — and I'd like peace on earth."

Real little kids Christine Gifford and Lewis Gosslin said they would like roller skates and a mini-bike, respectively.

Lewis Gifford, Robert Gosslin, Barbara Gosslin and Jacqueline Gifford, all breakfasting at the Line with their children, said they would like the money to buy the roller skates and the mini bike.

Little Tad Kasperowicz, when asked by Santa to sit on his lap, said "Only if you don't kiss me."

Steve Bartow said he would like a year's subscription to the X!?%#‡&. Felicia and Chris Bartow both asked for roller skates and Karen Marks asked for "My own roller skates."

Hingham Selectman Oscar Beck wants his two front teeth, and so does 7-month old Austin Lewis. Mel Lewis asked for the portion of the harbor that Scituate stole, while Karen Lewis just wants a good night's sleep.

David Bernstein wants his horse to make it at the Kentucky Derby; Realtor Gene Price, "Four or 500 agreements;" and Police Chief Randolph Feola wants, "My eight days back selectmen took away from my vacation."

Patrolman Rick Grassie asked for "At least three more guys on the police department; Jim Kuhn, "A Music Circus that preferably doesn't distress its neighbors; a water treatment plant at a practical location and a new police chief."

Mailman Brian Mulrooney wants a new suit; Sean Laugelle: "A town position without any conflict of interest," and Skinny Laugelle told Santa: "I'm not telling you nothing." Santa told Skinny he felt he had quite enough already — Skinny's having won the Gridiron's $1,000 raffle and three turkeys last week, plus three weeks at a charm school. Jeff Forsdick said Skinny needs about six weeks.

Nancy Sladen said, "I would like to be worthy of being married to 'the living legend'."

Arne Gjesteby tried to tell Santa something, but the individual sitting next to him wouldn't permit him to speak.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray: "Everything to be great for everybody in the world;" Richard Silvia: "It's the year of the child, I'd like to see every child fed."

Little Heather Brennick wants a dolly.

At Watson's Hardware Store, Phillip Rose said he wants a Trans-Am $10,000 car; Gertrude McArthur: "Good health;" Customer Mrs. Margaret Hendrie — "Just good health."

Mary Smith would like a new, heavy car; while Kevin Arnold who drives the Arnold truck said he would like "Underwear — it's hard to get enough of it."

At Dependable Cleaners Pat Sargent said, "This sounds stupid and corny, but I'd like peace — starting in Cohasset." Mort Rose wants a new pair of size 9 red slippers. Cookworks' Larry Fone wants, "Snow and cold for business, and a foot patrolman."

At Cohasset Central Market Louis Bravo wants a new Mercedes, meatcutter John Cogill wants "A month off and a new knife sharpener." Santa took a few minutes to cool off here by sticking his head in a cooler. Joan Bravo asked for a nice vacation, in Florida.

CLARK CHATTERTON PUTS IN HIS ORDER

Little Mary Hurley asked for a Barbie doll; Elizabeth Hurley wants a stuffed kitten and a book, and Ann Hurley wants a kitten. The Hurleys were doing their weekly candy shopping when Santa met them on the street.

Michael Riley wants a nice, new truck. Jay George, from Scituate, is thought to want to get married, his boss Louis Bravo said.

At Curtis Compact, Roger Ducey of Scituate wants a nice day on Christmas because he has to do a lot of travelling. While John Allen wants $1,300 for his pilot's license.

Santa passed Tinka McLean on the street, who said she'd like peace on earth. "I am so worried, my kids are over there."

At Colonial Pharmacy Carol Levanch said she wanted a raise.

"Can I be piggish?" Lynne Brandeberg asked Santa. "I would like a new house as a gift — with no realtors involved."

John Cassani said he'd like two weeks vacation besides his regular vacation.

Jeff Forsdick said it would be nice to win the $1M lottery. "Yes, that would be nice," said Santa. Bennett Driscoll wants tuition money, Phil Maichle wants a wallet with a perpetual $20 bill in it — and, "I'd like to go back to Dian's house."

Mark Buckley wants a 60-ft. sailboat with a full coller. And Tim Salerno wants a 280-2X car.

Greg McBarracy wants a new job and a stereo and a truck. While Bill Kearney wants "A Sony of my oney."

Joseph Barrett asked for "Good weather for the poor and those that need fuel; Clarence Shubert wants the captives home from Iran.

At the Post Office Audrey Devin wants "A mink coat, diamond ring, emerald necklace and that's all. I don't want to be too greedy." Mary Hobin wants "surprises." And postal customer Ann Pompeo would like to be put in charge of the whole world so she could straighten out the mess. "It would be like Camelot — there would be no problems."

Bill O'Connell said he refused to answer any questions on the grounds that it may incriminate him. Dean Williams wants "A gallon of fuel."

Parking Ban Is Here!

The weather's been balmy, country roses are still blooming, and the crickets were out again over the weekend to catch a breath of air. In fact, a jogger just ran by stripped to the waist.

However, residents cannot park their cars on the street overnight or they will be tagged by the police department. This ban is enforced yearly at this time in preparation for the snow plows.

around town

☐Steeple Jack, Wally Peterson, went up the 45' flagpole in front of the Joseph Osgood School like a flag last Wednesday during his return engagement to apply a second coat of paint to the pole. He very thoughtfully coordinated his visit so that the students could come out for a look. With his nephew, Wayne Peterson, assisting, Wally hitched himself up the pole by using foot stirrups that are attached to the pole by ropes; he hoists one band of rope up, and then the other, and he's at the top in under five minutes!

Although he's been climbing church steeples, towers, communication antennas, and flagpoles to paint and repair them for 30 years, Wally still seems to get a bang out of the trip and there's a bit of the performer in him. He rocked and swayed and joked with the kids from the top of the pole to shrieks and applause from the little ones below.

☐The OLD Cohasset News Company store on Main Street, forlorn looking and abandoned for many months, is going to be occupied again around January 1. Owners of a "retail variety-type store" are reported to have signed a least last week. We will be looking forward to a new retailer in town, and we know how happy the "store" will be to have occupants again!

☐Only one Pre-Olympic winter games per Olympics — 1979.

Only one winter Olympics every four years — 1980.

Only one mistake in last week's column — 1981 Olympics. Have fun Pompeo's!

☐Michael Smith, son of Vito and Kay Conte, 431 S. Main St., was married on Thanksgiving eve to Miss Dawn Bonnie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Al Nocolosio Nicolosio of Margate, Florida. Mr. and Mrs. Conte, their daughter, Kathi, and son James Smith of Pembroke, his wife, Joan, and daughter, Sandra Kay, attended the wedding which took place at the home of a friend in Orrs Island, Maine.

Michael is a Second Class Signalman with the U.S. Navy stationed at Brunswick Naval Air Station. He is a graduate of Cohasset High School.

As if Michael and Dawn's wedding wasn't excitement enough, Michael's dog, a white German Shepard named Molly, gave birth to four plump, black puppies the next day!

☐An enthusiastic contingent of Chris Keating fans turned out on Sunday at Schaefer Stadium (along with 61,000 others) to watch #52 in the Buffalo Bills blue and white play on their special team and as linebacker. Imagine the surprise of running into the Keatings, Brodericks, McCulloughs, and others (55 or so) in the densely populated parking lot/picnic/drinking area of the Foxboro Stadium! (That's like finding the beer can with a prize inside from among the tons of aluminum trash there.)

Keating is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Keating and was recently signed with the Buffalo Bills as a linebacker his first year out of the University of Maine.

The banner at the end zone area that said, "Keating gives a Beating," undoubtedly helped spur him and the Bills on to their 16-13 defeat of the Patriots.

☐Miss Carolyn Elizabeth Baird and Stephen Paul Chamberlain were married recently in St. Francis X. Cabrini Church in a double ring ceremony. A garden reception was held afterwards at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Baird of North Scituate. Mr. Chamberlain is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Chamberlain of Cohasset.

The couple will live in North Scituate, following a wedding trip to New Hampshire. The groom is the owner and manager of Village Paint and Wallpaper, North Scituate. He is a graduate of New England Preparatory School and Massachusetts Bay Community College. The bride is a graduate of Scituate High School and Hartwick College and is employed by New England Merchants Bank.

☐Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Christensen were married this fall at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset in a nuptial Mass celebrated by Rev. Keohane. The bride is the former Miss Maureen Ann O'Leary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William O'Leary, of Cohasset. The bridegroom is the son of Veronica and Wallace Christensen of Roslyn Heights, New York. Mr. and Mrs. O'Leary hosted an outdoor reception at their home following the ceremony.

The bride is a graduate of Immaculate High School, Manchester, New Hampshire and Clark University. The bridegroom is a graduate of Chaminade High School, Boston College, and Harvard Law School. The couple live in Washington D.C.

☐Navy Ensign James Brackett, son of Dr. and Mrs. Philip Brackett of 365 Atlantic Ave., has been commissioned in his present rank upon graduation from Officer Candidate School (OCS). A graduate of Tabor Academy, Marion in 1971, and a 1976 graduate of Franklin Pierce College, Rindge, N.H., with a Bachelor of Arts degree, he joined the Navy in June 1979.

Village Merchants Ass'n

Village Shop Talk

The Cohasset Village and Harbor Association has made a special arrangement with Ocean Bay Nurseries on Route 3A to provide Cohasset merchants with fresh wreaths at a special price. The wreaths will be 24 inches in diameter with a red velvet bow. Any merchants interested may call Eric at 383-6944.

The annual contest for the best decorated shop, front and windows, will be judged on Dec. 15. A representative of the Cohasset Community Garden Club, The Cohasset Historical Society, and the South Shore Arts Center will decide on the winner. The prize is a dinner for two at any of Cohasset's fine restaurants, winner's choice.

I hope some of you readers will come to the Lothrop House Christmas Preview Punch Party. An old fashioned house party will be held on Sunday, Dec. 2 from 5-7 p.m. Come and see the progress being made in the Historical Society's new headquarters. Samples of wallcoverings and paint will be on view. Tickets for a donation of $5 are available in most shops in Cohasset. If you can't decide on a gift for a relative or friend, consider thi alternative: a gift certificate. It's a thoughtful gift and a good way to introduce Cohasset shops to the person receiving the certificate.

Sunday openings for many shops will be common in December, including the supermarkets. Hope this extra day makes your shopping more convenient.

Merchants in Cohasset are still looking for foot patrol police — none as yet. This time of year is an important period for police visibility. The need is now . . . not in January! Selectpersons . . . Help!

Petitioners Want Answers

[ED.'S NOTE: The following petition was presented to the sewer commissioners at their Monday meeting. Commissioners took no action on the petition, which was signed by 28 residents.]

Letter to the Sewer Commissioners:

We are gravely concerned that the town is making no progress toward solving its serious waste water problems. We believe the reason there has been no progress is much more fundamental than the site issue.

Basic questions about public sewerage remain unanswered. Until these are answered, the town will be unwilling to make compromises about site.

The questions deal with:

The extent to which sewers should be used as a solution to the town's waste water problems;

The size of the treatment plant;

The impact of sewerage on future population growth; and

How financing and operating costs will be covered.

We believe these questions can best be dealt with by a broadly-based citizens' advisory committee.

Although many citizens have long agreed that the Hillside, the Veterans Project, and the Route 3A shopping plazas should be sewered, it has not been shown that serving areas beyond those would be cost effective.

Therefore, questions remain about the location of sewer lines and the appropriate size of the treatment plant.

The consultants claim that public sewerage will have but little effect on future population growth. In contrast, some citizens say the town's growth rate will "skyrocket."

Until that issue is dealt with — by documenting the amount of open land that would be made accessible to sewers and providing alternative assumptions about likely development — citizens will be uneasy about the impacts of sewerage and unwilling to vote for it.

We have serious questions about the financing of the proposed project. Costs are not definitively drawn to assure us that the town will be able to pay for the operating and maintenance costs the project will incur.

We believe that a broadly based citizens' committee should address these issues. The committee should be large enough to represent the following groups:

1) Private citizens representing specific areas such as Sohier Street, 3A residential, Hillside and Veterans Project;

2) Public interest groups;

3) Public officials representing interested town boards;

4) Representatives of groups with substantial economic interest in areas of proposed sewering or outfall, such as 3A businessmen, realtors, builders, and the Fishermen's Association.

The Environmental Protection Agency recommends that citizens' advisory committees be composed in this way, and the 1979 Cohasset Annual Town Meeting expressed its desire that such a committee be formed.

Therefore, we uge the Sewer Commissioners to rescind their vote of Nov. 5, 1979 to establish a 5-member committee with the task of recommending a treatment plant site. We urge the committee to establish a 9-12 member advisory committee as outlined above to deal with the issues of cost effectiveness, plant size, population growth, and financing.

Many of us will not be affected by any of the sites under consideration, but will be unwilling to accept sewerage plans until the basic questions are answered.

Very truly yours,
Robert Leary and others

Village Fair Again Sparks Holiday Spirit

By O.F. Ingram

Cohasset's Village Fair, this year sponsored by all four churches of the Village, will once again evoke the holiday spirit this Saturday with handcrafted gifts, wreaths and swags, poinsettias, Santa Claus and the exciting atmoshere that precedes the holiday season.

Cohasset Common will be the focal point of the event, with various features of it taking place in the Town Hall, Second Congregational Church, Unitarian Parish House, Community Center and St. Stephen's Church. The Fair will operate from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., with the Village Fair Supper at 7 p.m.

For young and old who wish to do their Christmas shopping early while benefitting a good cause, the Fair will offer an unusual opportunity. In the Town Hall there will be scores of gift items in a boutique staged by a committee headed by Mrs. James W. Hamilton and Mrs. Clifford Mitman. More than 100 aprons of all types will be offered by a group of skilled seamstresses headed by Mrs. Robert I. Wilson.

Dozens of wreaths and swags fashioned by a committee under the direction of Mrs. Philip C. Shockman will make a selection of holiday decorations easy and rewarding. Wreath-makers from all four churches will work feverishly over the period of the days preceding the Fair to be sure that their creations are fresh and lasting for the holiday season.

Church coordinators for wreaths are Mrs. John Riley, St. Anthony's; Mrs. William C. Broeffle, Congregational; Mrs. John M. Seavey, St. Stephen's and Mrs. Richard Redfield, Unitarian.

As usual there will be a bountifully-stocked plant table, featuring such holiday traditionals as poinsettias and various ivies, all assembled and merchandised by a committee under the direction of Mrs. Timothy M. Cassidy, Mrs. Peter L. Goedecke and Mrs. John Gaston.

WREATHED IN SMILES and wreaths are, from left, Mrs. Philip Shockman, Chairman of wreath committee for annual Village Fair Saturday, Dec. 1, Mrs. William Haynes and Mrs. Joseph McDonald. The Fair will feature all types of holiday decorations and gifts.

Second-hand articles and table after table of books will be on sale at the Bargain Bazaar which will take over the vestry of the Congregational Church for the day. Gordon Stevenson heads up the Bargain Bazaar, while Mrs. Arnold Weeks directs the book offerings which she promises will be the most extensive in years.

A feature of the afternoon hours of the Fair will be the drawing of prizes in the raffle which is to be held in the Town Hall about 2 p.m. Once again a television set heads the list of appealing prizes being offered by local businessmen as their contribution to the Fair.

John Mullet heads the raffle organization and has ticket sellers assigned in each of the churches. Tickets will also be available on the day of the fair until drawing time.

Concluding the day's events will be catered dinner at St. Stephen's Church at 7 p.m. This has been a sell-out affair in recent years, establishing a reputation as a delightful gourmet treat. Tickets up to the limit of the hall are available through Mrs. James A. Soltesz, 383-0527, or Mrs. Jeremiah T. Delaney, 383-6592.

Obituary

Frances Henry

Mrs. Frances Rose (Dolan) Henry, 71, a resident of Cohasset for many years, died Nov. 19 in Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home after a long illness.

A native of Ireland, she came to this country when she was 18 years old. She had lived in the nursing home for the last eight years.

Wife of the late Charles E. Henry, Sr., retired caretaker of Woodside Cemetery, she leaves a son, Charles E. Henry Jr. of Cohasset; two daughters, Mrs. Ann E. Hayward of Rockland and Frances Rose Henry of Middleboro; six grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Xmas Shopping Bus

A special Christmas shopping bus to Braintree will be run on Monday, December 17, from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The bus will leave from 60 Elm Street; next stop will be Town Hall. Call the Social Service League at 383-1771 if you're interested in going.

Cohasset's 60 Plus Club's Christmas dinner will be held at Bobby Hacketts on Wednesday, December 12, at 12 o'clock. Entertainment will be provided by a Barbershop Quartette of high school students.

A bus will leave from the Town Hall at 11 a.m.

Christmas Movie For Children

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will present a Christmas movie entitled, "J.T.", for elementary school children.

This story of a boy's love for a cat is based on the book of the same title by Jane Wagner. The movie, "J.T.", will be shown on Tuesday, Dec. 4 at 3:15 p.m. in the Children's Room and will end at about 4 p.m.

Hearing Concludes

said he observed Feola's condition to be "quite stable," and Feola himself to be "quite sober" when he stood before the booking officer.

Peckerman added that he himself had been arrested by police under a warrant on May 8. He testified that he didn't recall Feola's rights being read to him, "And I didn't have my rights read to me, either.

"Mr. Feola demanded that a breathalyzer test be given to him on several occasions; he had to scream the whole time. The officers were upstairs," Peckerman said.

Under questioning by Rogers, Peckerman said, "He (Feola) told me they said he was drunk. He told me had two beers, and he didn't get to finish the second one. They arrested him but not his friend. Police told him to back up his car. When he did, they arrested him. I'm pretty sure he said he was arrested for drunk-driving." Later Peckerman charged that testimony to read drunkeness.

Miriam Sciarappa said she saw Feola in Jimmie's Irish Lounge on the evening of May 8 around 11:30 p.m. She described Feola's condition as "sober." He bought two beers, drank one and drank half of one — then put it on the bar." She said she knew he had not finished that drink because she herself finished it.

Ms. Sciarappa also saw William Smith. "He was very drunk. I tried to take his keys and wanted to call a cab. Smith got in his car and Randy got in his car — he (Feola) was about 20 yards behind him. Smith peeled out."

Although Ms. Sciarappa said Smith was speeding, she said she noted that Feola's speed was within the speed limit. She said she watched the two men round the S-curve at Howard Johnson's on Nantasket Avenue. "I saw no police cruiser." She said she has known Feola for about one year.

Hensley, in summary, said, "Feola testified he was not allowed a breathalyzer test." He said because of that, and because the arresting officer was by statute an untrained officer without the power of arrest, it was a bad arrest. "It indicates no probable cause."

Hull police claim that both Feola and Smith were traveling faster than 55 mph when stopped; that Feola would not present his driver's license when halted; that the police cruiser had flashing lights; that when an attempt was made to read Feola his rights he shouted continuously; that Feola had requested to delay his customary phone call until later in the evening.

Feola claims that police did not use flashing lights in pursuit; he was not speeding; he had his license in his possession when arrested; he was not administered a requested breathalyzer test.

And in addition that he was not read his constitutional rights and was not told what charges he was being arrested on. He also contends he was not allowed the customary phone call when he was booked.

Skippers Find Slaying Duxbury Dragons Too Tough

By Bob Tis

Thanksgiving proved a tough day for the Skippers.

The Duxbury Green Dragons scored once in each quarter for a 28-0 shutout.

The Skippers, however, played a much better game thant he score indicates. Duxbury outnumbered Cohasset in first downs only by one, 11-10. Cohasset gained 128 yards passing to Duxbury's 62. Unfortunately the running game did not shape up that way.

One main privation to the Skippers' ground game was the loss of hard-running sophomore, Joe Becker, due to the re-injury of his ankle.

Bob Donahue had an outstanding day, punting with a 64 yard average, not to mention hardnosed play in the backfield. Another highlight of the game for the Skippers was the receiving exploits of end Bill Duffy. Bill made one diving grab in particular which I'm sure the spectators will not forget for awhile.

The main deterrent to the Skippers was the effective Duxbury running game. When the Skippers bottled this up the Dragons came right back at them with a few key passes. When the Skipper defense slacked the Duxbury speedsters were able to capitalize with a number of long runs.

As Dave Turner put it, "The game, like the season, did not turn out as planned. We had some tough breaks and next season I think we'll have the experience and speed for a good team."

The Skippers' record fell to 2-7 overall. They will be losing a lot of talent this year due to the graduation of Captains Jay McNeill, Rich Young, Bill Duffy, Bob Gunnville, Joe McCullough, Matt Brown, Dave Turner, Jack MacLean, Mike Thornton, and Charlie Coe.

This makes for a tough loss, but there is a ray of hope for the future. What next year's team will lack in size will be made up for with speed and experience.

The backfield will regain quarterback Tim Libby, Mike Polito, Mike Donahue, Joe Becker, Bob Donahue, and lightning fast Mike Jones. Also seen in the backfield will be Jack McNeill, Kevin Dooley, Mark Froio, Jim Kelleher, Bart Spung and Tom Stanford.

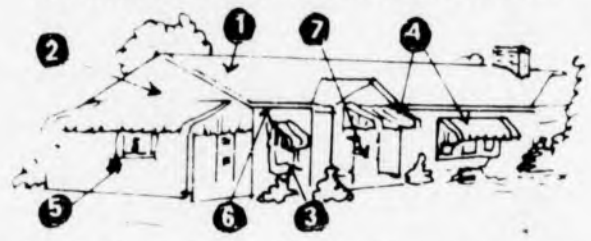
Pulling down the Libby passes will be Jeff Lyons, Greg Salerno, and J.T. Price. The offensive and defensive line will not be anything to take lightly. Returning on the line will be the hard-hitting Sandy Ayer, Steve (Beaver) Buckley, Bud Howorth, Dave Chapman, Pat Conlan, Paul Buckley and the unstoppable Bob Fessler.

After last week's prediction of the game many suggested I invest in a new crystal ball. Well, it came this morning and as soon as the clouds cleared I observed a winning record for the Skippers' 1980 team.

Winter Sports On The Horizon

The winter sports season is coming fast and with it marks the start of basketball, hockey and wrestling. It is rare for a Cohasset team to ever reach the success that last year's basketball team achieved.

That team, sparked by four of Cohasset's tallest and most gifted athletes ever, Paul Farren, Rich Tebbetts, Tom Higgins and John Howley, made it to the State semi-finals.



This year's team has a tough act to follow, but is shooting for success just the same.

Sharp-shooting forward Mark Goff and junior point guard Bill Kurtz, who both played an intricate part on last year's team will be returning.

Height will not be a major problem as it has traditionally been for Cohasset teams. Six-four Bill Taylor and 6'3" Mark Goff should be able to handle the boards. Passing, running, and shooting will be in no shortage this year, because along with Goff, Kurtz and Taylor, Jim (Pistol Pete) McCarthy, Jim O'Brien, Tom McMahon, Dean Brown, and The Iceman, Keith Ross, along with some more promising Juniors and Sophomores will be metamorphosing into a ALTERNATIVE ENERGY will be provided for the Piepenbrink's Main St. residence by solar panels being installed by, from left, Kevin O'Keefe, Dave Duffy and Bruce Riddick.

Thanks To The Sun

When the electric bills for hot water at the Piepenbrink's home got out of sight, Fred and Shirley took neighbor Arthur Lehr's suggestion of heating their water by solar power. They had a new roof put on and then had solar panels installed on the north slope of the roof, facing south. They are now getting plenty of hot H2O for their family of seven and the Enders, who live in one wing of the house.

The Lehr's have found their three panel system, which is designed for domestic hot water, to be successful. They went from June through October without using electricity for heating water and last winter, when the temperature outside was zero, the temperature in the water tank was 95° — all thanks to the sun.

The Piepenbrink's seven panel system will provide all the heat needed to warm their 120 gallon water tank. Last Wednesday, Dave Duffy and Kevin O'Keefe, who work for Don Kent Solar Heating Supply, Weymouth, and Bruce Riddick, a plumber, were insulating the outside pipes to the panels on the roof and preparing to water test the system. When they were satisfied that all pipes and connections were tight, they fed propylene glycol (a non-toxic anti-freeze) into the pipes, which will circulate through the collectors on the roof and down to the heating coils in the water tank. For every sunny day, the heat storage capacity in the tank is three.

Let the sun shine on!

hardworking team.

The Skippers will be operating from a 1-2-2 offense. This will emphasize the ball handling of Kurtz, the height of Goff and Taylor, as well as the shooting of McCarthy, McMahon, O'Brien, Ross and Brown. Cohasset's defense can be quite adaptable. A 2-1-2 zone is used often, as well as man to man defense. The Skippers are also quite capable of putting on a full court press.

The Skippers will be led by coach Bob Hogan, who will replace John Levangie. The Skippers will be aiming toward a successful season, and hopefully, a chance to match or better last year's team

Christmas In Cohasset

By Beverly Livingstone

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is presenting a House Tour entitled "Christmas in Cohasset" on Thursday, Dec. 13 from 2 to 4 p.m. and 6 to 9 p.m.

The Unitarian Parish House, one of the lovely houses on the tour, will feature the tea and Christmas Boutique. Many beautiful and unusual items will be available at the boutique. Tea will be served during the afternoon hours.

An authentic Norman Castle, owned by Mr. J. Arnold Nickerson is another one of the outstanding and interesting homes featured on the tour. During the evening hours, from 7 until 9 p.m. wine and cheese will be served at The Castle.

The traditional Colonial Home of Mrs. Henry DeF. Chapin features antique furniture placed exquisitely throughout this elegant early American style house, combing the best of the old with the new.

One of the earliest period houses on the tour is a Colonial Sea Captain's home owned by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Tibbetts, Jr. The original part of the house was built in 1760 and most of the rooms have a spectacular view of Cohasset Harbor.

The Thomas Chamberlains have just completed a large addition to their Dutch Gambrel home. The addition includes a new living room with an unusual cathedral ceiling and a Florida room overlooking a pool and tennis court.

The newest home is that of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Murphy. This sparkling Contemporary Cape is situated in a rustic natural wooded setting. The house seems to blend with the land as though nature designed it.

All the homes will be decorated for the Holidays and will reflect the Spirit of Christmas. Tickets will be sold only in advance and may be purchased by calling Mrs. John W. Hobbs at 383-1723 or either of the co-chairmen for this event; Mrs. Frank W. England, 383-9811 or Mrs. David W. Knowles, 383-1267.

HOUSE TOUR COMING UP and planning the event are, from left, Kathleen England, Shirley Martin, Patti Knowles and Linda Halloran who are the committee in charge of the Christmas tour.

At The Conservatory

Piano music for four hands will be featured at the South Shore Conservatory of Music Sunday, Dec. 9 at 4 p.m. when Tom Hansen and Robert Wyatt of the faculty will perform.

Tom Hansen, a native of Duxbury, holds a B.M. in music from the New England Conservatory and a Masters from the University of Michigan. He has appeared as soloist with area orchestras and on T.V. and has been musical director for numerous productions in the area.

Robert Wyatt received his B.M. and M.M. from Boston University. He has been a member of the Conservatory faculty for the past ten years and has played numerous concerts both in Boston and the South Shore. In New York he has performed on radio and in concert.

For this concert the artists have chosen music by Schubert, Mozart, Debussy, Dvorak and Brahms. The concert is open to the public and there is no charge for admission.

The South Shore Conservatory is located at Cedar Hill off 19 Fort Hill St. in Hingham.

Shoestringers Present

The "Shoestring Players," the creative dramatics group from the South Shore Conservatory, will present "Patches," a program of short pieces, at the Scituate Public Library, Saturday, Dec. 8 at 2 p.m.

These young people, between the ages nine to 12 belong to the newly formed repertory company made up of members of the advanced workshop at the school. Under the direction of Ellen Kelly, they are giving a number of programs in the area.

Taking the "show on the road," Kelly feels, gives the actors a new dimension in their exposure to the craft of entertaining.

Taking part in the production will be: Michael Thibodeau of Scituate, Susan McAlarney and Carrie Parker of Weymouth, Diane Gustafson of Braintree and Noelle Capella, Karen Euler, Tamara Budgett, Rebecca Resnick, Rebecca Herzberg, Ellen Urmson and Amy Gulden all of Hingham.

This program is free and all are welcome to attend.

Looking Beyond

By Lois Martin

It is with single-minded fervor that we cling to coverage of hometown news. But it is a mistake on the part of broader-based city folk to assume we neither notice nor give a hoot about state, national and international affairs.

We're all too aware of what's been going on beyond the town boundaries. And we're prepared to comment on some of those events.

— Girl Scout cookie-bakers are feeling the sugar crunch. We'll pay 25 cents more for a box of those good sweets. And I've never doubted for a moment that the grandmother who bakes them deserves the raise.

— Swiftly in and out of the news, indeed as whimsical as her political backing, has been Chicago's Mayor Jane Byrne. It's heartening that even the most liberated of women upholds the woman's prerogative to change her mind. She said she'd back Kennedy after implying Carter would be her choice. It now seems she's chosen Ted for the White House and Jimmy as a nice person to know.

PATCHES

— Sage economic interpreters have defined "wise investments" as being the same thing as "tax loopholes."

— Within the last month a thief broke into a home, apparently after drugs. He escaped with the dog's heartworm pills. (No arrests have been made but someone said the authorities have staked out the vet's office.)

— On a church restroom wall was a grafitti message scrawled in wax..."God means so much I can't even understand." One could be inspired to leave an answer, like..."That's what faith is all about."

— A provocative story announced that women have now been at Yale University for 10 years. That'll make the men happy. They always said we'd need more time to learn than they do.

— We are realizing we can't live with the knowledge of starving Cambodians, Laotians, Vietnamese unless we seek to alleviate their suffering through sharing. There's absolutely no guarantee we'll change the situation. But without trying there's a guarantee we won't change anything.

— It isn't enough now to want to be a size 9. Now the goal is to be a size 9 and have a pair of jeans with a designer's name on the rear end. One would never deign to call those dungarees or overalls.

— The town of Scituate has taken steps to deal with alcoholism amongst town employees...Provocative. Should we elaborate on that in other towns to test the need for such a program in public schools? Or, for the record, do we say there's no such problem there?

— Rula Lenksa continues to flourish on television commercials. She sashays about in her mink, tossing her sheened hair about as endorsement of VO 5. How did a celebrity get to be so well unknown?

— The governor, through lavish use of his expense account, has shown us how to live like a King.

— In simplistic, non political terms, the former Shah of Iran was admitted to our hospital because he needed treatment. I don't know when such admittance was denied. Neither do I remember such a hue and cry for a chance to kill a dying man.

— There are still traditional differences between a man and a woman. He sweats over the rising prime rate and she perspires about the spiralling prime rib.

— Two schools of thoughts are evolving in Christmas shopping this year. One says, "we can't afford to spend much this year;' the other credo is, "live it up, get what you want, before it's claimed by an oil company, a tax, or a college student.'

News continues to break on the national wires. But we hometowners don't break under its strain. It's a knack we have of switching our attention from discouraging big news to the community events. Nothing like a Cub Scout Pack meeting or a woman's club bazaar to help us gain perspective and courage when we deal with the bigtime news reports.

Women At Work

NINA BELSAN

Dear Ms. Belsan,

I'm a working woman. My office is the kitchen and while I'm not bitter about my position behind the stove, I wonder if housewives have a place in your column. We have full time jobs in the home and sometimes it's a difficult one. I get the feeling that we're becoming forgotten and replaced by the woman who is employed outside the home.

I don't call myself a "domestic engineer," just a wife and mother whose employment is creating a home.

Sincerely,
D.B., Scituate

Dear D.B.,

Thank you so much for your comment; it's just the one I had hoped someone would write.

There's no doubt the housewife is receiving a low profile as the spotlight turns to the woman who works outside the home. Sociologists go even further and warn us that she may even become an extinct breed. Moreover, the family unit, they say, is being weakened as more and more women leave their homes to supplement family income.

For social and economic reasons, the American woman is currently adjusting to a change in image and life-style. Because so many women have chosen to join the labor force, those who remain in the home are beginning to feel they are separate from the mainstream.

It doesn't seem necessary to say that a woman's work in the home is important but perhaps it should be reiterated to remind us of her powerful influence in society. Her work goals are vital to society because they are the framework upon which human beings are made. Her ultimate goal — to raise happy, well-adjusted, fine human beings, is the most noble in the world.

Let's also remember that many women working outside the home manage to keep those same goals and still maintain a job outside the home.

Who Names Wallpaper?

By Nancy Young

Listen, Nina, you've really done a fine job on this series; lots of research and thought, and as a working woman I appreciate your efforts. BUT . . . these days, it's not so unusual to find female executives, women running their own companies, mothers turning talents into occupations . . . I just wish you could do a little investigating into an area that I have always found particularly fascinating, especially since I personally know of no one holding these jobs . . . yet, someone has to do it.

What I want to know is: who are the name makers? I mean, who is the person who sits in a tiny cubicle somewhere sorting through swatches of wallpaper and deciding to call a particular pattern "Pollyanna" or "Culinary Carnival"? Why is my nailpolish known as Bukuba Copper Frost rather than Shimmering Sahara Sands? Who pored through a collection of "What to Name Baby" books and christened my new shoes "Coleen"?

This may sound unexciting to you, yet imagine the power wielded by a person who can change the consumer's feelings about a product by simply giving it an appealing (or outrageous) name. I imagine an army of highly literate females, who keep a copy of Roget's Thesaurus tucked under their pillows, masquerading as nurses and executive secretaries because they don't want to admit that they name wallpaper. At least, no one has ever admitted it to me. Of course, I've never participated in a TV rating survey, or had my shirt ripped in two at the laundromat either.

And while I'm thinking about it . . . if you do come across any of these creative gals, maybe you could follow up by checking out just who it really is who hand paints all that "handpainted" china . . . and who puts pins in the packaged puritan shirts . . .

Fisher Offers Secretarial Courses

Starting Jan. 14, the Duxbury Campus of Fisher Junior College will offer a Secretarial Science Certificate program on Mondays and Wednesdays from 9 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. This will enable a student to receive a Secretarial Science Certificate in just 10 months attending days. English and typing will be the first two courses offered in this program.

More and more women are returning to work each year, and Fisher Junior College will be meeting the needs of these women with this day program. They will be able to improve their skills or learn new skills to either enter the job market for the first time, or go back to work after many years of being a housewife and mother. Our day classes will allow women with children in school the opportunity to take courses at a convenient time.

The Duxbury Campus of Fisher Junior College has been offering Business Management and Secretarial Science courses in the evenings since 1978. Director David Rix is pleased with the support that the citizens of the Duxbury area have given to this program, and states, "that Fisher Junior College will continue to offer a sound education to its students."

For further information contact Rix at 585-2184.

Must Report Dog, Cat Injuries

Any driver whose vehicle strikes a dog or cat must now report it to either the owner or the local police, under penalty of a fine up to $50, according to Registrar Richard E. McLaughlin.

The new law states the operator of a motor vehicle that strikes and injures or kills either a dog or cat must report the accident to the owner or custodian of the dog or cat or to the police in the city or town where the accident happened.

You Deserve A Break Today...From Commercials

By Nina Belsan

VIDEO: A family is picnicking in a meadow. The birds are chirping; all's right with the world. Dad lights the barbecue while Mother lays out the lunch. She's a little upset because she's just tried loping toward Dad in slow motion. She had thought to trail her tumbling tresses into his smiling face as she leapt gazelle-like at her target. Unfortunately, her Breathing Girdle suffered a respiratory malfunction in mid-air, causing a scene not unlike the Goodyear blimp in the thores of deflation. She calls to the kids who are frolicking in a patch of poison ivy.

AUDI: Mom: "Lunch is on. It's fully-nutritious and has 28% fewer calories. Come on, try it, you'll like it."

Mikey, whose huge appetite matches his face, finishes his lunch with: "I can't believe I ate the whole thing."

Mom: "Lucky I remembered to bring lots of plop, plop-fizz, fizz."

Eight minutes of every television hour we watch are devoted to mini-films we call commercials. If about average, we watch approximately four hours a day. During that time, 32 commercial announcements will cross our screens to tantalize, hypnotize and if possible, freeze us to the spot.

Although we may care to discount 80% of what we see, we will, however, absorb exactly what the message intended. Whether or not we like the commercial has nothing to do with the fact that it successfully influences us. Involuntarily, our brains ingest its essence and become repositories of video-electronic suggestion that will some day reproduce to trigger a desire to buy.

With the constant repetition of the commercial's audio-visual inducements, we cannot help but recall its content. How many times have we hummed a few bars of the MacDonald jingle without realizing it. Pavlov might have called this phenomenon "conditioned brain reflex"; sponsors call it a bonanza at the cash register.

The hummable slogan "You deserve a break today" is a sure-fire register ringer. The fact that a quarter-pounder is not the only way we can get a break never enters our minds. What does impress us is the association of something good for us with a place called MacDonald's. The snappy, toe-tapping quality of the commercial lulls us into a salubrious state that makes us smile at the MacDonald dancers who diligently sweep the crumbs of 34,000,000,000 Big Macs from the floor and execute the time step at the same time. And for one minute, we'd do anything for just one.

Commercials that treat us to a song and dance are inherently successful because they contain a universally appealing ingredient — a chorus line of enthusiastic singers and dancers. (Ten elephants in a line, kicking simultaneously, can sell anything.)

Choreographed commercials are generally well received by the audience because they portray the fantasy side of life that temporarily blocks out the more realistic version which is really no fun at all.

What a commercial blocks in is the total acceptance of its product, whatever its claim or credibility. Claims should be the meat of the commercial but they are seldom fed to us without dressing to mask their content. Most of them are served with red-herring sauces that amply disguise them. And it is the sauce or secondary claim, not the real claim, that is given importance.

For example, the unrelated claim that "hippos have more fun" is the one remembered, while the actual claim (that the mud hippos use to achieve this happy state is a good product) takes second place. Few commercials photograph claims very clearly. Instead they shoot around them by means of hazy implications and close encounters with the truth. It would seem that by barely brushing the truth, the resultant statement drawn from the encounter, is itself the truth.

The most flagrant method commercials employ to get over and around the truth is the use and misuse of certain words that shade the product's claim. Words like "help" for instance, qualify a claim in a way that is at the same time vague and positive. "Prevents tooth decay" is entirely different from "Helps prevent tooth decay." "Helps clean dirt and grime" sounds convincing but it's not the same as "Cleans dirt and grime."

"Virtually stain-proof" no longer means "potentially" stain-proof but "absolutely" stain-proof. "Better," the comparative degree of the word "good" is frequently used in the superlative sense: "This product is better for all your needs."

The electronic huckster, peddling its wares living room to living room, can easily be criticized for its obscure and

Long Price, Short Supply

It Is Expensive To Conspire By The Fire

By Laura Griffin

Wood's something of a nasty subject in these parts. Not that the grubs, the worms, the termites are yet a bother but the supply of seasoned wood is short. And it's bound to get shorter.

Within easy memory of some, a cord of wood was offered at $35 and that could be haggled. Those with longer memory recall seven dollar cords. Of course, that's way back then . . . twenty year memories.

Wood through this summer sold for $60 to $90 a cord. If you're still buying your winter's supply, figure on $100 or $135, probably for green wood.

There's no mystery to the problem of supply. Those black, squat and ugly wood stoves are becoming as popular as the TV. In these towns, hundreds of permits were issued in recent years for the installation of wood-burners, billed as a fuel and budget-saver.

As long as you're on the downside of $145 a cord, you break even with oil. At least that's what wood-stove literature claims, according to Scituate's Mark Trask. Trask, a wood-cutter and Cohasset fireman, finds current prices border on incredible.

There are natural problems with the wood stove:

—Ashes have to be dumped once a week ("Haven't got to that," reports one enthusiast).

—The chimney has to be cleaned three times a season, more if you're on green wood ($45 for a chimney sweep or do it yourself).

—Storage must be secure and handy, close enough for an armful but enough of a distance so the grubs don't track in.

Some problems, though, can be measured in inches. Mrs. Mary Long, a nurse at Cohasset Manor, sees her problem as a matter of an inch. Her wood supply is stocked, cut and neatly piled by son and husband. There's enough for a iong winter piled by shed and garage but her logs are angled at fifteen inches and her stove takes a fourteen inch log.

Not too many years back, Mrs. Long dumped stacks of wood her husband brought home for the brick fireplace. "They were white logs and shavings were gathering underneath. We threw it out."

"Today I worry about being warm," Mrs. Long told the Mariner.

About a dozen years ago, Mrs. Long recalled wood-sellers, door to door, offered a cord delivered for $35.

"Now it's going up and up." She is shocked that supermarkets are charging $1.99 for one dinky little bundle that wouldn't do a night's camping."

Some people will pay top dollar; others won't. Still others find it unnatural to pay anything for wood. You trade it, clear it, cut it or maybe even steal it. You just don't buy wood.

—In Norwell, the disappearance of a fallen tree caused something of a tempest as reported by Bucky Yardume. Selectmen also considered the fact that the town is disposing of about 100 trees a year. At today's prices, that's $10,000 worth of wood.

—Cohasset police Sgt. John Rhodes acknowledged that snatches from homeowner's wood piles are periodic but a greater problem are persons with chain saws attempting to clear other people's wood-lots, without permission.

"They can be arrested on the spot," Sgt. Rhodes stated.

—Similar reports are made in Marshfield but police Sgt. Richard Brightman said people are very conscious of "wood-pirates." He traces the awareness to a "phantom woodcutter" reported on conservation lands.

At the first whine of a chain saw, residents call the police, Sgt. Brightman said.

Wood rustling aside, even legitimate free wood caused enough hassles this year. At Wompatuck State Forest which touches Scituate, Cohasset and Norwell, the free Cut-A-Cord program operated for ten weeks.

At Wompatuck, the lines were often as tense as at your neighborhood Mobil. Tempers and tension erupted into fury once when lines were formed at different spots and there were questions of who was first.

The "Cut-A-Cord" season wound up last week, none too soon for some State Forest employees. This was the sixth season during which ten permits were issued each Friday, Saturday and Sunday for persons to cut up to a cord if they could from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Each weekend candidates for the program began lining up at 4:30 the afternoon before they planned to cut a cord. They slept in cars, trucks, and wagons until 8 a.m. when the first lists were made for permits.

The original idea of the Cut-A-Cord program, to supplement home fires, has been somewhat detoured by the shortage of oil and the popularity of wood-burning, according to the Forest's Senior Supervisor John Hart.

Homeowners need five to seven cords a winter to heat a house and that's simply not available through the state forests, Hart noted.

"There's definitely limits to what can be harvested," Hart said. Even the land that was cut this season at Wompatuck was marginal. Other areas that could be culled or thinned are not accessible.

"The accessible areas are becoming very very scarce," according to Mrs. Frances Quigley, a junior clerk at Wompatuck.

The whole program may be cut back or possibly roads could be paved into less accessible areas, according to Thomas Quink, Forest Product Marketing and Utilization Forester for the state.

The participants in the program have changed over the years since 1974 Hart said. In the first years, cutting wood was often a family outing. The mother might be putting out a picnic while the kids lugged and the father cut.

Today, he rarely sees kids or a picnic. Wood-cutting is a serious operation.

At Wompatuck the program began in 1974 with 200 permits; high year was 1977 with 1000 permits and this year 200 permits were issued. Next year is a question.

There are dangers when the wood supply is tight. Mark Trask of Scituate is a firefighter for Cohasset and a professional wood-splitter in his spare time. He began cutting wood last Spring and charged $60 a cord for wood he sold.

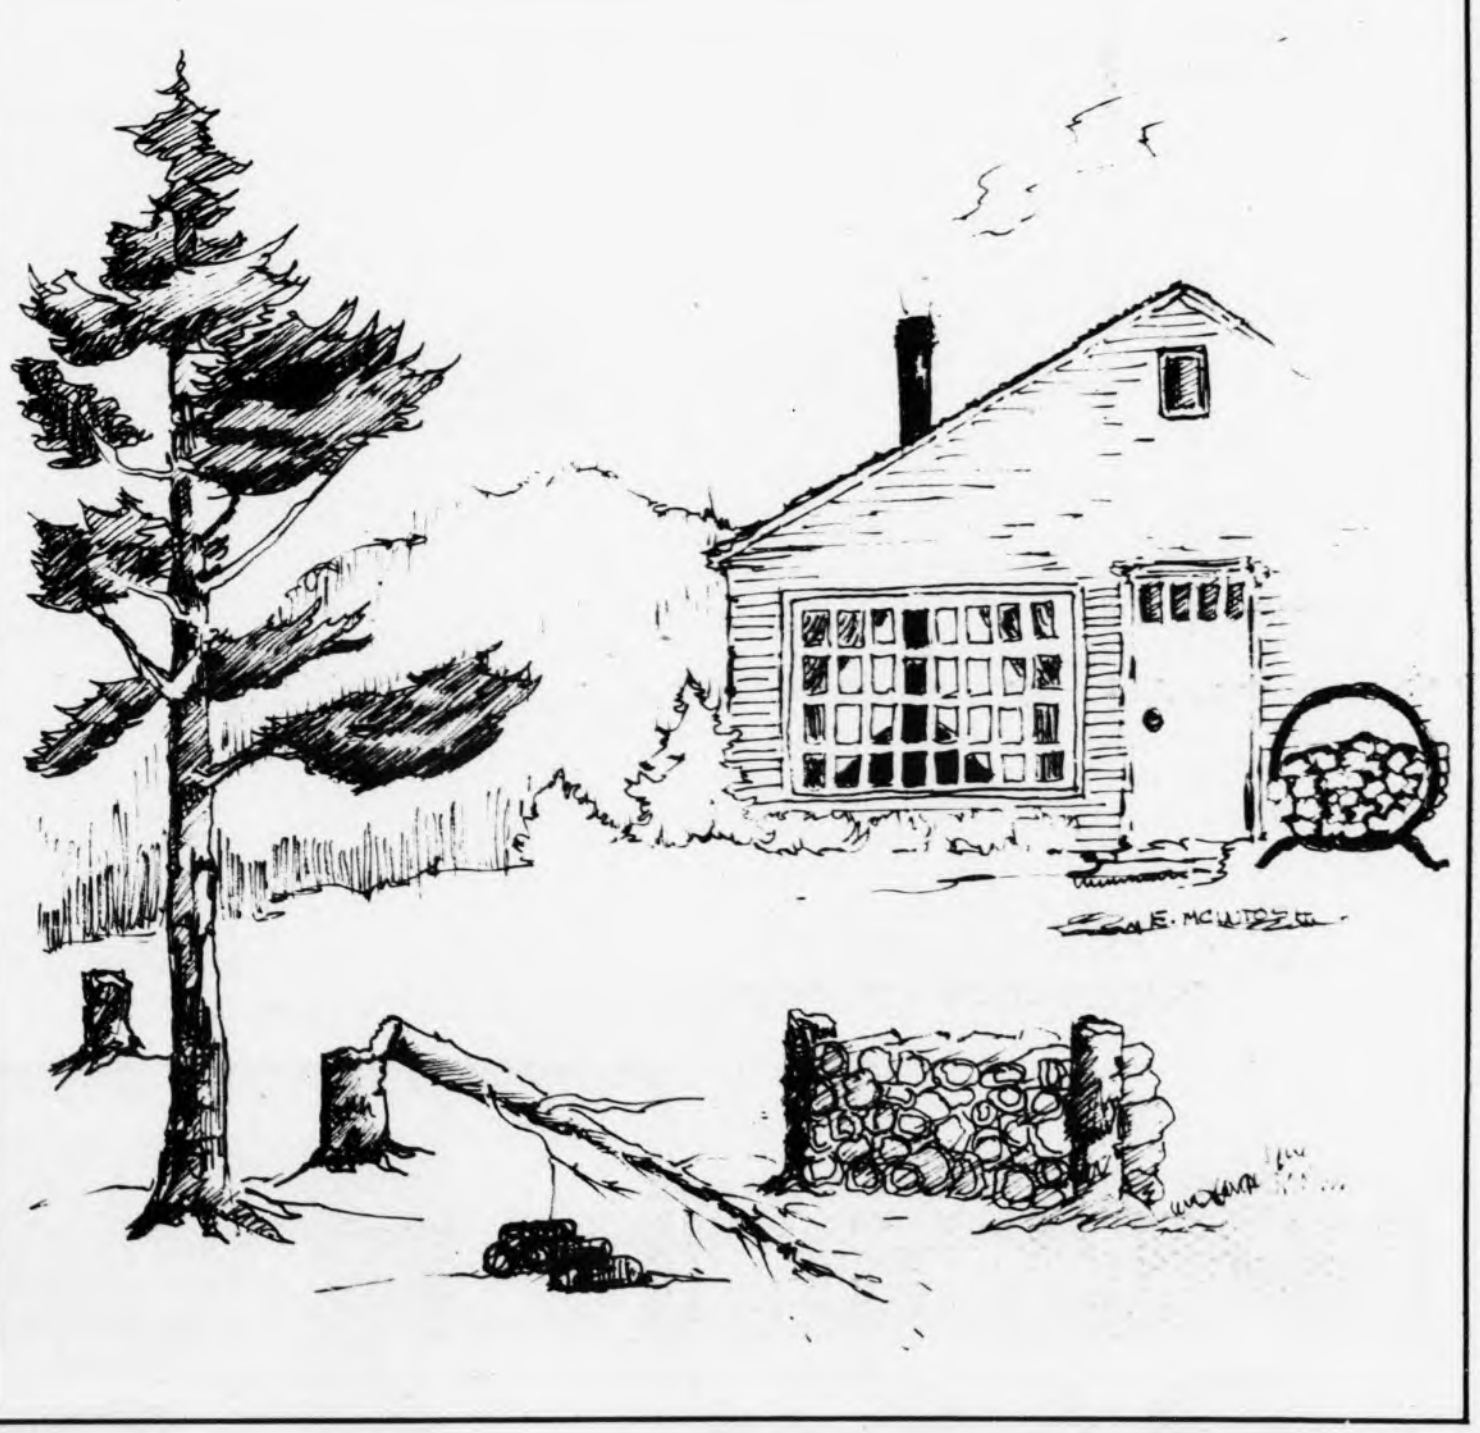
Trask said dozens of persons have called him for wood which he doesn't have. Others have hired him to split wood. Then their supply has been cancelled or has not arrived.

Trask's $60 a cord is almost half the going price, "I'm cutting wood for a man now, green wood," that Trask expects will be sold for $135 a cord.

Green wood, Trask pointed out, is a special problem. The homeowner could be "creating a hazard." Well-read and knowledgeable about wood and wood-burning, Trask referred to a Spring issue of Blare and Ketcham's Country Journal which itemized the dangers.

The two major enemies of wood-burning are soot and creosote. The latter is a tar-like liquid formed by unburned gases rising from the wood.

"Creosote formation is much higher in green wood." The build-up in the chimney is quicker and the chimney must be cleaned more often.



Originally, Trask cut wood and charged by the cord. No more. He's cut a cord in as short a period as 45 minutes but another time he spent 3½ hours chopping up a cherry tree. Now he charges $15 a hour.

Asked if that customer's cherry tree might have been used for furniture or cabinets, Trask discussed another problem in the current wood-craze.

"I'd be willing to bet that a lot of wood being burned would be good furniture wood," he answered.

Trask insisted he is not an expert but he did at one time work in a furniture manufacturing company. He appreciated good wood and its possibilities.

(turn to A6)

It Is Expensive To Conspire By The Fire

(cont. from A5)

Recently Trask came across a large wide tree which he considered too good for burning. He gave it to a friend for sculpture.

Unfortunately, that's the exception not the rule and he's sure "a lot of good wood is going up in smoke."

The fact that demand is heavy and supplies expensive point to future scarcity in these parts.

"It's rather obvious," Trask said. "More people per acre that forestry" can supply. As the demand increases, "wood will have to be supplied from Maine, New Hampshire and Canada."

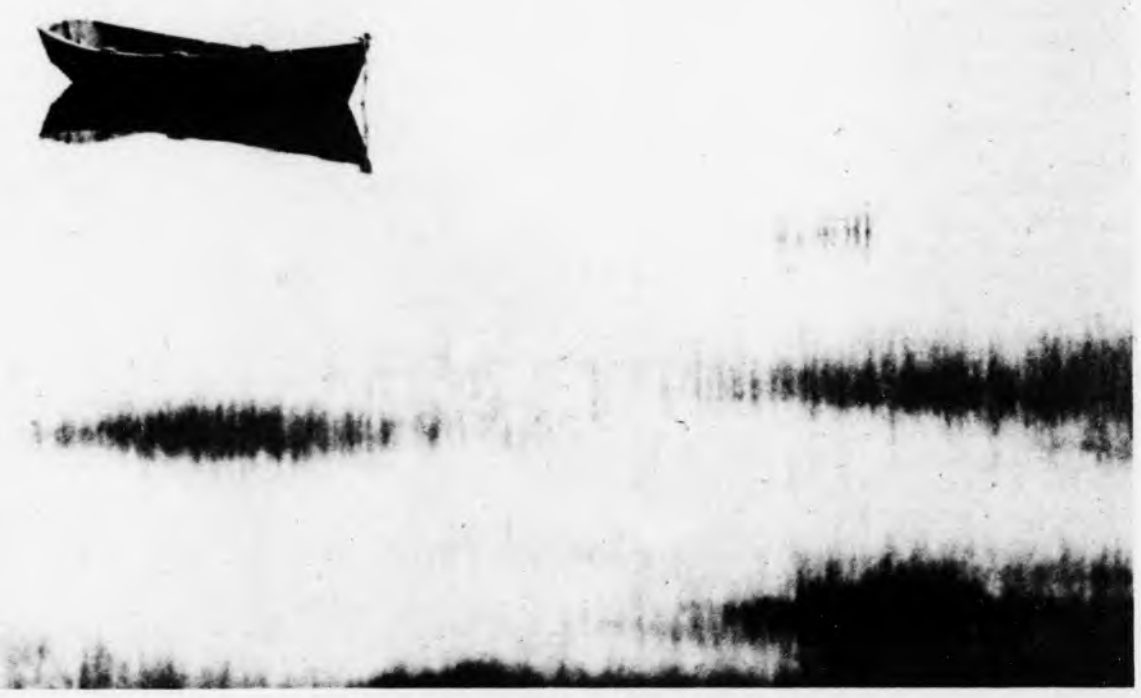
That was the same solution Norwell resident John McVickers suggested for persons pinched for wood now or unwilling to pay the highwayman's price.

McVickers himself is stocked with sufficient wood for his house. Last year, he used about 44 gallons of oil. He saves principally because his home is thoroughly insulated.

He did suggest that friends can buy wood in quantity from New Hampshire, ordered by 20 or 40 cords at a time. The cooperative could then split the price, have it delivered and enjoy the savings. The price, McVickers explained, would still be considerably lower than the local price.

Others suggested the towns review their conservation holdings for thinning and clearing. One resident suggested Cohasset's Whitney Woods would be a good place to start.

There is also that final solution used by a Mariner advertiser who placed an ad for her two year old wood burning stove, after the wood on her own property was depleted.



She bought a new stove and will be using coal this winter.

Wood Fires The Rage But...

Here's How To Avoid Chimney Blaze

With the rush to switch to wood heating in stoves and fireplaces, the stage is being set for unwanted fires — in the chimney.

In 1977, there were over 40,000 such fires causing about $23 million in damage.

Accordingly, Black Magic Chimney Sweeps, Inc. of Stowe, Vt. has published a 12-page Homeowners Guide to chimney safety and maintenance available for $1 to cover postage and handling from Black Magic Chimney Sweeps, Box 997, Dept. HG3, Stowe, Vt. 05672.

The booklet explains and demonstrates why chimneys should be cleaned, how to inspect the chimney and flue, how to clean it, how to check wood stove installation for safety and how to recognize early signs of a chimney fire as well as a checklist of safety steps in the event of such a fire.

Creosote is the chimney culprit. Burning wood creates it. Airtight, slow burning stoves actually build up creosote faster as do soft woods and roaring fires. Backdrafting and smoking indicates creosote buildup. Stovepipes also radiate less heat since creosote is an insulator. If the inside of your chimney has 1/4 inch or more creosote, it needs cleaning.

Creosote buildup can't be prevented but can be reduced. Keeping stack temperatures up reduces condensation, lowering smoke density by allowing more air flow into the stove and adding smaller amounts of wood more often helps. Water content of wood is related to creosote buildup. Dry wood, while yielding most heat, also yields more creosote. The more smoke that stays in a system, the more buildup.

Chimney cleaning can be a do-it-yourself job if you don't mind getting dirty and have the right tools. There are, however, professional sweep services in the area also. Tools needed are steel wire flue brush to fit the flue (a close fit is important). Brushes are made to fit most flues. Measure the inside diameter or dimensions of the flue. Enough feet of flexible extension rods or rope is needed for the height of the chimney. If using rope, a heavy weight also is needed. So is a metal shovel and bucket for removing ashes and drop cloth or old sheet, plus flashlight, gloves, whisk broom and dust pan, putting knife or hand scraper. An industrial vacuum cleaner may be used to take up soot as it drops. Home vacs can clog and be damaged.

Stovepipe sections should be numbered as disassembled, scratching all joints for easy rematching. Brush soot and creosote off. Check for cracks, rust or damage. Replace defective sections.

Most chimneys can be cleaned from inside, bottom up with the right brush and extension rods. Seal the fireplace opening to keep soot from spilling onto floors. Cut slit in sealing sheet for brush handles. When cleaning stove chimney, a paper bag can be used in place of sheet.

If cleaning from the roof, use a brush or rope and weight. A stuck brush is hard to retrieve. Don't let weight swing against chimney or broken tile may result. Clean the inside of fireplace damper and smoke shelf with hand wire brush. Clean out debris.

To inspect a wood stove installation for safety, check for clearance from anything that can burn. Stove pipes must be three times the pipe diameter from combustibles so a six inch pipe should be 18 inches from combustibles. When piercing interior walls there should be space for air circulation and the propert size insulated thimble should be installed.

Stove should not be closer than three inches from walls containing wood and placed on a non-combustible floor protector of 1/4 inch asbestos millboard covered with sheet metal extending 18 inches in front of loading door. Ask your local fire department of building department to check the installation.

Clean out T in chimney will simplify cleaning and installation. Check the chimney for cracks and loose mortar. Check for a rusted stovepipe which can let sparks and hot creosote escape. Stovepipes should be screwed with three sheet metal screws at each joint or fire could blow them apart.

If the stovepipe passes through a wall, ceiling, floor or roof, check for scorching which means the pipe hasn't been installed with proper clearance.

Test damper functions to be sure it won't close or open accidentally.

The final check is to place wet towel over chimney top starting small fire to find smoke escaping through the chimney wall. But have someone on the roof ready to remove the towel if too much smoke leaks into house.

To recognize a chimney fire watch for:

— Crackling noise in chimney or stovepipe.

— Sucking sound of air drawn into stove or chimney increasing to a roar.

— Stove pipe shaking or glowing red hot.

— Sparks and flames shooting from top of chimney or stovepipe.

In case of a chimney fire:

— Gather all occupants of building to get out.

— Call the Fire Dept.

— Gather all occupants of building to get out.

— Cut off air to fire. With wood stove, close all drafts and dampers. If in the fireplace, cover openings with rigid, non-combustible material. Do not close damper or smoke will enter room.

— Use a fire extinguisher.

— Do not pour or spray water directly into chimney or it may break tiles.

— Continue to check the chimney outer surfaces and inner walls for excessive heat even if you think the fire is out.

— Check to see if sparks or embers blown out top are igniting roof or brush.

— When the fire is out, a sweep chimney and check for damage.

Folk Concert

Friday Eve

In Kingston

Friday Nov. 30 the South Shore Folk Music Club is presenting in concert Mason Daring and Jeanniei Stahl.

Daring and Stahl are from Marbelhead, Mass. and have been praised by Boston area critics as a "double pleasure" and "in the rank of national folk performers."

Their music consists of original tunes to show tunes of the thirty and forties.

The concert starts at 8 p.m. at the Beal House, Rte. 106, Main St., Kingston.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

It's their anniversary, but we get the gift; a labor of love in the guise of a cookbook called "Gourmet Decorators Guild...gives you their best."

The Gourmet Decorators' Guild of the Scituate Arts Association has assembled an impressive collection of recipes tested and enjoyed in their workshops over the past 15 years.

Perhaps the cheery red and white plastic cover designed by Val Baker has already caught your eye since the book went on sale. Timed for Christmas giving, the 104 page book is on display at the Scituate Library and is yours for $4 and a call to any Guild member or by calling 545-5725 or 545-3141.

In addition to some choice recipes there are pages of tips worth remembering for the cook, the carver, the hostess and those looking for ideas for holiday gifts. In the latter section, you'll find this delightful.

CHRISTMAS JAM

1 [20 oz.] can crushed pineapple
1 pkg. frozen sliced strawberries in syrup, thawed
1/4 c. grated orange peel
2 T grated lemon peel
4 1/2 c. sugar
1 [6 oz.] bottle fruit pectin

Combine first four ingredients in Dutch oven. Stir in sugar. Heat to boiling, then reduce heat. Simmer uncovered until sugar dissolves, 5 to 7 min. Return to boiling, boil 1 min. Remove from heat. Let stand, stirring occasionally, 5 min. Stir in pectin. Pour into sterilized jars, leaving 1/2" head space in jars. Seal with melted paraffin. Store in cool, dark, dry place.

* * *

There is certainly a variety of unusual recipes culled by committee members: Sharon Achile, Val Baker, Mary Bailey, Jean Barke, Kathy Donahue, Cathie Farrington, Rita McPherson, Beth Spradlin, Marge Spreadbury, Terry Sullivan. Marilyn MacLellan is the chairman of this group who toiled all summer to bring you recipes such as these that you'll seldom find elsewhere: Gin Soup, Iranian Soup, Herring Run Salad, Alsatian Choucroute Chicken and Crab Valentine. Then there's a Frozen Brandy Pie recipe that's worth the price of the book. A Chocolate Log can be made a week ahead of the holiday, frozen and wrapped in foil. Another seasonal treat would be

MOCK OYSTERS

38 Ritz crackers, crushed
2 cans Snow's minced clams
Juice from one can of clams
2 eggs, beaten
1 can cream of mushroom soup, undiluted
1 c. milk

Mix all ingredients together and pour into buttered 2 qt. casserole dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour. This dish is an excellent accompaniment for a turkey dinner.

* * *

Tips worth remembering when baking a cake include one which says that when a cake comes from the oven, it should be placed on a rack for about 5 min. Then the sides should be loosened and the cake turned out on rack to finish cooling. Do not frost until thoroughly cooled. With that in mind, let's all whip up this.

SOUR CREAM POUND CAKE

2 sticks margarine
3 c. sugar
6 eggs
1 [9 oz.] sour cream carton
3 c. flour
1/4 tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. vanilla or almond or lemon extract

Cream margarine and sugar. Add eggs one at a time. Sift flour and soda. Add flour, then sour cream, then vanilla. Grease and flour tube pan. Bake at 325 degrees for 1 hour and 10 min.

sometimes unsubstantial claims. But worse than its sales methods, it possesses another unwelcome element which is a residual of its pervasive power. Unfortunately, while we are being convinced that Product A is better than Product B, we are also incidentally being conditioned to accept the unreal, kinematic world of the commercial as well. However, all housewives do not have "spotless" homes; luxury is not always "affordable"; a husband's main objective in life is not to taste his wife's moist-high cakes and shave 10 times a day.

Pity the child who watches TV commercials exclusively; he could very easily grow into a frustrated adult. When he sets up his own household, he'd find that the utopian aura of the TV spot is not even close to the actual experience of living.

His wife would not awaken curler-free and bright eyed, ready to greet him with a tray of "leading" breakfast brands. She was probably up all night with the three o'clock feeding and an infant whose bladder - stoutly denied the absorbence of Damper Diapers. His car, not necessarily a new model, would start as if it had a guppy in its tank rather than the tiger of TV fame. The coat hanger he uses to hitch his Mighty Muffler to the car's undercarriage is brand new.

When he returned home after a hard day's work, he'd flip on the television in hope of an hour or two of relaxation. But eight minutes of every hour he watched would be devoted to..."a word from your sponsor."

South Shore Residents Want Synchronized Lights

State Sen. Allan R. McKinnon (D-Norfolk and Plymouth) met Tuesday with State Transportation Secretary, Barry Locke, to present petitions with nearly 3,000 signatures from South Shore residents who favor synchronization of traffic signals on Route 3A.

McKinnon said he was pleased with the response to the petition drive, and he thanked all who took the time to gather signatures. The petitions urge synchronization of Route 3A traffic signals, particularly those in the Quincy/Weymouth/Hingham area, the heaviest travelled and most congested section of Route 3A.

School Committee Won't Vote Fire Land

"I think this school committee is going to do itself a great wrong if we give such a negative impression of ignoring any other needs of the town. I feel we should keep that in mind. It's going to be difficult for us to be taken seriously on anything we think is important."

School Committeewoman Diana Kornet

It looks like it's back to the drawing boards for the fire station study committee and its architect.

In a 3-2 vote the school committee voted Monday to not release two acres of town-owned school-controlled land on 3-A for a new six-bay fire station.

Because the land has been designated for school purposes, the town can not use the land for any other purpose unless the school committee votes that it is no longer needed for school purposes.

The town has already held a public hearing on the proposed new site, located behind the Ford Motor Agency. But that hearing was held before it was realized that a school committee vote would be needed.

In a similiar issue in October, the committee voted to not free 10 acres of school lands abutting the Music Circus for a wastewater treatment facility.

School Committeewoman Diana Kornet offered the only motion to the committee Monday, asking that the committee "plan" to release the land if it could be determined that they would be able to maintain a 60-ft. easement on the south side of the property.

But the same three members of the committee who voted to not release school lands for a wastewater plant, held tight. School Committee Chairman Jack Langmaid and Diana Kornet voted in favor of releasing the land with provisions. While Irene Brown, Martha Gjesteby and Patricia Walsh voted no. Frank England was absent from the session.

Members expressed reservations about their not being able to negotiate any provision for school bus access.

Langmaid said is the committee voted to release the land and the board of health found it to be not desirable, for leeching too close to the water treatment plant or for another reason, the town could then use the land for any purpose it chose.

School Supt. Dr. John Maloney told the architect for the new fire station that he could find no vote in the minutes on the issue. "In 1977 we first discussed the possibility of utilizing the two acres for a new station. At that time the committee was not asked to vote to turn the land over." He added that no objections were recorded in 1977 to the proposal.

According to Maloney, the site for the station has been accepted by the conservation commission contingent on board of health approval.

After the negative vote on Monday, Maloney told the architect that he would interpret that vote to mean that the study committee should probably be seeking another site.

The architect said there are presently no other site alternatives.

Master Finds Zoning Violations

Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson said this week a master's report on Magee Sales & Services located on Beechwood Street backs up the town's charges that owner Chester Magee has violated the town's zoning by-law permitting a home occupation in several respects.

Although Henderson said he is confident Norfolk Superior Court will back up the findings, Magee said Tuesday his attorney is considering an appeal of the master's findings at this time.

Magee added that he feels he can present positive proof to the court which will show town officials don't understand the zoning by-laws of the town. He said if his attorney does not appeal the master's findings, he would in any case welcome a court hearing on the three-year old issue.

He also stated that while the findings indicate that his business is detrimental to the residential character of the neighborhood, "No neighbors are complaining, at present" of the manner in which he is conducting his 13-year old business at that address.

Court master, Malcolm Donahue, found that Magee violated the 1969 zoning by-law permitting a "home occu-

Officials To Meet A.G. Friday

Sewer Commission Chairman William Montuori said Tuesday commissioners, selectmen and town counsel will meet with the Attorney General's office Friday to negotiate some kind of reprieve from the A.G.'s recent suit against the town.

Two weeks ago the A.G.'s office filed a suit against the town in Suffolk Superior Court for its violation of State and Federal permits and the National Clean Waters Act.

Montuori said he hopes the town's recent activity over the waste water treatment plant (it's newly formed citizen's committee to study the site, and the availability of yet another site for possible use) may help to mitigate ultimate findings against the town, should a judge enjoin the town over the A.G.'s charges.

He added he hoped the board of health and the planning board would take some action regarding points set forth in a letter from the commissioners to those two boards pertaining to future planning.

"Action from those two town boards would show a judge that something's being done to keep the problem from

Feola Trial Jan.

Suspended Cohasset Patrolman Randolph A. Feola, Jr., a Hull resident, is scheduled to stand trial Thursday, Jan. 17 in Wareham District Court on several motor vehicle charges and a weapons charge (possession of a knife of illegal length).

Over the past three weeks the judge heard arguments and questioned witnesses for three days before deciding last Friday that the case should be tried.

Feola's attorney, Thomas Hensley of Brockton, asked Wareham District Court Judge Dennis Colari to surpress evidence gathered by Hull Police May 8 following arrest, on the grounds that the arresting officer was not trained at a police academy, Feola had not been given a breathalyzer test, and other alleged irregularities.

Feola, 35, is the son of Cohasset Police Chief Randolph Feola, Sr. He has been on the Cohasset Police Force since 1971. He was suspended from the force by Cohasset Selectmen shortly after a July 21 accident in Hull.

Assistant District Attorney John Rogers will prosecute the case.

CHS seniors wondering what to major in during college years should take note.

The school department has been looking for a reading specialist since last April and has finally discovered a young woman with a Masters in developmental and remedial reading.

Feola Trial Jan.

Suspended Cohasset Patrolman Randolph A. Feola, Jr., a Hull resident, is scheduled to stand trial Thursday, Jan. 17 in Wareham District Court on several motor vehicle charges and a weapons charge (possession of a knife of illegal length).

Over the past three weeks the judge heard arguments and questioned witnesses for three days before deciding last Friday that the case should be tried.

Feola's attorney, Thomas Hensley of Brockton, asked Wareham District Court Judge Dennis Colari to surpress evidence gathered by Hull Police May 8 following arrest, on the grounds that the arresting officer was not trained at a police academy, Feola had not been given a breathalyzer test, and other alleged irregularities.

Feola, 35, is the son of Cohasset Police Chief Randolph Feola, Sr. He has been on the Cohasset Police Force since 1971. He was suspended from the force by Cohasset Selectmen shortly after a July 21 accident in Hull.

Assistant District Attorney John Rogers will prosecute the case.

Magical Xmas Tour Of Castle Hill Dec. 13

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will present a tour of five Cohasset landmark homes reflecting the spirit of Christmas, Dec. 13th, from 10 to 4 p.m. and from 6 to 9 p.m.

Also included in the tour will be the First Parish Meeting House and the Unitarian Parish Church, and as a very special treat this year, the tour will include for the first time, Cohasset's very own authentic Norman Castle, known throughout the area as "Castle Hill."

Arrangements to decorate the Castle were made by garden club member Andrea Merrill, a sales leader at the Jack Conway Company's Cohasset office.

Last spring, when Andy sold the Castle to its present owner, J. Arnold Nickerson, President of the Nickerson Machine Comany, Accord Park, Norwell, she envisioned how magical the fairy tale setting of the Castlew would appear, resplendent with holiday decor, and asked Mr. Nickerson if he would permit the garden club to decorate his home for Christmas.

Mr. Nickerson graciously consented to open his home to the public for this event, and Andy immediately began planning a very special holiday decor for the Castle.

"We plan to bring the natural beauty of the outdoors in," said Andy, "and the committee chosen to decorate the Castle will use only natural materials, such as Holly, Laurel, Rhodendron and Pine to carry this theme through."

The massive wooden double door entrance will be graced by twin wreaths of fragrant Pine, enhanced by enormous bows of red velvet or satin.

The great hall, which features a 10 ft. solid granite fireplace, over which hangs an original oil painting of Charlemange, and the "Minstral Balcony," will provide an excellent background for the decorators to allow their imagination to run free!

The Castle itself, and its forest primeval setting, are enchanting and decorated for Christmas, it is sure to delight those who are fortunate enough to see it.

Tickets for the tour are $6.50 purchased in advance only, and may be obtained by contacting Roella Hobbs at the Community Garden Club of Cohasset.

"That exterior display indicated that the premises were being used for purposed other than residential," Donahue said.

In addition, general findings were that Magee has been and is in violation of the injuction and restraining order of the court, dated Sept. 7, 1976, for the same reasons set forth in the home occupation finding.

Also, Donahue said the defendant is in violation of the by-law by displaying goods which are visible from the lot line; has used advertising signs on the premises; uses signs in the window indicating it is used for a business; and by allowing the above, "The building is detrimental to the residential character of the neighborhood."

☐The Massachusetts Board of Bar Examiners announced the names of those individuals who passed the Bar Examination given in July. Four Cohasset lawyers were among the 1,234 who will all be sworn in on December 19. They are Daniel MacDonald, 74 Lantern Lane, a graduate of New England School of Law; and Ernest M. Stevens.

G. William (Bill) McLaughlin and Janet McLaughlin, the son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. McLaughlin of 348 So. Main St., also passed the exam. Mr. George McLaughlin has a law practice in Boston. Both are Cohasset High School graduates. Bill attended Ohio Wesleyan and New England School of Law, taking two years off inbetween when he worked as a tennis pro in Florida. Janet is a graduate of Tufts University, after which time she spent a year working in her father's law office. She attended Boston University Law School. After going their separate ways through college and law school, the pair were mightly surprised to sit down across the table from one another last July for the two day Bar Exam!

Congratulations to all!

Newcomers' Annual Xmas Party

The Scituate-Cohasset Welcome Wagon Newcomers Club will have its annual Christmas party Sunday, Dec. 9. Invitations have been mailed and all members are welcome. Parties will be staggered this year to allow couples to attend both functions.

The Scituate party will begin at 4 p.m. and the Cohasset affair will begin at 5. Cocktails and hors d'oeuvres will be served at both homes. For any further details call Mary Ann Devine at 545-0140.

Barbara Clain CHA Director

Last week Al Odermatt retired and Barbara Clain from Norwell officially began her duties as executive director of the Cohasset Housing Authority — a part-time salaried job with full-time responsibilities.

Chosen over a field of 30 candidates from the South Shore Area, Barbara has actually been on-the-job for the past three months, learning the ropes from Odermatt during a transition period.

Barbara has the responsibility for the administration of 64 units of elderly housing, and the general supervision of the housing authority's business. She also takes responsibility for tenants' problems if they ask. "I only step in if they want me to."

A graduate of Weymouth High School, Bryant and Stratton Business School, she has attended Glassboro State College and Bridgewater State College taking courses in liberal arts, psychology and accounting.

She is the mother of three children ranging from ages 14-23. "I was out of the work force for 15 years," Barbara said, "And then went back to work in part-time jobs."

She was involved in the RSVP program for a three-month period, and shortly thereafter got involved in elderly volunteer work, and a tutor reading program.

Married to a now retired Master Sergeant in the Marine Corps who is employed as an assistant manager for Stone and Webster, she said "I'm very happy with my job and I enjoy the people a lot."

She's also impressed with the volunteers from the Social Service League, Meals-On-Wheels, and the Shuttle Bus and home-care volunteers.

So far she's run into no big problems with the five-year old apartment complex.

Housing Authority Member Kay Conte said in a recent interview that there are approximately 20 qualified elderly persons who have made applications for housing. She said the authority feels there is a need for more elderly housing in the town, along with middle-income housing, but that the authority hasn't really "gone into that yet."

Parking continues to be a problem at the elderly housing, as too few spaces were planned at the building stage — and ledge surrounding the area maked adding more spaces prohibitive.

One must be 65 years old to apply for housing, unless handicapped. And there are various other rules which limit income and benefits.

Derby Honors

Mr. Thomas J. Waters, Headmaster of Derby Academy, has announced the following honors lists for the first quarter of the school year.

Headmaster's List, First Honors, awarded to those students who have achieved a B-plus or above average of all subjects:

Mary Jane Benson, Mandi L. Bubier, Amery A. Burham, Heather Hawker, Lauren Haynes, Karen D. Pompeo and Susan K. Shockman.

Second honors were awarded to those students who received a B- or above average of all subjects:

Blythe D. Berents, Davenport B. Crocker Jr., Heidi A. Hublitz, Sarah L. Lualdi, and Carleton J. Shockman.

Let The Gods Decide

By Chet Ellis

The local news is a bit thin this week. Only minor items, such as the Attorney General's suit against the town, selection of new police chief, and the prospects of the 1980 CHS basketball team seem potential for a story. Conversely, the international scene is roaring.

Since Friday is Dec. 7, and the major part of the news concerns the problems in Iran, I thought I might write a piece tying together the anniversary of Pearl Harbor and America's argument with the newly potent Persia.

The general story line would have concerned an invasion by Iranian Kamakazie Mullahs on flying carpets arriving over Cohasset (having missed the center of Infidel culture by 22 miles) and sinking the local lobster fleet with exploding caviar bombs before being driven off by the League of Women Voters Vigilante Defense Force.

However, I felt that was a bit far out for the sensibilities of responsible New Englanders, so I spent some time trying to put together another "story-in-the-future" column where we look back at hypothetical events. This effort proved much more sensible.

The tale concerned the eventual formation of Crusades to recapture for Christendom the American Embassy from the Saracens in Teheran. Instead of Saladin, the Sinister Scimitar of the Arab world, opposition this time is headed by Ayatollah Khomeini, the Doktor Doom of modern Persia.

I would have described the bizarre American Legion Auxillary Hatpin Crusade of 1981, the inflation expanding ERA combination shopping spree and Crusade of 1982, and the far out Buddy Hackett look alike contest and Crusade of 1983.

However, after sitting down to write the column, I began to realize that the situation in Iran is not one which can easily be turned into a humorous story. The lives of fifty hostages are in great danger and the prospects seems to get worse each day. Now, much has already been said and written about these events and I don't dare to think that I can add much of significance, but consider this:

The United States has been put into a no win situation by the fanatics of Islam. The president and his advisors are confronted with a difficult, complex, and highly charged emotional problem involving considerable risk.

There are many options. But unless the problem can be resolved soon, peacefully, whichever option is eventually chosen will most assuredly

Better Instincts

Members of the school committee who voted to not release two acres of town-owned school-controlled land for a new fire station this week are probably going to get their share of those nasty darts flying around town. But not from us.

Consider this:

The fire station study committee made no written request for the school committee to release the two acres. Indeed, not one member of that study group, the board of selectmen or any other town official was interested enough to show up to plead the new fire station case Monday night.

The architect for the study committee did show up, and we're sure he's a very able and professional individual.

But the board of health hasn't approved the site anyway.

And as usual — at present there is no other site alternative in all of Cohasset for a new fire station.

It's quite possible that the three land-holding members of the school committee who consistantly vote against giving up school lands for a wastewater treatment plant, a fire station — and already contend with Music Circus traffic in an area which is further congested during summer months with children going to and from the pool, playgrounds — have better instincts and premonitions about future educational and recreational needs than all the dart-throwers combined.

It's an interesting thought.

Mary Had Perfect Attendance!

To the Editor:

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset proved her commitment once again to the voters in her district during the 1979 session of the House of Representatives.

Her persistent attention to the interests of her constituency is proven by the fact that she had a 100 percent attendance record, voting on all bills that were considered in the House this year.

I wish to congratulate Representative Murray for such a fine record of service to her constituents and to you, as a voter, for electing her to speak for you in the Massachusetts Legislature.

Khlees First Xmas

By Faith Bowker

Christmas is a time for giving and the people at the Joseph Osgood will be giving in a special way this season. This year three Cambodian children came to our town and have been working and playing at our school. They have been given a warm and loving welcome from all their many new friends.

As Christmas approaches, many of the parents, teachers, and children of the Osgood School have shown a desire to make this a very special "First" Christmas for the Khlee children.

At a planning meeting it was decided that a friendship tree and holiday banners would be made for the Khlees' home by all the children at Osgood.

Mrs. Carol Zimmerman, a representative of the South Shore Baptist Church in Hingham which sponsored the family and has been helping them in many ways, reported that Mr. Khlee faces a large transportation bill.

The airfare for his family's travel from Thailand to Boston of $1,472 has to be paid as an interest-free loan in three years. It was decided to establish a fund to help erase this debt.

Anyone who wished to contribute may send a check to "Khlee Transportation Fund," c/o Mr. Magner, Cohasset Savings Bank, 13 Elm St., Cohasset. Checks may also be dropped off at the Osgood School, Ripley Road, in care of Faith Bowker.

Another gift of a tape recorder will be given to the family for their entertainment, but also as an aid to the parents' and children's English language training. The first four tapes will include the favorite songs of each class at Osgood.

Anyone wishing to be part of this "gift" may contact the school.

Beginning To Be A Pest

To the Editor:

I know I'm beginning to be a pest, but wait — this letter is complimentary! No "game" goofs (Crypt answers included and no more Story Scramble) last week — good work!

At first I thought you were up to something cagey when I found an upside down "Page 5" in the middle of "Mary Jeannette On Pay Raise," but then I noticed that "Page 5" was not where it was supposed to be on Page 5, and assume it got accidentially stuck in the middle of "what happened last month will never happen again."

I have a new column idea for you. Refer to page A-9: "Wanted — Roommate, 32, would like to."

Sincerely,
WDRCO ONNTAU

FIRST OF FOUR

The first of four Harbor study workshops was held last week at the municipal building. Approximately 40 persons attended and offered suggestions on what priorities the town should have in planning for the future.

The Cohasset Harbor Study Committee is utilizing a grant from the Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management Program to carry out the study. The town's consulting firm is Anderson-Nichols of Boston.

Citizens cited the harbor's five most pressing problems as being too few moorings, the Cohasset/Scituate boundry problem, parking, and dock space, and maintenance of the scale of the harbor, should expansion occur.

Fishermen, who were well-represented at the hearing, expressed the need for more docking space, a new breakwater, dredging, and the need for amenities for boaters as well as more security.

FUEL ASSISTANCE

Applications for fuel assistance will be available at the selectmen's office Wednesday, Dec. 12.

MBTA OPENING

Selectmen are seeking an individual to appoint to the MBTA Steering Committee which will study South Shore problems.

DEC. 19, 8 P.M.

The planning board will hold a hearing at 43 Elm Street on Wednesday, Dec. 19 at 8 p.m. on a site plan review requested by Theresa L. Williams for improvements and construction on her property at 134 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

The Newspaper Of Record In The 1880's

Looking Back

By Peter Barnicle

What has "Margaret, the Mother of Criminals" or "The Career of a Man Eating Tiger" to do with life in Cohasset back in the 1880's?

Nothing actually, except that subscribers of the Cohasset Cottager were reading about them. These and many other articles with eye-catching titles, such as a cloak-and-dagger story out of Egypt dealing with the death of the Khedive, filled the pages.

The Cottager was a five-cent weekly "Reader's Digest" packed with articles which the editor thought would titilate his readers. It's easy to imagine a farmer coming in after the cows were milked and the chores completed, turning up the oil lamp, and spending the evening reading the paper. Chances are he could space his reading out over two or three evenings.

Cohasset news was covered in one or two columns leaving the editor with a considerable amount of space to fill and this he did by reprinting material from other publications. More often than not the stories appeared without any attribution.

Letters to the editor were not confined to political issues around town. On occasion a Cohasseter traveling in India or Europe or some place in the United States would send a long letter describing his or her adventures.

One of our townsmen wrote from Denver, Colo., to describe life in that boom-town. He was most enthusiastic about the scenery and the weather, but he did have one gripe. He pointed out that whenever there was a dance the young ladies were on the floor all night — each dance with a different partner. This was because there were four men to every lady. He wound up by wistfully suggesting that marriageable young ladies in Cohasset might be interested in moving west.

The first issue of the newspaper contained a story that "Messrs. Eben D. Jordan and Charles Marsh are about to erect an immense merchantile building at the corner of Kingston, Bedford and Columbia Streets, in Boston."

1882 must have been a good year for what we now know as Jordan Marsh. In August of that year C.E. Milliken of Cohasset, wrote from England to tell about his trip from Boston to Liverpool aboard the Cunarder "Batavia." The trip was pleasant and uneventful, but tucked away down in the letter is a paragraph about 27 Jordan Marsh employees bound for an all-expense tour of Europe, courtesy of their employers. I wonder how long that practice was kept up?

During the spring of 1882 Henry Thoreau and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow died. Each received a lengthy obituary, filled with anecdotes and remembrances of contemporaries. Subsequent issues of the paper carried other stories on the two literary giants.

Temperance was a recurring subject in those days. Cohasset apparently had a local option law which had to be renewed each year at town meeting. With passage of the article permitting the sale of liquor there was also a companion article calling for $200 for enforcement of the law.

The editor also picked up stories from other parts of the country dealing with the evils of drink. On one occasion he completely lost his head and devoted nearly a page to a paper by Rev. P.A. McKenna of Hudson, read at the National Catholic Temperance Association convention in St. Paul, Minn.

The Rev. McKenna touched all bases. He started off by calling for tariff reform and blasted Congress for "scandalous appropriations." Then he took off on a plan for the division of wealth and, if I'm reading it right, blamed the holders of great fortunes with causing the poverty which led to drink.

It was only after he had covered these problems at great length that he got to the crux of the matter — liquor. And, to put it briefly, he was 'agin it.'

There is no way of telling how factual some of the stories were, but they certainly made exciting reading.

In addition to stories of adventure in far away places the Cottager also gave space to things nearer to home, like "How to Detect Whether a Horse is Sound Winded" and the causes, symptoms and prevention of diptheria.

Oh, about "Margaret the Mother of Criminals." Margaret was a girl born about 1800 in Upper New York State. She had no family and had to beg food and clothing.

According to the story "she became the mother of a long line of criminals and paupers which has cursed the country ever since." The writer says that "records show" that of the 623 descendants "of this unhappy girl" 200 became criminals "and most of the others were idiots, drunkards, lunatics, paupers and prostitutes."

The moral of the story seems to be that if she had had a happy and well provided childhood none of this would have happened.

One of the family must have been a genealogist who kept family records. How else would the writer know about the 623 descendants?

Let The Gods

result in tremendous cost, in life, in prestige, and in human suffering.

Since the Iranians have chosen to give their action a religious theme, I propose that the way to deal with the problem is to move the responsibility for a solution up to the next level of authority.

That is to say, if Gods exist in any form, and I submit that they do in many people's minds and souls, then let Allah get together with Jehovah and work it out!

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

Three Directors - Three One-Act Plays

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Last weekend two senior women and one junior woman directed and produced three one-act plays with the casts comprised, respectively, of all frosh, all sophs and all juniors.

Lately we've been accused of always telling you about something great you missed. In this case we were told to not even give a hint of their plans in the Mariner because the women said they were doing the shows more for the experience than for applause. So blame them.

However, they did consent to be interviewed. All three women — Jr. Leslie Collins and Seniors Meri Fink and Disa Pratt — were chosen on a vote by the classes to direct the plays. Drama Coach Ron Emmons didn't get involved at all. He said the plays were to be their thing.

This is a sort of review of three talented gals, who are admitted theater-freaks, and who have managed to get involved in any play whatever it is, just because they love the roar of the greasepaint, the smell of the crowd.

WHO AM I?

Leslie Collins was chosen by the junior class to direct Who Am I This Time? She cast the play with Carolyn Wampole, Pam Johnson, Donna Chisholm, Anne Clinton and Brenda Birmann. Also Ted Durant, Mike Glasfeld and Steve Winn.

If you're in the know about juniors, you'll recognize representatives from the band, cross-country, the school newspaper, soccer and basketball teams, the sailing club, track and chorus in that casting.

Leslie Collins is the woman behind-the-scenes in many a high school production. "I do a little bit of everything — lights, scenery, but not design. I also do a lot of watching."

Interested in entering the health field, she plans to go to college after graduation in 1981 and major in occupational therapy or a physical therapy field.

In past years she has done volunteer work at Sunrise Camp in New Hamsphire, which is for handicapped campers.

Leslie's play was about a drama group putting on a play — a play within a play. "The two main characters are dull people until they get on stage in the play's play."

DATE

Disa Pratt opted to produce Date for the sophs. Date is a comedy about an old lady who lives in a nursing home — when she goes home to her family they totally reject her.

Fifteen sophs tried out for the four parts in the cast, with Kathy Hoy, Cathy Collins, Mike Ellis and Mizzy Barcumb getting the director's nod.

Disa said she's headed for college after graduation, but that she's still undecided about what her major might be. But whatever it is, acting will probably be an important part of her college days.

"I've always been cast (in high school) as either a snob or a flake." Although in Godspell (her frosh year) she played Ruth — "A polite spirit."

Asked how her cast responded to her, Disa said: "They listen. I have definite ideas about how the play should look. When I get mad I yell in a deep tone."

Disa works for Dr. Ed Seadale when she's not hanging around the high school auditorium.

CHILDREN'S STORY

Meri Fink "fiddles around with guitar, ballet, piano, chorus" and volunteers as a tutor at Joseph Osgood School two days a week where her mother is a teacher. She also works for a local woman.

Meri directed the frosh's TheChildren'sStory which took place after the third world war — "And America lost. It's a third grade room and the kids are back in school with a Communist teacher. She has them destroy the flag and starts brainwashing them. I had to rewrite the script for an entire cast of girls" — which was as follows:

Maureen Buckley, Emily Koch, Amber Clapp, Amy Urmson, Teri Finegan, Susan Douglas, Joanne Fone and Laurie Steele.

Of the three women, Meri wants to be an actress definitely and has always known that she wanted to be. She's in the high school alternative program which means she gets to go into Boston Fridays where she works with a choreographer and Metro Pathways, and takes other courses CHS can't offer.

In Godspell she was a clown — "I was playing myself. Every play since Godspell I've been a dog, a blithe spirit, Lucy (Charlie Brown) — but then I got to play a girl in Joan of Arc.

Meri's going to college but she's not sure where. "I've got a bunch of schools in mind, but I haven't written yet."

☐Candle and fire light transposed the Lothrop House into an atmosphere of an earlier century on Sunday during the Candlelight Christmas party.

Sponsored by the Cohasset Village and Harbor Association, the party was both an inaugural for the Historical Society's new headquarters and restoration project, as well as a fund-raiser for continuing renovations of the 1823 Federal building.

The three downstairs rooms, which are now restored and need only wallpaper and paint, were decorated with wreaths, swags, and other Christmas decorations.

Punch, wine, and hors d'oeuvres were served to the many guests among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lothrop Park of Weymouth.

Mr. Park is the great, great, great grandson of Caleb Lothrop who built the house.

The back room, which was originally the kitchen, is being furnished by Mrs. Mary Hagerty in memory of her late husband, Francis W. Hagerty.

PIT STOP — Pumping up balloons at helium tank are a couple of Fair goers who find it lots easier than using lung power. [Jan Callahan photo]

☐Christopher Abruzzese recently received one of 60 varsity letters awarded to Bowdoin College football players in Brunswick, Maine.

☐From Jack Conway — Mary Pecce, a sales associate with the Conway firm, recently completed a course held at the Fall 1979 Realtor's Institute in Danvers.

☐Gerry MacLean of Cohasset has earned membership in the Million Dollar sales group of the Conway Company. She is the mother of five children: Robert, an electrician; Margie, who works for the Canadian Pacific Railroad Company in Canada; Jack, a senior at CHS; and Katie and Jim, who attend private school in Canada.

The American Image hairdressers at Cushing Plaza very generously donated their services of hair cutting and styling last Friday to 10 Cohasset High School cheerleaders who were chosen to compete at Boston College in the Regional Cheerleaders Tournament on Saturday. The girls were shampooed, clipped, styled, and blown dry by Guy and his staff and entered the competition looking their best.

The 10 participants were chosen from three squads of thirty to represent Cohasset in the competition, in which twenty-two other New England schools participated.

Barbara McCool and Mrs. Joanne Fichtner accompanied the girls to Newton, as they have done all fall to every game and practice, in their capacity as coaches. Barbara says she was a cheerleader "a while back, before splits and cartwheels," and Joanne is a choreographer.

Their involvement with the cheerleaders, however, evolved more from their role as parents who didn't want to see 30 kids unable to cheer because they were without a coach in September.

The cheerleaders who, says McCool, "did a very good and smooth job" at B.C. were: Susie McCool (Captain), Donna Igo, June Robbins, Beth Salvador, Maria Curelli, Kirsten Moore, Joy Ditmar, Caroline Bonnar, Jeannie Smith and Jane Morrisey.

☐Last week we reported that Michael Smith (son of Vito and Kay Conte) was married to Dawn Bonnie, (daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Al Nicolosio of Florida) on Thanksgiving eve, but we've since found out it was also his 25th birthday! Additionally, Dawn Bonnie Conte has a two-and-one-half year old son, Gregory Bonnie.

☐Sorry to hear that Beth (Mrs. Edward) Goff broke her wrist last week while in the line of duty at the Joseph Osgood School. With all the occupational hazards of her job — Activity Aide in the Osgood School and bus driver — it was a surprise to learn that the accident occured in the Supply Room! It must have been a nasty slip and fall to break her wrist bone in two places. We wish her a smooth and speedy recovery (estimated to take 6-8 weeks) and we wish her family luck (Beth says she's already driving them crazy!)

☐Ron Goodwin of South Main Street and founder and president of the Fat City T-Shirts, released this corporate update last week: "Meatballs" McNabb is back on the job at Fat City as Production Manager (where has he been?); J.T. Price landed a big order for navy blue T-shirts; and Ann Pompeo has been named top salesperson at Fat City in the totebag and apron division.

☐Nancy DiGirolamo, daughter of Gino DiGirolamo of 468 King St., is a freshman student at Lasell Jr. College, Newton. Nancy is enrolled in the Art Program at Lasell, the oldest private two-year college for women.

A special gingerbread house presentation and workshop will be given on Tuesday, Dec. 18 from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. at the Cohasset Community Center.

Martha Hurtig will conduct the special session. Enrollment is limited so register early.

☐(An entry from a protegee of mine): "Recently Cohasset Brownie Troop 625 visited the Cohasset Pizza House. We learned that they only use one-half pound of dough for a small pizza and a pound for a large one. The dough is put on a tray and then they put it in the refrigerator to rise. After the dough has risen, they take it out and put it through a special machine that flattens it. They told us that they mix two cheeses — cheddar and mozarella.

☐John Hoagland has been appointed Sales Administrator for the Wm. Underwood Company, Westwood. He was previously a Brands Assistant for the Proctor & Gamble Co.

☐One of our fans reports: "We like the Mariner so much! It's our bathroom paper," i.e., it is perused in the bathroom by all family members, who often make notes to each other about what's good to read!

The 'Czar' At CHS Friday

By Rob Tis

A new wave of Rock n' Roll will hit Cohasset High on Friday night. The band is called Czar and is a foursome of CHS students. This foursome can be compared to the Beatles in that each member is needed, and without one member the band isn't the same. Jon Durant and David Zobel are on guitar, Bill Duffy specializes on the keyboard and Lance Norris thumps the drums. the vocals are handled by everyone but mainly Norris.

Each member of this band has his own individual style. Durant majors in jazz, Norris likes a Rock beat and Zobel comes our way in sort of a country style. Duffy, on the key board is very versatile but prefers classical. These styles blend into a good sound with an emphasis on comedy.

Czar does all of its own music except for an occasional Lynard Skynard tune or a well-played rendition of "I hate Disco." Czar has such credits to its name as "Czar meets Cohasset," and last year's "After Prom Party."

Not only does Czar write a amazingly good brand of music, they have extremely humorous lyrics. Their humor is mainly influenced, as Durant and Zobel put it, by Monty Python. This sports-writer turned music critic urges everyone to meet Czar.

Czar is coming to Cohasset Friday, Dec. 7 (Pearl Harbor Day) at 8 p.m. So let's all make a surprise attack on the CHS auditorium and capture some good music.

Benefit Concert

By Roberta Leary

A benefit Christmas concert for Cambodian relief will be held at 3 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 16 at the First Parish Church, Cohasset.

Featured will be the Broad Cove Chorale and Unicorn Singers of Hingham. The group will sing festive carol arrangements and several selections of 20th Century French music. The audience will also sing traditional carols.

Presented by the First Parish Church, the concert is a chance both to enjoy Christmas music and contribute to the Cambodian relief effort. Residents are urged to become concert patrons by mailing checks for $25 to the church at 23 North Main Street, Cohasset. Patrons receive two concert tickets and may claim a $20 tax deductible contribution. Tickets will be sent by return mail.

Additional tickets for the concert only are available from the church at $3 each.

Since seating is limited, tickets should be purchased immediately. The uniqueness of the event and excellence of the program guarantee a full house.

"Closed Tuesdays"

Cole Parkway 545-9802 Scituate Harbor

Alfred Odermatt Feted At CHA Party Tues.

Alfred Odermatt has retired for the second time, from his position for the past five years as Executive Director of the Cohasset Housing Authority. The first time he retired was in May 1974 when he left his position as Systems Coordinator for the John Hancock Insurance Company to head the Housing Authority, as they embarked on the state-funded housing project for senior citizens, known as Harborview Apartments.

Past and current Directors and friends surprised Al last Tuesday night with a retirement party at 60 Elm St. in the Community Room of the apartment complex.

Mary Jeannette Murray, who was a founding Director appointed twice by Governor Sargent, presented Odermatt with two official citations in recognition of his five years of dedicated service.

One was from the Mass. House of Representatives and the other from Governor King.

Rep. Murray reminisced about the difficult times they shared during the planning and construction years, and also the pride in being "the first Housing Authority to accomplish what we did in five years."

George Benedict, current Chairman of the Board of Housing Authority Directors, presented Odermatt with a wrought iron and tile table, depicting Cohasset scenes, in gratitude "for all the hard work done for the Housing Authority."

Odermatt acknowledged the "headaches during construction," but said the following years had been "wonderful because of the association with the Board. I've had more fun and personal satisfaction in attending monthly meetings, but the most pleasant thing about being Executive Director has been the tenants.

AL ODERMATT

They are a good group."

The compliment of Directors, past and present, have done their job well as demonstrated by the tenant's approval and satisfaction of their new homes.

In summing up his remarks, Odermatt promised that he will "serve all people with needs that need to be served," during his second retirement.

Board members Yoland Baccari, Kay Conte, Pat Barrows, and Lloyd Prescott; the new Executive Director, Barbara Clain of Norwell; Philip Murray; tenant representatives, Amy and Bill Lawson; Con Ericson, Sam Hassan, and Selectman Rocco Laugelle were all on hand for the party.

Obituaries

James Stover

Flags were lowered to half mast on the school grounds Monday, and the school committee stood for a moment of silent tribute at their session, in honor of James Edward Stover, 65, who died Saturday at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth, after a six-week illness.

School Supt. Dr. John Maloney said of the former school custodian, "He served faithfully and well for seven years." Mr. Stover was appointed as a custodian in 1968 and retired in 1976. He also worked part-time at the Red Lion Inn.

A lifelong resident of Cohasset, he was a member of the George H. Mealy Legion Post and a World War II Army veteran.

He leaves a sister, Mary Mathews of California, and several nieces and nephews.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Wednesday in St. Anthony's Church. He will be buried in Woodside Cemetery. Visiting hours were held at the Sparrell Funeral Home.

Brian Waal

Brian M. Waal, two and one-half year old son of Jeffrey C. and Eleanor (White) Waal, formerly of Norwood, died last Tuesday at Children's Hospital, Boston.

He was born in Boston Lying-In Hospital.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by a brother, Erik Waal of Cohasset; his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Waal and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence White, all of Norwood, and a great-grandmother, Mrs. Charles W. Hill of Stoughton.

A Concelebrant Mass was held at St. Anthony's Church last Thursday. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Contributions may be made to the Children's Hospital Medical Center, Cardiac Clinic, Boston.

Mansion Heirs Gospel Singers At Community Church Concert

The Mansion Heirs, a Gospel singing group from East Wareham, will present a weekend of concerts in the Community Church of the Nazarene, Jerusalem Road, North Cohasset.

They will sing on Dec. 7 at 7:30 p.m. with fellowship and singspiration at 7 p.m. They will also sing Saturday, Dec. 8 at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 9 during Sunday school at 10 a.m. and at 11 a.m. worship.

The church is near the Rte. 228 intersection and the Hingham-Hull-Cohasset town line.

The ensemble features southern style music with piano, bass, guitar and drums. Members are from one family: Grace Perry and Tom Perry, oldest and youngest of 12 children; Paul and Ruth (Perry Lombardi; John Perry, Bob Sousa and Faith (Perry) Haraala. The Lombard children, Kristi, Tammy and Brian will also sing, and Debbie Perry, Tom's wife, will sign some of the songs for the deaf.

The Mansion Heirs, who have given concerts throughout New England, recently took all-around honors in a Gospel music festival in Pennsylania. They have cut their second record of old-time Gospel favorites.

Christensen - O'Leary

At a Nuptial Mass celebrated in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset, Miss Maureen Ann O'Leary became the bride of Wallace A. Christensen. An outdoor reception at the O'Leary home followed the wedding.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. O'Leary of Cohasset; the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Christensen of Roslyn Heights, New York.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride was attended by Kathleen O'Leary Donohue, her sister, as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Marianne O'Leary, Elizabeth O'Leary, Anne Grawey of Washington, D.C., Diana Platt of Waltham, and Anne Zapf of New York, N.Y.

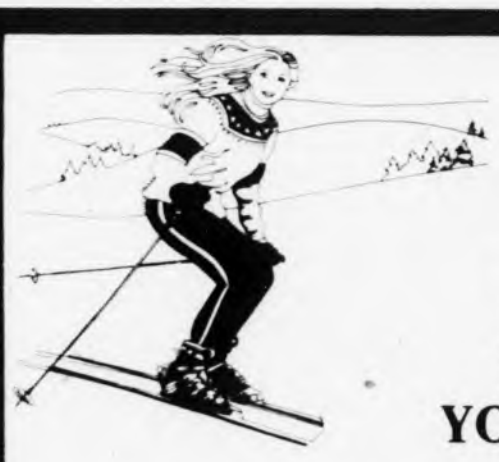
Bruce Christensen of Cleveland, Ohio, was best man for his brother. Ushers were Matthew Botica of Chicago, Ill., Patrick Connoly of Philadelphia, Pa., Philip Marzetti of Atlanta, Ga., Timothy O'Leary of Washington, brother of the bride, and Robert Zapf of New York, N.Y.

The bride is a graduate of Immaculate High School, Manchester, N.H. and Clark University; the bridegroom is a graduate of Chaminade High School, Boston College and Harvard Law School.

After a voyage to the Virgin Islands, the couple will make their home in the Washington, D.C. area.

Short - Taylor

Roberta Lynn Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Mello of Cohasset, was recently married to David Brooks Short, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Short of Cohasset.



Father David Noonan officiated the ceremony at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. A reception followed at Fasano's in Weymouth.

Given in marriage by her step-father, the bride was attended by her sister, Elizabeth Taylor of Boston, as maid of honor.

Bridesmaids were Barbara Taylor, Nancy Roach, Sharon Rhodes and Jill Short, all of Cohasset.

Mark Short, brother of the groom, served as best man. Ushers were William Litchfield of Cohasset, John Taylor of Lakeville, and Colin Francis and Fred Higgins, both of Cohasset.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School and is employed at Target Industries in Cohasset. The groom is a graduate of Parkdale Senior High School in Riverdale, Maryland. He is employed at Spencer Press, Inc. in Hingham.

School Committee Briefs

VOLUNTEER CITIZENS

The school department needs volunteers from the community to serve on a citizens' committee to develop a health education curriculum.

It is hoped that the committee will be able to draft an encompassing kindergarten to Grade 12 program to be considered by the school committee at a March, 1980 meeting.

The committee will have the authorization to spend up to $6,000 to hire staff to implement and assist in the development of the program.

Interested citizens should contact Dr. John Maloney, superintendent of schools, 383-6111.

RESIGNATION

The school committee accepted with regret the resignation of Natalie Winsor, Title I aide, at Deer Hill School. In a subsequent vote they voted to replace Ms. Winsor with Theresa Saccone.

COACHING POSITIONS

The following appointments were made to CHS coaching staffs: Sandra Lynn Hayes, gymnastics; Charles Davis, Grade 8 boys' basketball; and Kathryn Fox, girls' JV basketball. All will receive $800 for the season.

CAFETERIA WORKERS

Mildred Salyards, Roseann Dooley, Nancy Polito and Betty Ripley, were appointed to the cafeteria staff. None of these appointments are new. Some of the women have had an increase in hours, some have worked on the staff from the beginning of the school year.

SCHOOL LUNCH INCREASE

Although surrounding towns have been raising the prices for school lunches, Dr. John Maloney, superintendent of schools, said he will recommend to the committee at its Dec. 17 session that school lunches not be increased until the Sept. 1980 school year. The increase he will propose will be from 40 cents to 50 cents.

Maloney told the committee that there has been a great increase in participation in school lunches, and that he will recommend that the committee try to utilize the money from increased sales to the labor budget instead of raising prices this year.

CHEERING COACHES

Joanne Fichtner and Barbara McCool were appointed as cheering coaches for the remainder of the year at a Step II increase of $300 each. They were also appointed as chaperones, and will split a total $360 budgeted for this purpose, or $20 a game. The women had declined to accept a full-year appointment at the beginning of the school year.

SUBS TAKE NOTE!

The Cohasset Public Schools recently raised its per diem substitute teaching rate from $20 to $30.

DUXBURY GROWING

School Supt. Dr. John Maloney noted Monday that Duxbury High School is one of those schools that is continuing to grow in enrollment, while Cohasset is still the smallest in the 10-12 school league.

ASST. COACH

The school committee tabled until its next session a request from School Supt. Dr. John Maloney to hire an assistant coach to help with the growing wrestling program.

School committeewomen asked why wrestling should be a priority, when the girls' basketball and hockey teams had to take "double cuts."

Member Martha Gjesteby asked why more intramurual time couldn't be scheduled.

Maloney said CHS had more youngsters engaged in after school sports than any school in the league, with over 40 percent of the school population participating. He said he would continue to ask the committee for assistance when extra coaching staff was needed in any area.

After a suggestion by Ms. Walsh, Maloney said he would explore the possibility of using the Deer Hill gym for high school sports.

PPBS FORMAT

On a 4-1 vote the committee voted to expend the sum of $600 to employ a bookkeeper to itemize expenditures and budgets for the past year and a half in order that comparisons can be made.

The "PPBS" bookkeeping method is an in-house organ which the school department presently utilizes. According to School Supt. Dr. John Maloney, "It's a pretty accurate and sensitive instrument."

Maloney pointed out that the school department has been living within its budget except for workmen's compensation and teachers' salaries and questioned what a further budget breakdown might prove. "But if you want it, you're entitled to it."

Early Release

Thursday, Dec. 6 — will be an EARLY RELEASE DAY in the Cohasset Elementary Schools. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood School, 1 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all of the schools.

This Early Release Day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee to enable staff to hold Parent Conferences.

Recreation Signup Time For Blue Hills Skiing

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct registrations for adult and student ski lessons on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, Dec. 12 and 13, from 2-4 p.m. at the Recreation Office, Town Hall. Lessons for both programs will be held at the Egon Zimmerman Ski School, Blue Hills.

STUDENT SKI LESSONS

The student program (ages 7-19) will meet on Friday afternoons, beginning Friday, Jan. 4. Bus transportation is included in the $30.61 fee, and lessons will be held for five weeks from 4-5:45 p.m., each week. Buses will leave the Town Hall parking lot at 3:15 p.m. and will return to the Town Hall about 6:40 p.m.

This program will be administered through the recreation department revolving account fund and the cost, based on group participation is broken down to a per capita cost as follows: $25 — five 1¾ hours ski lessons. Transportation cost (total of 5 weeks), $5.61. Checks should be made out to the Town of Cohasset; no discount available for this program.

Registrations will be accepted on a first-come-first-enrolled-basis. Equipment rental, of skis, poles, boots, and bindings will be available at the ski school for $6 per session for those who don't have equipment.

Registrations for the adult, Tuesday mornings, program will also be held on Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 12 and 13. The fee for this program is $25 for the five, 1¾ hour lessons. Bus transportation will not be provided for this program, however, car pools will be arranged to offset the cost of driving.

The program is scheduled to begin on Tuesday, Jan. 8, and lesson time will be from 10 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. Rental of equipment at $6 per lesson will be available at the ski school. The program is open to anyone aged 18 and over and no minimum number of participants will be required.

PUNT, PASS & KICK competition winners were David Stover of Cohasset in 12 year old division and Marc Kantor of Marshfield in eight year old event with A.J. Antion, left.

thirds in the school year, providing she accepts the offer.

According to Dr. Maloney, the young woman in question is also under consideration at various other schools.

Maloney said the reading specialist would have a full-time job in the reading lab, working with youngsters both at a developmental and remedial reading level, with emphasis on developmental reading.

The committee voted 4-0 in favor of hiring the teacher, with Martha Gjesteby abstaining. Frank England was absent from the session.

getting worse," Montuori said.

The newly-formed citizens' site selection committee met with commissioners Monday. Edwin Young, an engineer, was chosen acting chairman of the group, which was asked to look into all sites recommended by Metcalf & Eddy Consultants in its report, including the school lands abutting the Music Circus and land left by Paul Jones to the town which is on the other side of Sohier Street from the school lands.

Montuori said he is pleased with the composition of the committee. He said the committee was given no deadline for returning to commissioners with suggestions, but he said they would have to report fairly shortly.

Commissioners told the committee Metcalf & Eddy Consultants would be made available to it, at least once. Montuori said the commissioners would have a better idea of any time limitations the town might have after they consulted with the Attorney General's office this week.

"There's the possibility that we may be calling a special emergency meeting Monday or sooner if anything should develop Friday."

If the 27 acres Paul Jones left to the town should become a viable site, Montuori said commissioners would have to act quickly in calling for a special town meeting. Funds would also be needed to pay consultants to report on the site, and a hearing would have to be advertised.

Jack Hubbard, a member of the conservation commission, said the Jones land was discussed at their Monday meeting. "We voted to give it serious consideration — as far as I can tell, no one on the committee has any major reservations about turning it over to the town for a wastewater treatment plant."

Hubbard added that Jones was contacted in New Hampshire and "The donor had no objection to a transfer of use. As long as a majority of the conservation commission agrees — it can be done."

Survey of the 80's, Well Sort of . . .

ULTIMATE Bumper Stickers in the 80's | THINK SNOW | happiness is feeding wild birds | HATCH—COWIN | Revolution in Maine | Sunrise For Solar | By Laurie Griffin

In these last weeks of the Seventies, bulky issues of NEWSWEEK, LIFE and PEOPLE remind us where we've been, who we loved, buried and hated. Next comes the forecast on where we're headed and the mood as we enter the 80's.

The Mariner has decided to jump the gun and study the mood locally. Are we lofty on issues or local on cash? But it was a mixed bag on a tough topic. No one really has an opinion in December. Right now, opinion is in pockets, on lists and ads and heads full of calculations.

Tapping a single mood at this time of year is like taking a survey at the beach. The sand is flying and bound to get in the eyes. No one's talking much; they're counting: the money gone, the money left and exactly how much time before store closing.

THE ISSUES

Gretta Greebo of Norwell was approached for the survey. She was in a toy store line, her baby in a green snowsuit in the shopping cart basket. Surely, Ms Greebo was concerned with the 80's: gas, Iranians, white color crime, population, the market for corn.

What was the most important issue? Mrs. Greebo was asked.

"I'd really like to know how that man, see him in the brown puff jacket...how he got ahead of me. That's what I'd like to know. I know I was here first."

"Well, Ms. Greebo. That wasn't exactly what we had in mind." The Mariner reporter phrased the question. "We're surveying the mood locally. After all, we're entering a new decade soon."

"Oh. If you really want to know. It's Mrs. And I'd like to know why that cashier is smiling. Could you pick up my Pampers please. If I move, I'll lose my place."

Leverett Likeable is a Scituate resident, a local lawyer. He appeared intelligent, chin jutting out, strong patrician nose. He was sixth in line at the X-press check-out in a supermarket.

"Mr. Likeable. If you could spare a minute, Mariner publications is surveying the public mood. What is the most important item on your mind at this moment?"

"You know, I'm glad you asked. I'm standing here wondering how those cash registers can read and write better than me. They read tags I don't even see. I pick up candy labelled $1.50 and I think that's the price.

"It ain't so," Mr. Likeable laughed. "The cash register flashes a green light, reads the small print and writes the name. The big $1.50 has little words that say "in coupons inside." The real price is $4.79. I can be fooled but not those cash registers."

The Mariner reporter was stymied by that point. Surely, someone was talking about Carter, education, taxes, even Kennedy would do. Sure enough, a Marshfield bookkeeper, Tad Tabulator was concerned.

The question was rephrased: "Which issues: taxes, labor, the state of education, do you think will be major problems in the '80's?"

Tad Tabulator was ready: "It has to be taxes. People are mixed up. Me, for example. I'm always trying to understand the logic of taxing dog food. You see I've got four dogs. They go through dog chow like anything. Now it's not the few cents in taxes. It's the principle."

With due gratitude to Tad, Greta and Leverett, the Mariner wanted the heavy issues and had a deadline to scoop the other forecasters — if they could come up with a mood for a country and world, surely there must be some basis for their decisions.

"It's easy," the national forecaster for LIME told us. "You read the buttons, the grafitti, bumper stickers and t-shirts. You don't have to talk to anyone. Then you get someone to interpret your research. It's a cinch. I can read the world in two days."

ON BUMPER STICKERS

Terrific. Then again, there's not much subway graffiti in these parts. The rocks on the beaches and highways are painted everlasting love and coupling, town football teams and four letter words. The Mariner couldn't get into the high school lavs to read the walls. T-shirts and buttons were covered by wool and scarves so the final survey was done on bumper stickers.

Since bumper stickers offered a route, the Mariner went all out. A study was commissioned at Cambridge H.I.T. Center of Social Thought. Some 47 researchers scoured the towns' streets; High Street, Norwell; G Street, Scituate, Main Street, Marshfield, and Jerusalem Road, Cohasset. Every bumper sticker recorded was jotted down, catalogued and sent for a read-out on the general mood. Paydirt was at the shopping malls.

H.I.T.'s Professor Harold Heavythot headed the study and interpreted the data. Professor Heavythot recently headed a H.I.T. study on how miserable gas lines must be before people convert to electric power.

"Now you understand, these results are not conclusive," Professor Heavythot warned. "Bumper stickers portray a minority view. We weren't able to determine what bumper stickers people would have if they don't have bumper stickers right now."

Two whole days were lost after Professor Heavythot's crew completed calculations. The H.I.T. Center insisted the Mariner pay for damages caused by a myopic surveyor. He smashed into a fender trying to read a sticker that began, "You Creep..."

Damages were also assessed for a pair of Levis bitten when one of the crew tried to look through a garage window guarded by a black Labrador.

"Given that no survey is completely accurate, that there is not 100 percent response, that only those who have opinions respond, I would say that in your towns, energy, love and horses are prime topics. Nationality, ethnics we call it, safety, names and happiness are concerns and there's a discontent factor."

"Horses?"

"That's right," Professor Heavythot said. "Of course, when all the results are reviewed, we might change from horses to animals in general."

"Horses?"

"That's right. Happiness is

Prepping For The Holidays

Now That It's Christmas, You'll Want To Dust

Various how-to articles have been written on dusting. We won't go into the intricacies, cleaning solutions used, etc., here. But there are two divergent points of view on basic dusting steps.

Staffers Margaret Smorgiewicz and Tanna Kasperowicz, each of whom happens to prefer one of two methods, have consented to discuss their perferences here. No kidding.

2 OUT OF 3 SAY: DUST FIRST — VACUUM SECOND

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Obviously, dusting and vacuuming go hand-in-hand. And a good, reliable vacuum cleaner is important to dusting. One does not necessarily need a vacuum which picks up three golf balls. But it should have good suction power.

Many years ago when I was first married I had a machine which was not terribly efficient. Finally I realized — if I had to crawl around the floor and collect the dirt and dustballs with my hands, and then stuff them up the hose, my machine was not, afterall, doing its job. I remedied the situation immediately.

Recently I interviewed Mrs. Sarah Shannon of Scituate who acknowledged readily that she vacuums first and dusts second. When I tried to point out the error of her method, she said: "My God, the whole world is crumbling, there are hostages in Iran . . . and you're calling me at 1:30 a.m. to ask how I dust?"

After explaining the importance of the issue to Mariner Christmas readers, Mrs. Shannon calmed down and willingly answered my questions.

"I vacuum first because when you vacuum first you stir up a whole lot of dust anyway. If I dusted first and vacuumed second I'd just have to dust all over again. Although I admit I get only one third of the dirt," she said.

Upon more intense questioning, Mrs. Shannon admitted her mother never vacuumed in her life, and that she had, in fact, no formal home training in the matter . . . a problem with many of the present 35 plus generation whose mothers were at work in airplane factories during the Second World War.

Mrs. Shannon continued: "I guess I vacuum first because I like vacuuming more than dusting — therefore I put dusting off until last."

Would one clean up around a pile of dirt before removing that dirt I asked Mrs. Shannon? Of course one would not.

One would clean (vacuum) afterwards.

VAC-PAK

Mrs. Karin Bartow of Cohasset said she dusts first and vacuums second. "Dusting stirs up all the dirt which then falls on the floor where I can get it be vacuuming. I have only one complaint about present model vacs," Mrs. Bartow said. "I'd like to have a lightweight model that I could strap on my back."

Before I dust any room I make sure no member of the family is permitted into that room for at least 24 hours. After 24 hours the dust is good and settled. This at times may involve locking the kids outside for several hours. But if you think ahead you can plan for almost any emergency. On several occasions I have left a bag lunch on the steps for my family. If your kids should turn blue, call a neighbor.

I assure you, methodical dusting can make your final efforts well worth it. People coming into your house will see the added shine on your tables . . . smell the fresh, clean air, ventillated by a good vacuum AFTER the proper dusting procedure has been followed.

And you will have the satisfaction of knowing that not one speck of dust is in the air.

YOU WILL HAVE GOTTEN IT ALL!

Dust is comprised of small worlds of germs, which can make your while family ill. Dusting should not be taken lightly.

Make Your Vacuum Work

By Margaret Smoragiewicz

Every now and then there is a renewed discussion of the two dusting points of view. In my survey of the South Shore I discovered that six out of seven women vacuum first and NEVER dust.

It is very important to vacuum first, as a vacuum

Decorur's Adjustments

By Lois Martin

Children who leave home expect to return to a house that's exactly as they remember it.

I'm not talking of course about the grade schooler. He knows where he left his pile of dirty clothes in the morning and where he'll find them after school.

It is the older "child" to whom I refer, the one who abandons his parents in the guise of pursuing higher education. So far as they're concerned, in their absence parents are not to move one stick of furniture from its assigned position in a room. Heaven knows how they'd react should we decide on a different cat during the semester.

PATCHES

Foolhardy high school seniors often claim they don't care what you do when they leave. Getting "outta here" is the singular goal. I took advantage of that euphoria when the oldest boy left and repapered his entire room in a charming floral print. Having been entrenched in barracks decor for many years, I warmed to the notion of feminizing his domain. At first he didn't say much about it...except to ask wryly when the bed would be canopied. When he came home, he savaged the ladylike room with masculine wallhangings, size 11 workboots and athletic accoutrements.

This Thanksgiving, though, I sensed a nervousness in the two college people who came home to visit. I had rearranged their rooms after they left in September, putting things as I chose and improving the value of the property.

They weren't pleased. Parents should apply for a permit to change home design. What's more, their father and I made some bold decisions about a few other things. The boys were intending to grow up and away. They've made that clear and a stuffed teddy bear for Christmas won't alter their plans.

My roommate and I concluded we could spiff up a room or two, do things the way we want to, live it up in our advancing but interesting age. So out went a room as it was remembered by those at the library in a place of higher learning. In went a couple different ideas for a room that had reeked of family and boys.

We were tickled to death with the new aura. And, in truth, Thanksgiving Eve the boys admired the work. But they immediately raced to their rooms to see what else had been accomplished (ruined) in their absence. They were relieved to find the same old rooms merely in different order of preference.

However, during Thanksgiving dinner, they and other members of their peer group, made mention of what they deem a stage their parents seem to be going through. One boy said he knew his room would be turned into a sewing chamber by the spring break. The other suspected his closet would be knocked out in order to accommodate an expansion of the bathroom.

A friend noted he wasn't impressed with his parents' reshifting of the living room. What's more he didn't like walking into his bedroom to trip over his mother's exercycle.

Our children have learned to call home (collect) to find out what we're doing here. They asked their father why he was undertaking to change what they choose to remember. They want us to be like the ocean, ebbing and flowing, slinging the same old seaweed on the shores.

Well, young people aren't the only ones shifting sands. Their father told them, "We got rid of you old-fashioned kids and went modern."

They were taken aback. But we've reassurred them we aren't interested in the Gothic castle decor. We look forward to seeing them. We don't plan to make condos out of the unused portions of the house.

They have my word on it. I still plan to make pecan puffs for the holidays. The refrigerator, for the time being, will stay where it's been. The same old dog will be here to greet them, in spite of the fact that I've sometimes wished he would grow away to college.

Apparently the uncertainty of our times has unsettled them so that they must find a familiar foundation on the home front. They were disheartened to find their graduation pictures had been removed from the top of the piano during their absence, due to renovations.

They personally put them back where they think they belong. Too much transition is obviously disheartening. So I've thrown out my plans to knock off a portion of the roof for a sundeck. The hot tub design will hold.

And a lesson's been learned by everyone. We had to adjust to their going away from home and they've learned to accept parents sometimes go away from habit. But we've promised them if we plan to move, they'll be the first to hear about it.

When to Dust . . .

cleaner will initially pick up Snickers wrappers, granite, chewing gum balls, stale crumbs, assorted cookies and unidentifiable objects of all shapes and textures, smells and colors.

Dusting is old fashioned and polish is expensive. Also, if you're in a hurry at least you've got the vacuuming done.

Before vacuuming, stuff all the big things into closets and the small things into drawers. Then proceed to Step II. Sit down and have a couple of cups of coffee — talk to a few friends — get your adrenalin flowing and neurotically persuade youself that when the kids get home they won't dirty your rugs, miss the toilet bowl, smear the peanut butter over the counters and fingerprint your polished tables.

Step III is turning on the vacuum cleaner. The rest is easy. But remember. Don't stop for anything. If you come upon a puzzle piece, a button — a stray earring — whatever. Swoop it up. Once you have set your pace nothing must disturb it or you won't finish.

If the phone rings keep you vacuum on while you answer and scream: "Can't talk now — I'm vacuuming." If the caller happens to be your husband he will be impressed. But remember. Once it's on — don't stop.

If one table happens to be particularly dusty, whip on your dusting nozzle and swack it up. It's quite possible that good vacuuming practices will afford you the opportunity of having never to dust again — in your life!

Dust is hardly "little worlds full of germs." In many ways, dust is beneficial to the human being. Who knows what might happen if one removed it from one's world, entirely. Perhaps a new type of Legionnaires' disease would break forth.

Don't change your world radically, whatever Mrs. Kasperowicz tells you. Dusting should be taken lightly. Amazingly enough, I have discovered that if one never dusts — eventually the collection procedure reverses itself and the dust actually lessens. The same is true with windows. If one lets them go long enough the rain and the elements begin to clean them and not dirty them.

Remember — the whole world is dirt. And when we die — we once again become a part of it.

Women At Work

NINA BELSAN

"Find me a system!" I screamed at no one in particular.

"Find me a sock!" were the general replies.

The woman who maintains a full time job and her family's matched socks too, will probably earn her place in heaven. Hopefully her new residence will come equipped with a full time maid and a pet dog who never chases joggers.

The hazards the working woman endures fall into two categories: predictable and unpredictable. The business of cleaning, cooking and all those other things I used to do are the expected problems which, with an orderly system, can be overlooked. The unforeseen disasters, however, such as floods, fires and plagues are not so easily organized. It's when these surprises outnumber the known factors that I lose my orientation and sometimes my equilibrium. During these times, the dentist calls to ask why I dropped a pair of brown shoes at his office and the shoemaker wonders why I left my cavity-ridden twelve year old on his doorstep.

But even my valiant attempts to do the predictable "twenty things at one time" can be equated to a one armed paper hanger with a broken arm eating his Wheaties. Therefore, I have found it necessary, for my family's safety, to find a system. Incredible as it may seem, it involves only one word: SIMPLIFY.

Based on this system, my work is much easier:

SIMPLIFY — the laundry: simply state that the laundress will accept only true-blue soiled clothing i.e., it must be noticeably stained or else lack the clean, fresh smell of Spring.

SIMPLIFY — cleaning: methodically do what must be done; that is, call a cleaning service every week.

SIMPLIFY — cooking: have a Bill of Fare (what you see, is what you get); not a Menu. No catering.

SIMPLIFY — errands: the chauffeur will drive only for important events and catastrophes. Picking up a friend's cat so that he can visit our's does not fall into this category.

owning a horse and Re-cycle Your Grass: Feed a Horse. We've got others in the same vein. But that's not the clincher."

"Well feeding horses isn't exactly an issue. Maybe you could explain it..."

Professor Heavythot wears wire framed grampy glasses and they steam when he's asked to explain computer read-outs. "All right, look. We'll change that to animals. We had stickers on horses and that damage you're paying for was a pick-up with a portable stall full of hay."

He continued, "You'll have no trouble with the animals category. Environment fits in. Here, look at that grouping."

He was on target: Energy and animals.

"Wool runs on grass and a lamb; A Chick in the Grass; Mickey Mouse; Paws for Paws; Extinct is Forever; The Moose is Loose; Love a Pet for Life and one of our researchers quit for this one: Happiness is Feeding Wild Birds."

"A majority in your area support I Brake for Animals but the Save the Whales is faded."

"All right. Let's get the next categories."

"We're not exactly sure of the order but if you want to take cars next. Cars and safety had a high reading. You have a good number of Hot cars, the anti-theft program. But scientific surveys should not be rushed." Professor Heavythot was annoyed.

"Just tell me about the cars."

"Well, do you want a count on beach stickers?"

"This is December."

"Do you care where the cars have been? The cars have been to Poland, Finland, Walt Disney World, Edaville, Virginia, Rome, Denmark, Capri and Sea-Land."

"I don't think the cars went there."

"More. We had a ramshackled car with a sticker: 'I left My Rols Royce at Home' but we don't know what the Rolls Royce says."

"What else?"

"Well, when you eliminate the vulgar and obscene, the concern for cars is with safety, their rear-ends and the 55 mile limit: Drive as if My Life Depends On It. That reminds me we weren't able to classify some reports because of IT."

"It?"

"Yes, there were so many varieties of slogans for IT the computer spit it out."

"It?"

"No. The cards with it on them. Let me show you. Flowers do it. Hairdressers Do It With Style and there was one about nurses. In fact, there's definitely a campaign to love nurses, change their image. I suppose we all think of nurses with needles, waking patients, shoving thermometers until we read a sticker Love a Nurse.

"Let's get on with it. Nationality. Is this it? Every Little Girl Should Have a Little Italian in Her Life."

"Along that vein. All right, you wanted some heavy stuff. Here's the Citizen Discontent report." Professor Heavythot handed over a six page read out.

"Everybody would rather be someplace, somewhere or doing something else. They'd rather be sailing, fishing, camping, in another state or town. We couldn't fit Think Snow in anywhere else so we put it there. Where do you suggest Think Snow go?"

"In the obscene file. Is that it? That the mood stuff? No politics? Major issues?"

The professor offered the following. The most vocal bumper battle is over nuclear power: Nuclear Power Equals Cancer as opposed to More Nukes: Less Kooks and Sunrise for Solar.

President Carter only made the rear ends twice with a Carter Confidence ballot and President Carter: Kiss my Gas. There were also Pro-life and Celebrate Life and Save the Soviet Jewery, represented.

"We ran into a real strange one. Revolution in Maine. Did you know about that?"

"That's it. No politics."

"No. There were faded ones we couldn't read but there was a clear Hatch-Cowin."

"Terrific. Maybe that's a prediction."

Professor Heavythot seemed interested.

"Would you like a read-out on the personality of the sticker owner?"

He didn't wait.

"Bumper stickers have dropped somewhat in popularity in recent years. But those persons with stickers show considerable pride in their work, their teams, where they've been and often vanity names."

"The read-outs show 83 percent have a high sense of humor. Of those without a sense of humor, a large portion use old English lettering for initials and names or were protecting their car. The number of stickers may have dropped because humor is in short supply. Shall we put that through?"

"No. Go on."

"Well, that's about it. There were a lot of hellos's from other towns and states. You can expect a resurgence of stickers after the first of the year. Then you'll really know what people are thinking. One was non-categories: "I'm not a dirty old man; I'm a sexy senior citizen."

"The study concluded stickers will be around

Two Year Accreditation For S. Shore

South Shore Hospital has received notification this week from the Joint Commission on accreditation of Hospitals (JCAH) that it has been awarded a two-year accreditation, the maximum award granted by the JCAH.

The award of accreditation indicates the hospital has voluntarily taken part in a survey conducted by a JCAH team of medical professionals and has been found to meet the standards set by the Joint Commission. That survey was conducted at South Shore Hospital in July.

The survey is carried on through several different methods: visual inspection of the hospital, examination of documentation, policies and procedures, and interviews with hospital medical staff and personnel, particularly department heads.

This award marks the second time South Shore Hospital has been awarded the maximum accreditation.

It's the procrastination factor...Listen you want this on hold til January. People start thinking again with the first of the year and the end of the Seventies."

By Joan Pinkham

Sometimes I think my whole life would fall apart if it weren't for my lists. The grocery list begins at the start of the week when I jot down things I'll need on Thursday. The daily list of chores and errands points me in the right direction each morning. There's the birthday list, Christmas card list, books I want to read list and coming up, that most formidable list of all...the Christmas shopping list. For those of us with a relative who enjoys cooking, this little book entitled "Corn Festival Recipes," is a must on our Christmas list. Compiled by Persis Sterling and illustrated by Amy Sands, it can be purchased at the South Shore Natural Science Center. This little stocking stuffer has all sorts of ways of using our favorite vegetable, including this:

BAKED CORN WITH HAM
1 c. cream style corn
1 beaten egg
1 tsp. sugar
Pinch of salt
1 c. milk
1 small piece of cheese
1 small onion, cut up fine
1 c. diced ham

Combine ingredients and mix well. Bake one hour in casserole set in pan of hot water in 375 degree oven. Serves 4.

* * *

I'm being deluged with catalogues designed to encourage shopping by mail. What a dazzling Christmas list mine would be if I filled out the tempting order forms. How about one of each? A Gucci suitcase, $425, a Loaf of Soap for $15, an ounce of perfume for $300 and perhaps those red leather boots for $375. Urging us to "shop in style," do they realize that the $400 price tag on their suede shirt would buy an awful lot of groceries? Gil Wilder is among those of us looking for a bargain in food and he suggests a small pail of mussels is ours for the taking. He writes: "I'm sure that mussels would be more popular if there were more good recipes. Here's mine for

STUFFED MUSSELS

Cook mussels till the shells steam open and remove from shell when cool.

Cook 1 c. of chopped onion until tender in 1/3 c. water, covered.

When onions are done add 1/4 lb. stick of butter, melted. Crush a stack of Ritz crackers and combine with above ingredients and mix well in a bowl. Press mixture in a glass pie plate. Cover with foil and bake at 350 degrees for one hour. Uncover last 10 min. to brown.

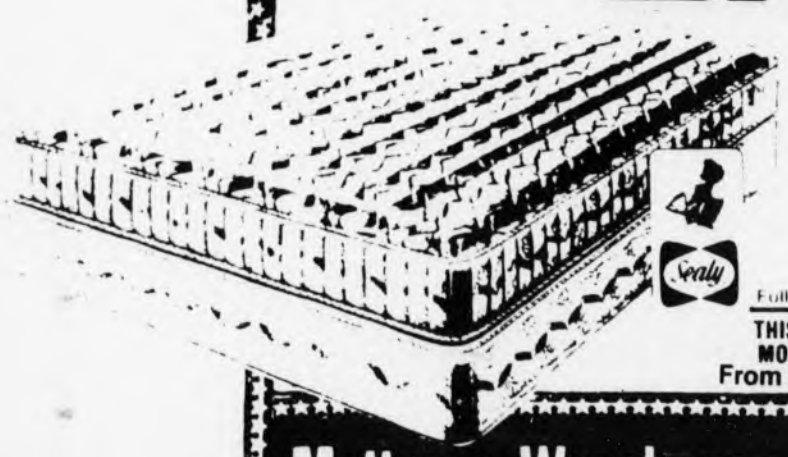
Heading a boring list of things to do is the notion that I should go through my recipes, putting them in some semblance of order. Perhaps then I'd unearth such treasures as this recipe from Mary O'Brien. Making your own crackers is a good idea, for if you'll study the list of ingredients on a box of crackers, you might be surprised at all the additives. As everyone at the Mariner knows, Mary is a wonderful cook and this is from her book "More Food that Really Schmecks" by Staebler, published by McClelland and Stewart.

WHOLE WHEAT THINS



From this recipe you can make biscuits galore. After dividing dough pat each piece into ball, flatten to an oval and generously sprinkle with either savory salt, celery seed, sesame, or poppy seeds, onion flakes, garlic powder or salt, chives, any herb you happen to have in the cupboard.

4 c. whole wheat flour
1 tsp. salt, optional
1 T sugar
3/4 c. shortening
2/3 c. water or milk, more or less

Mix dry ingredients. Cut in shortening until finely blended. Pour in water and stir till it forms soft ball like pastry. Can be done in few seconds in food processor. Divide dough in four. Roll each part as thin as parchment. Slide the sheet of dough on unbuttered cookie sheet. Indent in squares with pastry wheel or knife. To prevent bubbling, prick dough all over with fork. Bake at 400 degrees for almost 10 min., until crisp and pale. Slide sheet to cooling rack and break biscuits where you have marked them.

Attorney General Gets Tough

Jan. Sewer Meeting Proposed

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Last Friday town officials met with the Attorney General's office regarding the suit the A.G. filed against the town for sewage dumping violations since June and for the town's failure to come up with a plan.

Town officials were told that the A.G.'s office planned to apply for a summary judgment on the matter which the A.G. was positive would result in an immediate fine to the town of $2,000-$10,000 a day, possibly retroactive to June 15.

However, the A.G. said if the town signed a consent agreement (in lieu of trial) immediately, it would agree to fine the town only $10,000 for past pollution and permit the town to pollute all it wished until March 1, 1984 when the town would be required to have an operational plant.

In addition, the town would have to strictly adhere to schedules. If it missed just one — swack! Back to $1,000 a day fines.

Town Counsel is not yet certain that selectmen alone can sign any legal consent agreement as the bylaw gives them authority to commit the town up to $2,500 maximum. It is possible the selectmen could sign such an agreement on good faith and contingent on town meeting action. (Keep in mind that the state has never understood how town government operates and doesn't care to know.)

The schedule for adherence hasn't been firmed up, but Attorney Ann Rogers from the A.G.'s officer told officials this would be the approximate agreement:

A special town meeting would have to be held late in January or early February 1980. Now, from here-on-in this gets complicated, so follow closely.

According to sewer commissioners the A.G.'s office will allow the town to bypass its February 29, 1980 deadline for submitting final site plans in two instances only:

—if the town should vote that it wished to have the legislature free the encumbered school land abutting the Music Circus, and —if the town should vote that it wished to utilize the Paul Jones conservation land across the street from the school lands on Sohier Street.

Town Counsel Blake Thaxter, Jr. said Monday night that he has researched the matter, and the town can petition the legislature to amend its home rule act, and free the school lands for town use.

The conservation land would also require legislative action to transfer it from its donated purposes. The A.G. recognizes that in both instances the town would require extra time.

However, if special town meeting were not inclined towards either the school lands or the conservation lands — voters would have to act to both finance the site and select the site at the early 1980 meeting.

More complications.

Unless special town meeting were given a chance to negotiate on the matter before straight-from-the-hip voting, it is quite likely the school lands would show up as the favored site.

This is because the school lands question would be the only article on the warrant which would require only a majority vote. It would be on the ballot as a request to the legislature.

Every other site on the ballot, according to Town Counsel, would require a two thirds vote, including the transfer of the conservation land.

Already, the school lands question is the easiest vote to get.

Other schedules which the town must agree to after the previous matters:

By Sept. 1, 1981 the town must have submitted its Step III permit application and its final plans to the Water Pollution Control.

By March 1, 1982 the town must begin construction on the plant.

And March 1, 1984 is the date set for the new plant to become operational.

Historical Groups Unhappy

Audubon Auction Nets $40,460

The Cohasset Historical Society and Cohasset Historical Commission are not happy about Paul Pratt Library's recent auctioning of a rare John James Audubon bird plate and two Audubon books for $34,000 and $10,000 respectively.

Library trustees were aware of how Connie Parker, chairman of the historical society, felt about the proposed sale late last summer. But Mrs. Parker said she was told at the time the articles had already been committed to auction at Sotheby, Parke, Bernet Inc. in New York City.

Noel Ripley, chairman of the town's historical commission, said commissioners were also aware of the proposed auction. "We feel sorry no real research was done on the ultimate disposal of the merchandise."

While Bert Pratt, a member of the historical society, said he felt it would have been wise for the trustees to have found a buyer willing to keep the articles in town."

Pratt admitted that neither the town nor the society has proper storage facilities for storing antiques at present. "But we are going to have vaults which would be adequate."

Of the three persons interviewed on their reactions to the auction, Mrs. Parker was the most vocal. "I'm absolutely livid. I feel it's the meanest thing that has ever been done. It's really deplorable to have done this without letting the townspeople or the school childdren see it (the

Committee On Sewerage Given Jan. 14 Deadline

The citizen's advisory committee on sewerage has exactly one month to give the sewer commissioners its site recommendation(s) for a new wastewater facility.

Sewer commissioners voted Monday to have the committee consider all sites in the Metcalf and Eddy Engineers' report along with the Paul Jones conservation land on Sohier Street, and to report back to commissioners no later than Jan. 14, 1980.

Commissioners also voted to have the committee review "need" for sewerage in the town as established in the planning report prior to annual town meeting in April.

William Montuori, chairman, said commissioners would continue monitoring effluent in all three areas of the town as long as funds were available for this purpose. Although commissioners said past and present reports continue to show the town is polluting its waters.

Water Superintendent Edward Pratt said the present sewer plant has been broken down for the past two months. "I doubt if the present plant will last until 1984. It's 12 years old this fall."

Chartis Langmaid said that in September, 1977 citizens wrote a letter to the state Department of Quality Engineering (DEQE) asking what that department had approved a sewerage hook-up at 8 Stagecoach Way. "It was the feeling of DEQE that the town would not be in violation of its permit by allowing this hook-up," Mrs. Langmaid said.

"Why, now — suddenly — are we subject to a fine because we're exceeding this magic number?" she asked.

Montuori said Mrs. Langmaid's argument was Town Counsel's only defense at officials' meeting with the Attorney General last week.

"At the time DEQE approved the hook-in, it was assumed the town was going along with the process to eliminate problems," Montuori said.

Commissioner John Hobbs said public hearings were held regarding the hook-up, but the

T.M. Extension Sought

Cohasset town officials say they need more time to plan for a special town meeting on the ubiquitous sewerage issue.

That was the consensus of a meeting on the question Tuesday night and as a result, Town Counsel Blake Thaxter Jr. was directed to seek an extension of a special town meeting to Feb. 15. The Attorney General's Office had wanted the meeting to be held by late January.

Selectmen were expected to schedule a definite date for the special meeting based on what Thaxter can negotiate.

Cohasset Punch - Famous In Chicago

Sally Atkinson didn't know Rosilla Trott said she had a recipe for "Blue" punch. Barbara Bliss didn't know.

Carolyn Contis asked her husband, Jim, who said: "I'm pretty sure it's a punch bowl full of bourbon with soda water — maybe gingerale.

"There are great stories about Cohasset punch — it's always struck me as something pretty cheap to serve — it had to be cheap whiskey. We were served a lot of it when we were new in town and made the Cohasset cocktail rounds."

Chartis Langmaid said "I've never made it, but I think it had something to do with the church. Nancy Hamilton might know."

"Cohasset punch turned up in Chicago — my brother said it's nothing but bourbon and soda water," Noel Ripley said.

Bert Pratt said Scotts Liquors used to carry it. "There were two different kinds. The kind served around here is a kind of artillery punch — it's really packed to wallop. I made reference to it in my book. It's bourbon and soda."

Frank England started this whole search for the recipe for Cohasset Punch when he alerted the Mariner to a recent newsclipping from the Las Vagas Review sent to him by his daughter, Kathy, an attorney in Las Vegas.

According to the clipping, Tommy Ohman, a Swede from Chicago, owns the rights to Cohasset Punch — a cherry-colored liquer which is rum - based, spiced with brandy and cherry juice. The punch is Chicago's only locally-made booze and is not well-known outside the city. In Chicago the drink is served in a chilled champagne glass over a slice of frozen or canned peach."

Ohman keeps the formula in a safety deposit box — it is written in pencil on a very old piece of fragile paper yellow with age.

According to Frank's clipping, the origins of the liquer are traced to the Cohasset, Mass. estate of the late comedian William H. Crane. A man named Williams (his first name eludes everyone) first invented the drink for a party at Crane's estate.

When Williams moved to Chicago he took the formula with him and opened a saloon in the Loop.

A sign outside the Chicago tavern proclaims "Home of Cohasset Punch" and has a replica of Minot's Lighthouse off Cohasset. The lighthouse is featured on the label along with a sailboat and a setting or rising sun.

Ohman is toying with the idea of going national with Cohasset Punch. A Mrs. Howe, but it wasn't Mrs. Frederick Howe, is supposed to have written Ohman who sent her the recipe. We're asking for reader's assistance in tracing down the recipe in time for the holidays.

Early Release

Thursday, Dec. 13th, will be an EARLY RELEASE DAY in the Cohasset Elementary Schools. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood School, 1:00 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all of the schools. This Early Release Day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee to enable staff to hold Parent Conferences.

CHS Math Team Places 1st.!

Sitting around watching people think might be fun for some, but we're willing to bet no spectator busses will ever be hired to attend the South Shore Division competitions of the Greater Boston Math League. And that's a shame, but an understandable one.

Five high school students took first place for Cohasset in their second math competition ever in Marshfield last week. In last month's competition, Cohasset came in fourth. But it looks like they've gotten the hang of it now.

Sophs Susan Bird, Ted Durant and Jim Sturdy, and seniors Chris Williams and David Zobel (Zobel was high scorer for Cohasset) spurred their team on to the win last week. Other members of the team are Pat Duffy, John Ayer, Dan Hall, Heather Carroll and Sean O'Connor.

The team's coach is Charles Davis, assisted by Marie League, Dennis Walsh and Paul Hogan — who all assist in various ways, sometimes by proctoring the events.

In the South Shore division Cohasset competes monthly against eight other schools: Scituate, Hingham, Marshfield, Weymouth, North and South, Abington, Rockland and Hanover. Most if not all those schools have larger student populations and therefore larger talent reservoirs to draw upon — so Cohasset's victory is quite an accomplishment.

Coach Davis said "All members of the team are from the honors group. We initially asked for volunteers, and the interested ones came."

Davis said he has a fairly good feeling about Cohasset's math department. "We're very competitive — and our SAT scores are not dropping."

Before the monthly competition each competing school is given a list of the categories which will be involved in the event. Each school is permitted to enter three students in each of three categories, with the fourth category to be solved by the team jointly.

2 OF THE FIVE varsity team that took first in the Marshfield competition—Sophs Suzanne Bird and Jim Sturdy.

Suzanne Bird said "The categories are arithmetic, geometric angles, word problems, linear equations, quadrics, algebra and geometry — but the emphasis is on speed."

When asked if he got nervous before a competition, .ike athletes do, Jim Sturdy said "No, it's fun."

Scoring is complicated — it looks like bowling, with spares and strikes — far too complicated for the Mariner to figure out.

Civil Service List For Police Finally Arrives

The elusive Civil Service list of eligible police officers has arrived at the selectmen's office. Selectmen said last week they will shortly schedule interviews for four, permanent intermittent police officers to be paid at $4.96 an hour.

The names of nine men on the list came through without their scores and selectmen said they will ask for that information and veteran status when the applicants indicate they are available for appointment.

The following men's names appeared on the list:

Raymond Livingstone, Frances Chafe, Daniel Ainslie, Edward Connor, John Small, Paul Vilodeau, Thomas White, Richard Yocum and Paul Fiori.

All of the men except Chafe, who is from South Weymouth, are from Cohasset. Selectmen had requested local preference.

Engineers Should Select Site

Letters

To the Editor:

It has become abundantly evident that the method intended to be used for selecting a site for the wastewater treatment plant has not worked. It has not been successful in selecting a site.

The trouble has been that voters were asked to decide upon one site out of five or six different sites. That method was doomed to failure because a group of people are not to be expected to think in the same way.

Therefore, another method should be adopted. It is recommended by the writer that Mr. Frank Sampson of Metcalf and Eddy be instructed to select the site which in his opinion is best, everything considered.

No appointed members of a new committee would have the balanced judgment that he would have. He knows the pros and cons of numerous sites. He knows the geography of the town and he will know the probable layout of pipes to the plant and to the outfall.

Everyone who has an individual opinion can express it in a note to Metcalf and Eddy, 50 Staniford St., Boston, Mass and Mr. Sampson can take into consideration all different ideas. No person on a new committee can exercise the judgment that Mr. Sampson will have. The town will be paying Metcalf and Eddy for their judgment. The engineers decision should be in hand before January 1st to that a town meeting can be held promptly to avoid the penalties which seem imminent.

It is suggested that preliminary expressions be obtained unofficially to find out in advance how the town meeting will vote. If it should appear that there will be many votes against the engineer's selection then those "no" votes will be responsible for the future delay and for the penalties to be paid by the town.

Repeated expressions could be obtained to make sure that the result will be a "yes" vote by two-thirds so that a decision will be obtained.

It is hoped by the writer that the sewer commissioners and selectmen will instruct Metcalf and Eddy to make a brief report giving their selection before January 1st. The next town meeting will not be compelled to accept the engineer's recommendation but the town will know who is responsible if a choice is not made and who can then be blamed for further delay and for the penalties.

Editorial

Answer To A Reader

We don't sign editorials. Obviously there has to be a flesh and blood writer involved in every Mariner editorial. But that writer is not "hiding" behind a nameless article and is not ashamed of what is published.

On the contrary — what is published under the editorial masthead of any newspaper is a viewpoint which the editorial board of that newspaper supports. Sometimes the editorial which is written is rejected by that board. Sometimes there is no editorial.

If you don't care for our editorial viewpoint on any particular matter — or think we should have expounded on something — let us know in a letter. You may cause us to change our minds.

We don't take stands on anything in order to make you angry or to try to encourage you to write us mean letters. We much prefer your compliments.

If you need to discuss your viewpoint verbally, call the publisher, the managing editor or the community editor at 545-3950. We'll always try to encourage you to share your viewpoint with Mariner readers but in any case, we'd like to hear from you.

Planners Want More Data

[ED.'s NOTE: Sewer Commissioners received the following letter from the planning board at the Monday meeting]:

Dear Mr. Montouri:

In response to your recent letter containing certain recommendations contained in the Metcalf and Eddy report, the Planning Board wishes to make the following comments:

1. We plan to reinstate the zoning bylaw which increases lot size in the business zone on Route 3A from the present 10,000 sq. ft. to 30,000 sq. ft. We will also review other zoning classifications for possible increase.

2. We recognize that in areas such as the Veterans, there must be sewers, but we do not feel the need has been as clearly demonstrated as it could be. We strongly recommend that the Commission study other proposals, such as demonstrating the need in all of the areas suggested, the scope of the projected costs of operation and maintenance, etc.

3. We feel that there is a need to obtain a more definite estimate of operating and maintenance costs, such as the number of operators needed for the proposed plant, for salaries, fringe benefits, etc. This can be done in 1980 dollars and also include the present required number of operators. The Town can then make a projected estimate based on inflation.

4. The cost for tying into the system and the user's fee should be made clear to the public. The cost figures for developing each site should be made available, including the cost of any environmental impact statements and a more definite explanation of site preparation.

We feel the Site Commission should consider sites in addition to those recommended in the final Metcalf and Eddy report. We recommend that the Sewer /Water Commission promote water conservation by those presently on line and in those areas with problems contained in on-site systems. A water review could be recommended, such as raising rates to larger users.

Consideration should be given to the layers of outfall proposed and to minimum upgrading of the present plant to meet the most flagrant violations.

Mr. Sampson's figures mentioned at the November 20th meeting were 1.4 million, including outfall. While the project is underway, an engineering firm not engaged in construction could review a proposal for additional sewerage.

We know that the Town is under the threat of a fine by the Attorney General, but we feel that the Town should not undertake a project of such magnitude without first being absolutely sure of the implications of the economic impact and the potential for considerable growth in Cohasset.

Two dogs belonging to Paul Laugelle were ordered by selectmen to be either removed from the town or destroyed.

ART THEFT SUSPECTS

Norfolk Superior Court Judge Edith Fine last week indicted David Thomas, 25, of Boston, formerly of Hingham, and Peter Gurnis, 22, of Belchertown on charges of a $2 million art theft last year in Cohasset.

They are accused of stealing valuable Ming vases along with paintings, including a Rembrandt and an El Greco, from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Herrington of Cohasset on Aug. 18, 1978.

Thomas intended to plead guilty to the charges, but Judge Fine ordered that a not guilty plea be entered for him and held him on $100,000 bail, pending a Dec. 17 hearing.

Thomas was arrested in Boston in August on a charge of receiving stolen property, which included a rare Porsche automobile valued at $38,000.

ENERGY COSTS

Selectmen received a request from the advisory committee to submit an additional "energy" budget which would document anticipated additional town request as of last Friday.

$12,000 STUDY

Sewer commissioners voted Monday to request a $12,000 sum of money from the advisory committee in order that they may study the Paul Jones conservation land on Sohier Street as a possible site for a wastewater treatment plant.

The vote was made subject to the majority approval of the conservation commission. According to commissioners, the money will be 75-90 per cent reimbursed through a Step I grant, making the town's share of the study $1-$3,000.

Early Deadline

Because of the Christmas holiday, we will have an early deadline Christmas week. All news for the Dec. 27 paper must be submitted by 5 p.m. Friday, Dec. 21. The Mariner staff will be working on the paper Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 22 and 23, so we can spend Christmas eve and day with our families. Merry Christmas.

Ed Tower Has Been Here Quite A Spell

By Peter Barnicle

'We've been hanging around Cohasset for a long time. Let's see, Ibrook Tower came here around the turn of the century — the eighteenth century — and there have been Towers in town ever since."

Ed Tower knows whereof he speaks. His family has been prominent in town affairs for over 250 years. Tower lives on Ripley Road, in the house where he was born. Until his retirement several years ago he was associated with the Edward E. Tower Company founded by his grandfather and namesake in 1861. The firm imported natural hair from the Orient for wigs and hair pieces and with the introduction of permanent waving went into the beauty salon supply business.

"Across the street, where the Joseph Osgood School is now, used to be a corn field. And the area beyond my house, up to Sohier Street was another corn field. I don't recall who owned the land, but it was leased out to Mr. Barron and the corn was used to feed his cattle on Oak Farm," Ed recalled.

"That house on Sohier Street," he said with a gesture towards the picture window of his den, "and the one across from mine on Ripley Road were originally up on North Main Street, near the triangle where Jerusalem Road cuts off.

"It was the Wilkins house and they split it into two parts before moving it. But somebody got his signals crossed and the section supposed to go to Sohier Street wound up on Ripley Road. Joe MacDonald, the lawyer, lives there now. It used to be the Unitarian parsonage," Tower said.

"My grandfather founded the Cohasset Musical Association back in the 1880's. I suppose you could think of it as the forerunner of the Music Circus," Ed said as he crossed his legs on a hassock, looking out at the colorful cardinals and other free-loaders flocking to the feeders in the yard.

There is a sincere warmth in the quiet enthusiasm he has for the town. After all, as he said, the Towers have been here for quite a spell.

"Ibrook Tower moved here from South Hingham about 1712 and built a house on King Street. It was located just beyond the Getty service station on what is now Route 3A. I think it was on the Ketchum property. Up until some years ago the outline of the cellar and an old well were still visible," he recalled.

When Ibrook Tower came to Cohasset he was in possession of one of the King's Grants which divided the land of the area among the people of Hingham. Each portion started at the ocean and stretched through the salt marshes, arable farm land and up the hillside to pasturage and woodland to the west.

After a time at King Street, Ibrook moved down towards what is now the center of town and built a house on the west side of the Common. The house is presently the home of Gilbert Tower.

Looking Back

"Let's see now," Ed said, trying to remember the days of yore. "Where the antique shop is now — Clarence Patrolia built that for his plumbing shop. The land was vacant for a number of years after they tore down Hanlon's Studios."

Hanlon's Studios was to New England what Sarasota, Fla., is to Ringling Brothers Circus, without the wild animals. The six Hanlon brothers produced pantomines back in the 1880's and thereafter. The studio was used to build and remake the scenery for their productions. Clowns, dancing girls, acrobats and other cast members rehearsed at the studio during the summer months and went on the road with the show in late September.

"The building where the South Shore Art Center is now — I used to call it the 'flat-iron building," Tower said. "That is where Litchfield Express had its offices. A plumber by the name of O'Neill had a shop there and Hyland-McGaw had a carpenter's shop."

Next to that building was the railroad station, Ed remembers.

"At one time Cohasset was the terminal," he said. "Then the line was extended to Greenbush and down to Plymouth. I can remember as a kid going to Plymouth, over the North River at Marshfield."

The railroad also maintained a roundhouse where the municipal parking lot is now. Back of that is the building used by the Highway Department. That, in days gone by, was Malley's blacksmith shop.

Across from the railroad station, where the Post Office is located, was Dr. Oliver Howe's meadow and beside that was Tilden's stable, according to Ed's recollection. The building now housing the Community Center was at one time Doane's Hotel. But that's from Ed's father's time.

"There have been a lot of changes during my lifetime," Ed said, "but the town still keeps its character. Cohasset has been often invaded, but never conquered."

Cohasset Savings Bank Sets Record For Year

Despite the competition of the U.S. Treasury as a borrower and the appeal of riskier investments for depositors, Cohasset Savings Bank continued to set records for deposits, surplus, earnings and dividends paid to depositors in the fiscal year ended October 31, Donald E. Bates, executive vice president and treasurer, told the bank's trustees and corporators at a dinner meeting recently.

Assets topped $30 million for the first time, Bates reported, with deposits up almost $1.8 million to a record $26.9 million, gross earnings totalled $2.6 million of which $1.7 million was paid to depositors in dividends. The bank's surplus increased to nearly $2.7 million."

He pointed out that some depositors have been lured away by higher interest rates offered by the U.S. Treasury and "money market mutual funds," while savings banks are limited by law in the interest they can pay. He said that many people do not realize that often the other investments are not fully insured, as are bank deposits, that they are subject to the ups and downs of the stock or bond markets and that interest rates can go down as rapidly as they have gone up.

The year just ended, Bates reported, has seen a tremendous increase in the amount of the bank's deposits in six-months' term certificates. From less than $1 million at the end of the prior fiscal year, these short-term deposits have increased to more than $7 million, and represent over 25 per cent of the bank's total deposits.

As a result of the rapid increase in short-term deposits, the bank has had to shift its own investments to a short-term basis in order to protect the depositors' money and to earn a return that enables it to pay the high interest rates. At the same time this has reduced the amount available for mortgage loans, Bates pointed out.

Despite the dramatic increase in dividends paid to depositors, the bank has been able through changes in its own investments to meet these higher dividends without going into surplus, which increased during the year.

Bates reported on the growth and changes in the bank over the period of the last 30 years. In 1947, for instance, less than 30 per cent of the bank's assets were in mortgages, while at present it is over 70 per cent. At the same time its investments in government notes and bonds has decreased from 63 per cent to 1.3 per cent, although this may again increase in order to improve the bank's liquidity.

Gross earnings increased from $132,000 in 1947 to $347,000 in 1962 to $2.6 million, while dividends increased from $69,000 to $1.7 million in that period. Most dramatic was the increase in the number of deposits and withdrawals, which were only 8,700 in the entire year of 1947 and in the year just past were 131,000.

☐On Saturday Gerry Schultz and Dick Horn gave the 15th and final session of their highly acclaimed instruction series, "Omelets Through The Ages: From Hot Rocks to Microwaves."

Earlier sessions dealt with topics such as how to find brontosaurus eggs and what to do if the mother returns; practical lessons in polishing and seasoning your cooking rock; and egg varieties, utensil types, and cooking techniques drawn from Egyptian, Babylonian, Greek and Medieval European sources were also featured. Few could forget such practical lessons as using scrap mummy wrappings for wiping out the pan and rendering mammoth fat for cooking oil.

Saturday's class brought the series into the 20th Century by introducing such items as the use of a gas stove. A new series, tentatively called the "Future of Omelets," will deal with omelet management in zero gravity and cooking omelets on hot rocks in fuel short times."

Participating in the Omelet Series were: Winnie and John Kuhn, Kay and Kirby (Wizard of Literature) Meacham, Carol and Jack Martin, Lillian and Brad Ketchum, Karin and Steve Bartow, Mary and John Staunton, Carolyn and Dick Horn, and Gerry and Regina Schultz.

The Omelet Workshop was sponsored by the Cohasset Community Center, hosted by the Horn's and conducted by chefs, Gerry Schultz and Dick Horn.

☐Three Cohasset young girls are dancing in this year's 16th annual Nutcracker Ballet. The most seasoned of them is Bridget Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith of 1 Reservoir Road, who at age 12, is performing for the fourth time in the Nutcracker.

LOOKS ARE DECEIVING — That's not an ice cream cone Brian Lombard seems to be licking as dad Paul looks on, but a microphone at the Mansion Heirs program at Community Church of the Nazarene. [Derr photo]

She has danced the role of a Polichinelle, party child, and this year, is a soldier. Her interest in ballet was sparked when she first saw the Nutcracker and her goal in that ballet is to dance as the Sugar Plum Fairy; ultimately, it is to be a professional ballet dancer. Academically, she studies at the Woodward School for Girls, Quincy, and for ballet, she studies with the Boston School of Ballet, Boston, and has studied at Nan Keating's Children's Ballet Workshop, Hingham.

sixth grade student at the Deer Hill school, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Goggin of 22 Rustic Drive, is also a soldier in this, her first year with the Nutcracker. She has only been studying ballet for two years and also works with Mrs. Keating and the Boston School of Ballet. In addition, she takes Saturday morning classes with Sidney Leonard and Shawna in Boston.

Meredith Nash, a second year ballet student, is performing for the second time in the Nutcracker as a soldier. She is a seventh grader at Cohasset Jr. High and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Nash of 512 King St. Meredith began ballet as a post-conditioner for gymnastics and has stayed with it ever since. Her goal is to be a prima ballerina and she's working hard five days a week with lessons at Nan Keatings and the Boston School of Ballet toward that end. Mrs. Nash says she is "highly motivated" and made all the telephoning and arrangements for her lessons and auditions.

The heavy lesson, rehearsal and performance schedule, wearying to think of, seems to make these girls glow!

Congratulations to all three of these young dancers. Their role as soldiers may be small in the grand scale of the Nutcracker, but their accomplishment is very great. They are purposeful and determined about their dancing careers, about which we're sure to hear more.

☐Birthday greetings to Mrs. Ethyl Lillard of Redgate Lane who celebrated her 97th birthday on Tuesday. Mrs. Lillard's family joined her on Sunday for dinner and a party.

She was born and brought up in Hanover, New Hampshire where her father was a professor at Dartmouth College. She attended Smith College, graduating in 1904. She attended her 75th reunion at Smith last year. After she was married, she livedin Andover where her husband, the late Walter Lillard, taught at Philips Andover for nine years. He was also associated with Tabor Academy for many years and the Lillards came to Cohasset in about 1954 upon his retirement.

Asked how she felt on her 97th birthday, Mrs. Lillard said, "I'm feeling pretty good." Congratulations and many happy returns to her!

☐Sorry to hear of John Golden's misfortune recently with his printing business. Golden Print of W. Quincy was robbed the day after Thanksgiving, and suffered heavy fire damage also. The 62 year old family business is owned by John Golden of 2 Bound Brook Lane. It is estimated that ten's of thousands of dollars of damage was incurred to equipment, building, and work in progress by the fire that is being termed "suspected arson." Mr. Golden was operating again the following weekend and plans to continue amid repairs and clean-up.

Audubon Auction

Audubon articles) one last time. And yet some of these same people are working to save the Washingtons in Boston."

Mrs. Parker said the society could have taken care of the Audubons. "We already have some very valuable things in our museums. We're not worried about those articles.

"I've talked to 50 people and everyone was against the auction. I wonder if the trustees know that Audubon lived in Key West, Florida, and there is a little wooden house in the area in which his drawings are displayed," she said, disagreeing that the trustees had to fear safety.

"With all the money in Cohasset — all the wealthy people who donate to the sailing club and other organizations — I think we could have found someone to buy it for Cohasset."

Richard Hayes, librarian, said last week that the auction was voted to hold the auction by the trustees because "The plate got too valuable to keep."

Sotheby, Parke, Bernet Inc. will be paid $3,540 for its services by Cohasset, with the remaining proceeds from the sales going into a special library account in the town treasury. Town meeting would have to vote the money out of the account. But it could be voted out for other purposes.

Library Trustee Sheila Evans, who attended the auction in New York, was quoted as saying the Audubon plate was one of 270 items sold that day. Bidding started at $6,000.

The trustees do not know who donated the Audubon books to the library or the plate to the library.

The copper plate, No. 72, pictures a swallow-tailed kite in flight with a snake in its claws. It, like the books, was sold to an unidentified buyer.

The plate is one of 78 existing plates from the original collection of 435 which were made from Audubon drawings by London printer Robert Havell, Jr. and others between 1827 and 1838. They were used to make hand-water-colored copies of the original edition of "The Birds of America."

Selectmen, who by law can dispose of any real property of the town, agreed to the auctioning of the Audubon articles in August, 1979.

Drama Club Auditions

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will be holding open auditions for its Winter play, The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie on Sunday, Dec. 16 from 2-4 p.m. The director is Brewster Pattyson of Cohasset; and performance dates will be Feb. 14, 15 and 16.

All characters are well drawn and demand depth and sensitivity on the part of all actors. Required are four men, eight women, plus extras. Especially needed are mature high school aged girls to play Miss Brodie's prize pupils.

Replacing Cohasset's originally scheduled Detective Story as the Winter show, "Miss Brodie" follows the extremely successful Fall production of The Importance of Being Earnest. Anyone wishing further information, or wishing to assist in this production should write to John Mallon, c/o Cohasset Dramatic Club, Box 225, Cohasset, Mass. 02025.

☐Have you noticed? The Red Lion sign which stood opposite the South Shore Music Circus entrance on Sohier Street for many years is gone — for good.

Erwin Cone, owner of the Red Lion Inn, says that the filing procedure for billboard permits just got to be too complicated and time consuming, so he took the sign down.

There were few regulations when the sign was originally erected years ago, but the bureaucratic routing that is now required (six to seven different boards have to approve the permit renewal) has made it "not worth it," according to Cone.

tangents

By David Cutler

Before we get to the toys which, in this case are computer chess sets with, uh, chips, let me explain about the Mariner's Section 2.

It's gone, as discerning readers may have noticed, and it's gone because it was a flop, which is embarrassing for me because the section was my idea. My former partner, Mike Stearns, never liked it; neither did our general manager, Lois Martin who was at least more gracious about the whole thing than one loudmouth staffer who said "Section 2 stinks," proving just how far newspaper people will go to toady up to their editors. Sychophants need not apply.

Section 2 was supposed to offer news and features of general interest that would go into all four Mariners — Marshfield, Scituate, Norwell and Cohasset. (I always resisted the temptation to refer to the four towns as Mariner Country which is a plus, I think.) Since people in Norwell don't really give a hoot about what happens in Cohasset and vice versa, the section never caught on fire.

GAMES PEOPLE PLAY

On to the toys.

Aside from a free wheeling Monopoly fight that allows double hotels and usurous lending to faltering players, chess is my indoor game. The problem is finding someone to play when I can play which is usually at a ridiculous hour in the night time.

Not to worry.

Just beyond the dishwashers and the power tools at Sears is Texas Instruments' gift (they make the chips) to lonely chess players. These are computer chess sets and, mate, they don't fool around. One can talk at you in four languages. The other just beeps but beeping is quite enough, since the computer wins more often than not and is equipped to play at seven different levels. Level one is for intermediates, so if you're a "piece pusher," try gin rummy.

On the night I approached this new kind of wizzardry, I heard a kid yelling about how He took my knight; "he" being the computer who is ruthless about what he takes. This lad and his pal were precocious turned condescending.

When I took on level three and proceeded to fail, they sighed and suggested that perhaps I shouldn't have castled. And why, they wondered, did I leave my knight on b-3 so long?

When the computer "beeped" to an easy win, they suggested I attempt level two, trying not to snicker. One recommended a couple of chess books.

Bridge fanatics can play computer bridge. There is also computer backgammon and the boys told me with some sarcasm, there's computer checkers as well.

I took the chess set home and I play it, even if it means mumbling to a machine. People think newspapermen are crazy anyway.

Personalized Bowling Pins

The Cohasset Community Center Bowling Alley is offering personalized bowling pins to help the center pay for its new candlepins.

Members of the Roaring Twenties Bowling League came up with the idea. Each member of the league is buying a pin, which is $14 tax deductible to the CCC, and the center is inscribing the donor's name on the pin.

For further information on how you can have a pin named after you call Bill O'Connell at 383-0088 and aid a good cause.

Dept. Heads Tiff

Building Inspector James Litchfield and Fire Chief Charled Piepenbrink tiffed at last week's selectmen's meeting — and selectmen called for more cooperation between the two departments.

But the result of the discussion appeared to signal a lack of personnell in both departments. Litchfield stressed the need for more secretarial help while Piepenbrink said he could barely man fire apparatus now between sick leave and vacation days.

According to Litchfield, fire reports are not issued to him regarding burned buildings, calls are not returned, and fire department officials do not attend meetings regarding fire issues at town hall.

While Litchfield said he realized the chief couldn't be everywhere, he suggested that he designate a deputy chief to fulfill some of Piepenbrink's duties.

Wheh Litchfield complained that he was unable to get a fire report regarding a recent fire, Piepenbrink said he was not withholding the information. "I gave the information to the insurance company." He added that he had been advised by town counsel on that particular matter to allow no information to leave his office without counsel's knowledge.

Piepenbrink complained that he had been having problems with "Too many people peddling information."

Regarding joint meetings at town hall, Piepenbrink said he didn't feel a great deal of what happened at those meetings applied to the fire department other than the building code.

When Litchfield said nursing homes had called him regarding inspections, Piepenbrink said nursing home inspections had been made last month.

Piepenbrink added that while Litchfield wanted cooperation, "He doesn't do much to foster that. I have to read the things he says about me in the newspaper."

Wrapped In Cellophane

By Rob Tis

If an outsider (outside CHS) ever ventured past the main office they wouldn't have any trouble recognizing the wrestling team.

What other group would spend their study halls in the boiler room wearing 10 Winter coats?

What other 30 guys can be found running through the corridors of school after 5 p.m. with 20 layers of polar Eskimo suits on?

Who else sits at the breakfast, lunch and dinner table with the same glass of nonfat milk before them on the days before the matches?

In the Winter sports season the team, as a unit, takes over the school and has a permanent mailing address in the CHS weight room. Strangley, the group of sweat-bathed giants with five layers of sweatshirts and cellophane garbage bags wrapped around them doesn't even produce a second glance.

While high school wrestling is definitely an individual sport, there is no other sports team at CHS with more team togetherness and spirit than the wrestling team.

This year's team has a great deal of experience. Led by senior Craig Langford, Paul Stockbridge, John Lagroterria and John Maclean — one of the team's more colorful members who, incidently, has a good shot at college wrestling — the outlook for good scoring its good.

Last year's team went five and five overall and Skippers Rick Hobson, Davidi Duncomb and Torin Sweeny placed well in the South Eastern Division II sectionals. Duncomb and Sweeny are back this year and Hobson will be wrestling for Massachusetts Maritime Academy.

John Leone, whose name is becoming synomyous with hard work, will be reassuming his job as head coach.

Weight classes aren't final, but veteran varsity wrestlers like the Langfords, Lagroteria, Maclean, Stockbridge, Duncomb and Sweeny. Also returning are Jack Hernan, Paul Igo, Mike Buckley and Mike (Stickman) Ellis.

The magnetism last year's team generated has attracted quite a few rookies for this year's team. Promising newcomers include Don MacKinnon, Peter Hobson, Geoff Thayer, Chris Mahoney and J.T. Price.

Last Saturday during a preseason meet in Scituate, Cohasset dominated not only with its veteran mat-men, but with the rookies, who showed great strength.

As Jack Hernan put it, "The wrestling team is going a long way this year. By the end of the season Cohasset will be known state-wide for wrestling and it will take one tough team to knock us off."

This sports writer tends to agree.

Great Expectations

By Rob Tis

If there's one team that a great deal is expected from it is the Girls' Varsity Basketball team. This team has lost only one starter to graduation and has such powerful returning seniors as: Jodi Sandblom, Ellen McCarthy, Lorraine Carrol, and Jull Rosano.

Not only does this team have experience but it is one of the tallest teams in the league. The pre-mentioned seniors as well as Jane Higgins, Carolyn Wampol, Peachi Latson and Lindsey Gilmore all are between 5 foot 10 and 6 foot 1, and will be crashing the boards for the Skippers.

In the back court sophomore Katie Salerno will be returning and she will be aided by guards Pam Johnson, Hannah Clinton, and Karen Froio. The Skippers are coming off an over 500% season last year and with their high and agile back court they are looking forward to a successful season.

As Skippers foreward Jane Higgins put it, "We have an extremely well rounded team and with our combination of height, speed, and shooting we should go on to an outstanding season."

The Skippers are led by coach Mike Brennan and play their games the same nights as the boys, alternating home and away.

Christmas Bazaars

By Lois Martin

Some say the first New England Christmas celebration was in St. Croix, Maine. In fact in its monthly publication "Maine Life," published in Sedgwick, says 79 relocated "French artisans" had settled in that wilderness in 1604.

Apparently those men did a good job of creating a pleasant day. But the thing is with no women in the settlement no bazaar was held that year.

I know of no record of the first church bazaar. Clearly it's an historic matter than out to be signified in the books.

In our era the annual Christmas bazaar is big stuff. And they're getting earlier every year, like stores with holiday displays.

Starting November weekends churches and organizations open the curtains on annual big bazaars. Although women have been the prime movers behind these holiday sales, the new trend includes men, their crafts and cooking. And it's been a worthy addition to the events.

Bazaars now offer what has become standard fare — crafts, foods, decorations, snacks, Santa type person sometimes, and home created clothing. We swarm to all of these, using Saturday mornings to critique the occasions and to buy something for our front doors as well as a cake or craft. But it's the chowder brewing that gets you inside the door and calls you back at lunch.

This year I believe I've hit about seven bazaars. I've seen the clever new door hanging, tree ornaments and stuffed dolls. I'd like a lot of those because I am the part of society that has no talent in creating nifty objects to post about my house during December. In a burst of enthusiasm two years ago I gleaned a swell idea for gluing old bits of jewelry on velvet and framing it for over the fireplace mantle.

It was to have been a tree. A friend and I spent a Sunday afternoon crafting the thing. We had a grand time because neither of us was judgmental of our work. We ended up with a slanted imitation of a pine tree, fashioned from tired bits of unworn cheap jewels.

We believed it to be a masterpiece. No one has been able to persuade us otherwise. Every year I place it with pride in my living room, in spite of protestations that it belongs in the garage.

Anyway, craftlessness leads me to bazaars and makes me marvel anew each year at the accomplishments of modest folks. I'm also partial to the plant table and the white elephant groupings. I went to a 60 Plus Club fair/bazaar/festival last month. It was my favorite thus far this year.

I ignored the home knit pink toddler snowsuits and loitered near the white elephants. The prices were affordable and then some. I found someone's brass urn irrestible at 25 cents; candle holders that had been a whist prize desirable (25 cents), and a white blooming begonia just right for the brass pot at 50 cents.

Seniors, I decided, have perspective in pricing used material goods. They have experience and wisdom about what they charge.

And there's a definite advantage in November bazaars. When I discovered the glass drip percolator I'd bought at one fair wasn't right for me, I still had time to enter it in the white elephant of my church's December bazaar.

Not to leave you hanging in the air about the 79 men in Maine's 1604 Christmas saga . . . they had a pleasant day with religious services led by a Catholic priest and a Protestant minister. Shortly thereafter, however, scurvy hit the group with brutal force, killing off more than half the colony in that winter.

One can not help speculating, if there'd been a decent bazaar with some hot clam chowder to warm the French artisans, they might have survived long enough to celebrate their second New England Christmas.

Pro Arte Singers In Messiah

The Pro Arte Singers, a South Shore choral group under the direction of Walter Chapin, will perform Handel's Messiah on Sunday, Dec. 9, at 5 p.m. at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Church Street, Hanover. Soloists for this presentation of the world's best known Christmas piece include Diana and David Whiting, Marlene and Robert Hartley, Sandra Littlejohn, Thomas Clark and Robert Detwiler. Tickets will be $3.50 ($2.50 for senior citizens and students) at the door; call 545-0238 or 545-0260 for advance tickets at reduced rates. The Messiah performance will be repeated in Scituate at the First Parish Unitarian Church on Friday, Dec. 14 at 8 p.m. with advance tickets available

Largest Christmas Stockings

Two of the world's largest Christmas Stockings filled with gifts and toys are on display at the Scituate and Marshfield offices of the Vin Doyle Real Estate Company. The gigantic stockings will be awarded to two lucky winners of a Free Christmas Drawing on December 21, 1979.

All children 12 years old and under, who believe in Santa Claus are welcome to participate in this holiday festivity. Each child must fill out an entry blank at either Doyle office and must be accompanied by a parent.

The Doyle Offices are located at 183 Front Street in Scituate (across from the Town Pier) and Rte. 139 Marshfield (next to Grossmans).

WHERE YOU'RE A MEMBER — NOT A CUSTOMER

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

If you have a tolerant husband and plenty of room in the basement, you can save lots and lots of money on your grocery bill. It also helps if you're efficient and well-organized. For Pat Butler, it all began a year ago when the Refunding Group of the Norwell Newcomers first met. Now, 11 young mothers meet monthly to exchange coupons and refund offers. Not only has Pat saved several hundred dollars in food costs, but "it's fun to go to the mail every morning." No wonder, for she not only makes money on "buy one, get one free" offers, but keeps her baby in diapers, has a big doll house tucked away for Christmas, got a free candlestick from Bisquick, an instamatic camera from Tide, a game for little Jennifer, a giant frisbie for Joey and much, much more. Every once in a while, her husband grumbles good-naturedly about the pile of cartons and used boxes in the cellar, but we'd be willing to bet he's pretty proud of his wife's thrifty hobby. Perhaps we should all set aside our hobbies long enough to make a batch of these squares for our long-suffering husbands. Again, we have Millie Carr to thank for these.

PUMPKIN PIE SQUARES

Combine 1 c. flour, 1/2 c. oats, 1/2 c. brown sugar and 1/2 c. butter. Press into 9 x 13" pan and bake at 350 for 10 min. Combine 2 c. canned pumpkin, 1 13 oz. can evaporated milk, 2 eggs, 3/4 c. sugar, 1/2 tsp. salt, 1 tsp. cinnamon, 1/2 tsp. ginger, 1/4 tsp. cloves. Pour over baked crust and bake 20 min. at 350. Combine 1/2 c. brown sugar and 1 T butter. Sprinkle over the top of hot filling and return to over for 15 min. 1/2 c. nuts may also be added to the topping.

Just by cutting coupons, Sharon Ducey figures she has saved at least ten percent of her grocery bill this past year. She admits it's a lot of work, clipping, filing, mailing and planning her shopping trips. Sharon tries to set aside one night a week, but says she's not as efficient as the "Coupon Queen" who claims for one hour a week she can save $20 on her food bill. The Queen appeared on television recently and has her coupon and refunding down to a science and has even written a book called "Ask the Coupon Queen" by Mary Ann Hayes. It's a paperback published by Pocket Books of New York. The basics are these: clip every coupon you can find; file all your coupons into easy-to-use groups and look through your coupon files to try to get a coupon for every item on your weekly shopping list. The basics for dressing up a simple meal might include the addition of this

ONION PARMESAN BREAD

1 loaf French bread
1/2 c. grated Parmesan cheese
1/4 c. finely chopped onion
1/2 c. mayonnaise

Slice one loaf of bread in half. Spread cut surface of bread with the Parmesan cheese- mayonnaise -onion mixture. Place on a baking sheet. Bake at 375 degrees for 15-18 minutes until bubbly and brown. Yield: 10 servings.

Ed Oliver, manager of the Hanover Stop and Shop, says his customers are very coupon conscious. He likes it, for it brings in more business. And it does seem to be catching on. At the Ventress Library in Marshfield, Barbara Burgess says some of their patrons spend hours going through their coupon exchange box; some don't even take out books. They have a few books on the subject, among them "Cashing In At the Check Out" by Susan Santur, Stone Song Press. At St. Andrew's Church, Lynne Lindblom has set up an exchange box for members. As Pat Butler says: "There's big money in refunding." There's also money saved in doctor's bills by serving dishes that are nourishing, as well as economical. Nancy Curry's advanced home economics class at MHS completed a shopping survey based on the use of unit price and then studied methods of meat preparation. The great hamburger contest was won by Kitchen 4's

PIZZA IN A BURGER

1½ lb. ground beef
1/3 c. parmesan cheese
1/4 c. finely chopped onion
1 tsp. oregano
1 6 oz. can tomato paste
4 slices mozzarella cheese, cut in strips
2 tomatoes, sliced
8 slices French bread toasted

Combine and shape into eight patties: beef, cheese, onion, 1 tsp. salt, oregano, tomato paste and dash of pepper. Broil 8 to 10 min. Turn, top with cheese and tomatoes. Cook until cheese melts. Serve on French bread.

Additional Renovation Planned For Lothrop House

By O.F. Ingram

Substantial progress in the restoration of the Lothrop House toward the goal of making it a major historical center for the town was reported to the annual meeting of the Cohasset Historical Society held recently in Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House.

Burtram J. Pratt, chairman of the Lothrop House Committee, told members and friends of the Society that much of the basic work on the building has now been accomplished and that additional renovation will go forward soon.

Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, Jr., President, reported greater interest in the Society's three Village museums during the past year and thanked individuals and organizations which have contributed to the maintenance and upkeep.

"We have kept moving forward slowly but surely at the Lothrop House," Pratt stated. "The sills and floor timbers have now been replaced where necessary, clapboards replaced in the front, and the rear wall completely shingled. New wiring and a new boiler have been installed, and the building newly painted and the shutters painted and hung."

Next project on the schedule is the Petersen Room, partially funded by the American Legion Post in memory of August F.B. Petersen who donated a tract of land to the Legion. The old kitchen of the house has been gutted and is now ready for the creation of a modern kitchen under the direction of James Patterson.

While much has been accomplished, much remains to be done, Pratt said, citing the need for a new roof shingles, rebuilding of a fireplace and construction of a climate controlled vault for the storage of the Society's gown collection.

Since the annual meeting, volunteers have done much preliminary interior refurbishing and painting. Interior decoration is being planned by a committee composed of Philip Smith, Charlotte Frost and Marge Benson.

Mrs. Parker singled out Lawrence Fone for his leadership in fund raising that made possible the painting of the exterior of the Independence Gown Museum in the Square, and the Community Garden Club for its contribution of $250 toward new plantings around this museum, to be completed in the spring under the direction of Betsy Hoopes. She also noted the continuing service of the Cohasset Garden Club in maintaining the grounds around the Historic House and Maritime Museum.

Coming soon at the Lothrop House will be a prefabricated building to serve as storage space, and the installation of a granite retaining wall and fence donated by the Community Garden Club.

Officers elected at the annual meeting are as follows: president, Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, Jr.; first vice president, Osborne Ingram; second vice president, Noel Ripley; secretary, Mrs. Wilfred Cooney; treasurer, Mrs. H.J. Harrington.

Directors in addition to the officers are Paul Blackmur, Mrs. William C. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. A. Werk Cook, Conrad Ericsson, Charlotte Frost, Drexel Gibson, Linda Hewitt, Mrs. George Littlejohn, Robert B. James, Mrs. George Littlejohn, Phillip Murray, Arthur Nilsson, Burtram Pratt, Edward E. Tower and Arnold Weeks. Members of the Lothrop House Committee are Burtram Pratt, Chairman, Arnold Weeks, Arthur Clark, Mrs. Howard Enders and James Patterson.

Cohasset Man Plays Key Role In Rescue

On Monday, Dec. 3rd, on the cold upper slopes of Mount Mansfield in Vermont, Cadet Richard McIntosh, Jr., a 1974 graduate of Cohasset High School, played a key role in the rescue of two fellow students from Norwich University who had become stranded on the mountain in sub-zero weather for over 48 hours.

A member of the Army ROTC Mountain and Cold Weather Company's Rescue Team, Cadet McIntosh was alerted early Monday morning along with 25 other team members and informed that the two stranded students had failed to return from a hiking expedition on Saturday and that their unoccupied automobile had been located late Sunday at the base of the 4,943-foot mountain, Vermonth's highest.

In the midst of a thorough search of the rugged wooded area, the Rescue Team, with the aid of an Army National Guard helicopter and Vermont State Police, spotted the two students on an ice-covered rock ledge about 2,400 feet up from the mountain's base.

Without further delay, the Rescue Team turned to the task of making the long and arduous climb to the stranded students and otherwise putting to use their extensive training in mountain-and-rescue techniques.

Before nightfall the two stranded Norwich students, suffering from exposure, frostbite, and dehydration, had been brought down the mountain and later hospitalized, knowing that without the help of Cadet McIntosh and his fellow Army ROTC Rescue Team members, their outing might have ended in disaster.

Singers At First Parish

By Roberta Leary

The Broad Cove Chorale and Unicorn Singers of Hingham will present a program of Christmas music Sunday, Dec. 16 at 3 p.m. at the First Parish Church, Cohasset.

Proceeds from the concert will benefit Cambodian refugees.

The program will include festive carol arrangements for mixed and womens chorus with organ, piano and handbell accompaniment. A section of French early 20th century music by Poulenc and Faure will feature soprano soloist Jeanne Scammell.

Tickets for the event are available from the First Parish Church, 23 North Main Street. Patrons receive two concert tickets for $25 and may claim a $20 tax deductible contribution. Additional tickets for the concert only are $3 and are available at the following stores: Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy, In Stitches and the Wee Spinnaker in Cohasset, and the Nth Degree in Hingham. Checks should be made out to the First Parish Church.

Since seating at the church is limited, tickets should be purchased immediately.

The True Spirit Of Giving

The Mariner's Christmas Gift List!

It's that time of the year again . . . time for the Mariner to give selected gifts to its favorite town officials, town boards, innocent bystanders and competing newspapers. Don't be insulted if your name is not here, be grateful. We still wish you the very merriest!

If possible, Santa Claus, we would like to direct the following presents to:

—Skinny Laugelle, a cleaning lady two days a week at the town dump.

—To the entire citizenry — $10,000 of the Audubon money to pay off the A.G. for past pollution.

—The reincarnation of Sweeney, Silvia, Chatterton and Muchaley for the 1980 CHS football season.

—Louis Bravo, dripless parsley and watercress and self-mopping floors.

—Longevity to the Old Goats.

—25 more back-up host families for Metco students.

—Music Circus, ear plugs with volume control for every seat.

—Harbormaster Harry Ritter, six months of terminated phone service.

—The Youngs, two feet of snow on Mt Attatash.

—Norman Swain, a paint-by-number set.

—Frank England, dueling pistols or swords.

—Diana Kornet, silver handcuffs and then she won't be able to talk

—Martha Gjesteby, all her missing school mail.

—Pat Walsh, a library at Beechwood.

—Irene Brown, a gara-animal tagged coordinated outfit with 20 mix and match pieces.

—Dr. John Maloney, a committee that will say yes unanimously with no discussion.

—Jack Langmaid, a unanimous vote on anything.

—The entire school committee, a court stenographer for a two-week trial period.

—The police department, a helicopter to fly in prescriptions and pizza to Sohier St. residents during Circus traffic tie-ups

—Dr. Robert Sceery, a book entitled "All You Ever Wanted To Know About Head Lice."

HOOPS! — Pat Duffy of Cohasset disrupts plans of Middleboro opponent which was what Skippers did to the South Shore League favored opposition in springing a stunning upset last week.

School Supt. Recommends 3.98% Budget Increase

School Supt. John Maloney's recommended $3.67M 1980-81 school budget got the school committee's rapt attention this week — but it will reserve its probing comments for a budget session scheduled Tuesday, Jan. 7.

The budget, a 3.98 per cent increase over this year's budget ($3.53M), does not include a projected increase in energy costs of approximately $85,000. Supt. Maloney recommended the committee seek additional community support for a tax cap override.

Supt. Maloney pointed out his prime considerations in determining the proposed budget. The first being to maintain the quality of the programs that are presently in the school system. The second to continue the program of re-allocation of money from one account to another to reflect academic and program needs of the children.

The third, improvement of the over-all education program at a reasonable cost to the taxpayer; and four, to provide alternative pages for Committee for other program improvements.

The proposed budget is based on an estimated enrollment next year of 1,558 students. Cohasset continues to experience a decline in enrollment with a reduction this year of 99. The Osgood School will again experience the largest brunt of budget reductions due to fewer students; a projected decrease of 286 in 1980.

It was recommended that the Osgood staff be reduced by one first grade teacher, one third grade teacher, and an aide from open space and special needs. The budget shows a decrease of $36,304 to $490,025. The recommended floor plan for Osgood also reflects the loss of two classes, with the proposed addition of a separate library, art and music rooms.

The music teacher would increase days worked from two to four per week.

The Deer Hill budget again reflects the relative status quo in student population with Jones Site New Favorite?

Sewer Commission Chairman William Montuori said Monday he sees the Paul Jones conservation land on Sohier Street as the town's new, top contender for a new wastewater treatment plant.

"We (the commissioners) feel the Jones site should be studied. I feel voters would prefer it over the school lands (abutting the Music Circus) or Whale Meadow," Montuori said.

During the commissioner's meeting, Montuori called Conservation Commission Chairman Pat Buckley and was told that the conservation commission would probably have no problem in releasing the Jones land from its conservation jurisdiction, but that only a consensus of the committee had been taken, the vote being 5-0 with two members not in attendance.

In the meantime, commissioners planned to go before the advisory committee Tuesday to ask for $12,000 from the reserve fund in order that Metcalf & Eddy Engineers

Cohasset Punch - Never

[ED.'s Note: See Dec. 13 issue, page 32, for details].

Bob Stanton on Clay Spring Road has an empty bottle of it. Photographer Greg Derr sniffed it and said "It's 60 proof." The bottle tells one how to serve it, but it doesn't give a clue to the secret formula — which has been traced to the Cohasset, Mass. estate of the late comedian William H. Crane.

According to Stanton, he once visited the popular Chicago establishment called "Cohasset Punch" on a Sunday, several years ago. But it's not open on Sunday. Stanton had his picture taken in front of the place, nonetheless.

Stanton said Bernard Mulcahy from Pond Street has also visited the Chicago saloon. So did Tom Churchill — a former Cohasset Selectman.

Churchill said he found out about it many years ago when he met a fellow national sales representative, Ed Lang, from Liberty Cherries. At the time Lang's college roommate (no name) had the secret formula. Lang's roommate may or may not have been Tommy Ohman from Chicago, or a man named

Impersonating A Patriot

Lieut. Charles Stockbridge said Anthony Tidwell, 29, who leased a house on Norman Todd Road, was arrested Tuesday for larceny by fraud.

Tidwell allegedly told his Wrentham landlord he was Tony McGee of the Boston Patriots and bounced a check on the same name.

Stockbridge said Tidwell has several other warrants outstanding. State Police took Tidwell to Wrentham District Court.

Water Your Skin

By Linda Lee

As winter approaches we are all concerned with a common problem. Whether your skin is dry, normal or oily, we begin to notice the fine lines and wrinkles starting to appear around the corners of the eyes, lips and cheeks. These are the warning signs of dehydrated skin.

The col , dry climate that we live in will find us reaching for the moisturizing creams and lotions. But before you apply it, look at the ingredients. What are you really putting on your skin?

Chemicals? Preservatives?

Dehydration is a lack of water in the skin tissue. No chemical or preservative is going to put water in the tissues.

What a good moisturizer will do is keep that water from evaporating from the skin. But by drinking 8 glasses of water a day you can put that water in the tissues. Why not take care of the skin you are in?

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT is caught at Town Hall with a traditional wreath welcoming visitors with the holiday spirit. [Derr photo]

Budget

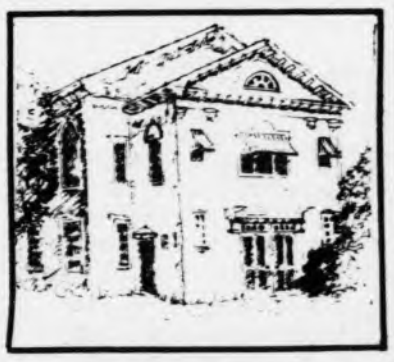
a slight 3.35 per cent increase and a budget of $683,622 to meet the needs of an estimated 370 students.

The staff would be reduced by only one teacher and a half-time aide.

The budget proposes beefing up the gifted and talented program with the inclusion of the 4th grade in January 1980 and the addition of a full-time aide to handle an anticipated enrollment in the program of 50.



The Junior/Senior High School will have the largest enrollment of all schools, with an estimated 902 students. The budget proposes to reduce staff there by only a 1/5 foreign language teacher and one English aide.

The total allocation of funds would be $2.06 million, an increase over this year's total of 5.4 per cent. The largest single budget increase in the High School is for the proposed full-time Health Education teacher at a salary of $16,285, an issue not yet resolved by the School Committee.

It was also the recommendation of the Superintendent to upgrade the reading program with the addition of a full-time reading teacher, the appointment of whom was defeated Monday.

Other recommendations are the hiring of a federal and state grantsmanship writer; summer school education program at the Jr./Sr. high school; a capital outlay request of $15,000 to be matched, 3-for-1 by state funding, for cafeteria and lunchroom renovations at the high school; continued energy conservation measures, including a carpeting program in some of the Deer Hill classrooms; an allocation of $1,250 to the Osgood Library; repair and painting to school buses for the primary and intermediate grades; and an increase in the high school athletic budget for girl's soccer and new, safety football helmets.

Around Town Hall

ALLICANTS INTERVIEWED

Selectmen interviewed six of 10 eligible applicants for four openings for permanent intermittent police officers to be paid at $4.96 an hour. Selectmen said no individuals would be hired until a police school was scheduled. David Cogill was inadvertently left off the Civil Service list last week. Civil Service made the error.

MEETING APPROVED

Town Counsel Blake Thaxter, Jr. received an extension for the special town meeting to be held on a sewerage site treatment plant from the end of January to February 14, 1980 through negotiations with the Attorney General's Office.

INSPECTION

Karla Kelley, district sanitarian, notified selectmen that she recently found through inspection that the police station lock-up center was lacking clean toilet and hand wash facilities.

She also noted that numerous dirty blankets were in the cells and recommended that blankets be stored outside the cells when not in use.

In addition, it was recommended that in the future all bunk mattresses be of a fire-retardant material, that rules for the police station regarding lock-ups, etc., be posted — and asked that a plan of correction be submitted to the district sanitarian — which is Karla Kelley.

RULING ASKED

Lester Hiltz of Cushing Road asked selectmen last week for a ruling from town counsel regarding any possible conflict of interest involving Sewer Commissioner John W. Hobbs and his affiliations with Hobbs Sewer Equipment in Cohasset.

Selectmen said more details regarding the possible conflict would be needed before they could ask counsel's advice.

Selling Out Their Town

[Ed.'s Note: In a front-page article last week the MARINER summarized Mrs. Parker's feelings about the recent Audubon auction held by the board of library trustees. The following is a letter which she sent to selectmen last week. Various members of the historical commission and the historical society planned to meet with selectmen this week regarding the Audubon auction.]

To Whom It May Concern:

I, Constance W. Parker write as an independent Cohasset, native born citizen and as the President of the Cohasset Historical Society.

I am extremely irate and upset to learn that our town's Trustees of the Public Library, and our Town Selectmen, have, without notifying the people, the citizens of Cohasset, sold out part of our history, our heritage, our possessions, without asking the public's opinion, without showing the priceless objects to us, the adults and to our future, the school children of Cohasset, let alone the same general public of our neighboring towns the opportunity to see something of great value esthetically, that many will never have the opportunity again to observe without travelling many many miles.

One of the most unbelieveable parts of this is to know that several of these same Trustees are actively working in this town, collecting money and promises of same, to "Save Martha and George for Boston" and at the same time are selling out their own town.

A Trustee, I believe is a person responsible for the property or affairs of another. Are these Trustees, so called, showing responsibility for the property of the people of Cohasset?

How hard the people connected with the Art Center work to help the beginning artist, give scholarships to deserving students, put in many hours of effort to help others, but were not given the opportunity to put on exhibition a few pieces of art of great renown, given to the people of Cohasset by someone unknown, many years ago.

The Historical Society offered these objects a home. We are not afraid of theft; we have several objects of great value, we are not afraid, we are growing, with faith.

There was no publicizing the fact that the Library had these articles. The people were not asked whether we should keep them or sell them for the almighty dollar.

But yet they were public property, given to the Library, obviously without restriction. There must be a record of the gifts somewhere, unless the library has tossed out the old records just as they sell books that have been given as Memorial gifts.

Is our renovated library building, at the cost of many thousands of dollars, so vulnerable, more so than our historical buildings or our private homes?

Many of these people have alarm systems in their homes (are constantly setting them off because they do not know how to use them, causing many hours of police runs unnecessarily because they don't know enough to call the police department when they set them off by mistake).

Do most of these people have rare things of value such as the Audubons?

No. But the real people of wealth were never contacted to see if they might want to buy these articles to keep them in Cohasset, yet they are willing to donate generously to build cancer centers, sailing club buildings, swimming pools and Historical projects.

This is the second time in a few years that gifts to the townspeople, without restrictions, have been "sold down the drain." What is next?

There is one way we can combat this. Vote these TRUSTEES out of office! Turn the affairs of the library back to the people of Cohasset who are responsible for having a town that others want to come to, to live in.

Give Cohasset back to Cohasset.

Very truly yours,
Constance W. Parker

Never Out Of Style

By Chet Ellis

This weekend, as you get ready for Saturday night's three-in-a-row cocktail parties, and you put on your carefully pressed black watch plaid slacks and your navy blue blazer with the gold buttons, be aware my Cohasset friends, that you are getting into uniform. As you slip your feet into the newly polished penny loafers (or, if you live on the water side of Atlantic Avenue — winter grade deck shoes) and pull on the old camel colored wool coat just before sliding behind the wheel of the new Volvo station wagon (or, the Country Squire if you live on the other side of Atlantic Avenue), be aware. Oh pink-nosed patrician, that you are acting in concert with nature, you are doing what the world expects of you, you are acting "New England." Which brings to mind a story.

A month or so ago, while on a business trip to California, I was chatting with a friend (and former business associate) who had left the Big Apple and settled in Tinseltown in the late fifties. We were discussing the personal style changes that had developed in the twenty years since we both left the New York metropolitan area. I marvelled at his "California look," his powder blue designer suit, the open wide-collar shirt, the alligator loafers, the gold jewelry, and the thirty dollar coiffure. I should also mention the 280 SX with air, in two tone blue (to match the suit), and the Gucci briefcase. If he showed up in Cohasset in that outfit, I think he just might be noticed. In Los Angeles, he was just another soldier in the army of the West.

"Joe," I said, "you look ah well, Western, but tell me, if you didn't know already, could you tell I'm from New England?"

"Are you kidding?" he chortled, "I could spot you as a Yankee right away. You guys all look the same. I mean, blue button down shirts, charcoal slacks, and tweed sport jackets went out of style in California shortly after the Gold Rush. You probably drive a Volkswagon Bus too!"

"How did you know that?" I asked, crushed at being so transparent.

"Easy," he said, "everybody in New England who is poor drives either an old Volvo or a Volkswagon Bus and you look like a VW type. If they want to look rich they drive a Mercedes. If they are rich they drive a pick-up truck."

"Why is it we're all so entropic?" I wondered out loud, "are there no more social frontiers? Have we all conformed to our environment to such an extent that we are so instantly recognizable? I've got to change direction now before it's too late."

"Relax," said my friend, as he ordered another round of Tequila Sunrises (the California equivalent of a screwdriver), and leave the changes to the younger generation. They're the only ones that can handle it anyway. Just accept your lot and do as the Romans, as the saying goes."

When I got back to Cohasset I thought about what he had said. After all, what difference does it make that we are so easily recognizable elsewhere. I mean, it's impossible to change your style for every trip out of New England. What's really important is being recognized at home!

So this Saturday, polish up the old penny loafers, pull on the camel overcoat, hop in the Volvo wagon and hit that first cocktail party with the right attitude. After you enter and shake hands with the hosts, go get a drink and walk up to the first person you see in plaid slacks and a blue blazer. Open with that good old Cohasset conversation starter: "Did you get your boat out of the water yet?" From then on, it's all downhill.

Defends Auction

Letters

To the Editor:

I am concerned that the December 13 Mariner article "Audubon Auction Nets $40,460" makes the reader wonder whether the Cohasset Library trustees should have sold the valuable, town-owned Audubon copper plate and two sets of Audubon books at public auction on November 27.

Specifically, members of the Cohasset Historical Society and the Cohasset Historical Commission were quoted in your article. They questioned why these Audubon articles somehow couldn't have been sold to someone in Cohasset, presumably a person who would have given them to the Historical Society.

An explanation of the library trustees' recommendation to the selectmen was not presented in this article; your readers nonetheless are entitled to this information.

In light of the theft of many art treasures in recent years, in Cohasset and elsewhere, the trustees decided more than a year ago that it was unsafe to either display or keep these valuable Audubon articles in the library.

Faced with the decision to either store them permanently in a vault or to otherwise dispose of them, the trustees learned that any town property valued at $1,000 or more may only be disposed of by sale at public auction.

After much discussion and careful consideration, the trustees recommended sale at public auction to the selectmen as preferable to storage. Their sale would fulfill the donors' apparent intent to benefit the library, as well as permit some enjoyment of these treasures by somebody.

Sotheby, Parke, Bernet, Inc., New York, was selected as the auctioneer that would provide the largest market. Anyone from Cohasset could have attended the auction and successfully bid on these Audubon articles. The trustees rejected the idea of holding the public auction in Cohasset since this location might not assure the best sale price.

In any event, a local auction would not assure a Cohasset buyer, since nonresidents and dealers could not be excluded.

The library trustees' meetings are monthly and both the public and the press are encouraged to attend. As your article indicated, the proposed sale of the Audubon articles was known late last summer. Before the sale took place, two informal inquiries were made to individual trustees. No inquiries or comments, however, were officially addressed to the trustees on this matter.

Sincerely,

Sheila S. Evans, Chairman
Trustees, Cohasset Free Public Library

Holiday Dumping Hours

The Board of Health announces Holiday Hours at the Cohasset Disposal Area (Dump).

Sunday, Dec. 23, open 8 a.m.-4 p.m.; Monday, Dec. 24, closed all day; Tuesday, Dec. 25, (Christmas), closed all day; Wednesday, Dec. 26, open 8 a.m.-4 p.m.

The same Holiday schedule will be followed for the New Year weekend — Sunday, Dec. 30, and Wed., Jan. 2, open. Monday, Dec. 31, and Tuesday, Jan. 1, closed.

Town Should Be Determiner

To the Editor:

I was surprised and frustrated to read of the action of the Cohasset School Committee in refusing to transfer land for use as a wastewater treatment facility. Those feelings were intensified as their next refusal to transfer land nearby for the proposed fire station.

I feel that both tracts are town land acquired by the taxpayers for proper town use. Is it reasonable that one town board can possess land indefinitely with no clearly-defined purpose and not make it readily available as the town may require?

I have sat as a school committee member in another town and never felt that we had sovereign powers that would hinder reasonable town development. Hence, my frustration at this current impasse.

Isn't there some way in which the voters of the town can be the determiners of last resort on how town property is to be disposed?

One hopes that people of good will can reason together on this matter. My belief is that the property in question is town land, and not a fief on one board.

Yours,
David Chittim

Response From Music Circus

[Ed.'s Note: The selectmen recently received the following letter from the chairman of the board of trustees of the South Shore Music Circus].

Gentlemen:

Arthur Clark, Chairman of your Board, has forwarded to me a copy of the letter of November 14, 1979 written by Mary E. Gainor relative to the issuance of a license to the Music Circus for the 1980 season.

I will be very happy to convey to the Board of Directors of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. the substance of the hearing on November 7, 1979 before your Board relative to the issuance of a 1980 license. He suggested I write a letter to the Selectmen.

As Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Playhouse I should state that I believe I express the sentiment of the Board as being very concerned about the feelings of the citizens of Cohasset relative to the operation of the Music Circus.

I feel that the benefits to the Town derived from this operation are very considerable. If I did not believe so I would not have been a member of this Philanthropic Organization since its inception. Many thousands of people genuinely enjoy our productions, many thousands of dollars are annually given to worthwhile organizations in Cohasset and surrounding towns, while a great deal of employment and income is generated to the benefit of the town and the South Shore.

However, this operation is a high risk undertaking and is becoming increasingly more so. Therefore, anything that limits the operation of this undertaking and infringes on our ability to present an artist's performance or reduces operational flexibility affects the Music Circus seriously.

Upon presentation to the Board of several conditions suggested at the meeting of November 7, serious and concerned consideration will be given.

It should also be kept in mind, however, that these issues brought forth at the November 7th meeting plus many more are now before the Superior Court of Massachusetts on appeal from the decision of the Cohasset Town Board of Appeals.

Personally, I feel that the traffic situation should be handled by the Town through the Police Department with full support and cooperation by the Music Circus.

It is my understanding that no performances for the 1980 season have been scheduled to go on after 10:30 p.m. on the evening before a working day.

Also it is my understanding that two attractions have been scheduled for 1980 after the beginning of the September school year. Sound levels are under constant monitoring and every effort should be and is being made to operate with sound at a reasonable level.

I believe the Board should grant a license to the Music Circus for the 1980 season.

Very truly yours,
John J. Hayes, Jr.

Recommends Whitehead Site

To the Editor:

It is very important for the town of Cohasset to decide on the Whitehead Road area to be the site for the wastewater treatment plant.

It is also important that a town meeting be held quickly in order to prevent the town from being penalized $10,000 per day for its slowness in making a decision.

You are urged to study the assessor's map No. 31 which shows the area very well. Also study the Metcalf and Eddy sketch #1 in their voluminous report which shows the proposed location of the outflow pipe on the treatment plant site.

The treated waste water has to go to the ocean somewhere along the shore. The place selected is the same space between Big Whitehead and Little Whitehead under the concrete bridge which is the road to the Herrington house.

The sketch shows the outflow pipe starting from Jacob's Meadow and proceeding along Stockbridge St. and Howard Gleason Rd. to a point opposite the Yacht Club where it will turn left through the filled marsh now grown up with trees, proceeding on the Whale Meadow side of Whitehead Rd. to the ocean outlet.

That will be the shortest possible route from Jacob's Meadow. It will be the least costly and the cost for pumping will be minimim. It will be soft digging all the way except for one ledge.

On the west side of Whitehead Rd. is a considerable area grown up with seven feet high marsh grass. There is ample space there for the several parts of the treatment plant without taking land area from the two residences between Whitehead Rd. and Whale Meadow.

That site should not be objected to by surrounding house owners. There will be no appreciable odor. The treatment plant structures will not be unsightly. If desired they could be enclosed within a building the same as at Plymouth.

The treatment process will not produce noise. Everything considered the Whitehead Rd. site will be almost ideal. It is fortunate that the site remains available because almost all other sites proposed have been rejected by voters.

Incidentally the treatment plant will be beneficial to the houses in the neighborhood. They are mostly built on ledge and they have no leaching areas for their wastewater. Instead of customary septic tanks, their wastewater can be piped to the treatment plant which will solve a problem bothering the houses in that neighborhood.

It is hoped that the sewer commissioners and engineers will help to obtain a general agreement by recommending the Whitehead Rd. site to the voters. At another special town meeting to be held very soon the warrant can call for a vote "yes" or "no" upon the choice of the Whitehead site.

The choice should be easy because almost all other sites have been rejected and the Whitehead site is the only one never voted against. If any voters vote "no" they will be responsible for the penalty which will be paid out of taxes.

The town now has a simple plan which will not require prolonged consideration by a new group which will be unlikely to reach an agreement.

Looking Back

Imponderables Were Never Included

By Peter Barnicle

Everybody has heard about the Kinsey Report and the Beveridge Report, the study leading to England's cradle-to-the grave medical program, but how many Cohasseters are aware of The Benjamin Report?

The "Long Range Plan for Cohasset" was presented to the town in December, 1961, but Allen Benjamin, then planning consultant for the town of Wayland. It was a formidable document covering all facets of our town's needs to meet anticipated development.

The town had developed — there are more people here today than there were twenty years ago and the town is faced with more problems — I don't dare mention sewerage and waste disposal.

However, in looking back at the Benjamin Report we find that the town was not particularly impressed by its recommendations.

Town planners and consultants are given to make 'projections' and more often than not the projections fail to include the imponderables.

In the early 1960's the statisticians of the U.S. Office of Education and the Census Bureau predicted that school enrollments would continue to expand at least until 1980. That was a projection that left out an imponderable.

How were they to know that just over the horizon was "The Pill," family planning, and the emerging women's liberation movement? These were among the unseen factors which have led to a change in American family lifestyle and a declining birthrate.

A cursory review of the Benjamin Report — and you'll be lucky if you can find a copy — discloses among other things a look at the town's school system and the predicted needs for the future.

The Plan, working out of a crystal ball, suggested "for the predicted ultimate elementary school enrollment (1,500 to 1,800 in grades 1-6) a pattern of either four or five elementary schools would suffice."

The proposal called for acquisition of 12 to 15 acres of the west side of Forest Ave. for a new North Elementary School. Whether or nor the School Committee gave the suggestion any consideration we don't know. In any case, the area is now being filled with residential homes.

The projectionists also proposed acquisition of land for a new South Elementary School. One would be in the area east of Walnut Hilland North of Beechwood St. and the Hammond Ave. area. That would put it in the area of Mr. Nickerson's "Castle" and the Hayes property.

The Plan also mentioned an alternative site at the intersection of Pond and Spring Streets. That can be forgotten because Lantern Ln. has been developed with homes covering the site.

A third elementary school, the planners said, should be built in the area South of Beechwood St. and west of Mill Ln.

Projecting the future is as uncertain as weather forecasting and leaves the projectionist open to the pitfalls of the imponderables.

How were Benjamin, Educational Service Associates, a Medford School Consultants unit, Shurcliff & Merrill, Landscape Architects & Town Planners, Lester Gaynor, Westwood consulting engineer, and Charles M. Evans & Associates, consultants in Public Administration and Finance, working with the town planning board, to know about "The Pill"?

How were they to know the Plan would be put on the back burner and left there to simmer?

There is a lot more in the Plan about the things the town should do — most of them are still being held in abeyance, but they certainly make interesting reading.

Vacation Activities

A special three day program will be held at the Osgood School on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, Dec. 26, 27 and 28, from 9 a.m.-11:30 a.m. for Kindergarten and first grade.

The program will consist of structured, low-organized games and activities, supervised by members of the Summer Playground Staff.

OSGOOD SCHOOL

A similiar program will be conducted for grades 2 and 3, on the same days as above, from 12 noon to 2 p.m. only. All Osgood students are invited to attend the programs during their respective times.

DEER HILL

An open gym, low-organized games, and special activity program will be held on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, Dec. 26, 27 and 28, from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for Grades 4, 5, and 6.

Summer Playground Staff members will be supervisors for this program that, like the K-3 program, is free of charge, and open to all students. (Lunch may be brought to Deer Hill program only.)

around town

☐A very closed-mouthed group of highly organized unorganized friends and neighbors of Peter O'Loughlin this past week pulled off the surprise party of the year at the Sons of Italy Hall on Route 3-A in Hingham.

O'Loughlin, an attorney with Aetna Insurance and a resident of Forest Ave., was hailed by more than 150 guests for having achieved his 50th birthday.

Highlight of the evening was an invitation by the guests that he leave town — ONLY for a trip to the Land of Saints and Scholars, preferably to represent Cohasset at the St. Patrick's Day parade in Dublin. Peter said that despite his arduous work schedule he will endeavor to show up on O'Connell St., and maybe find time to drop into the Palace on Lower Abbey St. for a jar.

Peter's pal, Bob Ciciotte was master of ceremonies and narrator of a "This-Is-Your-Life" slide presentation which included a few facts about the Cambridge-born guest of honor.

That Peter is highly thought of was attested to by the presence of his mother-in-law and a niece from Batlimore; fellow workers from Aetna and friends from Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Peter's daughter, Linda, stole the show when she took the microphone to proclaim "He's the greatest Daddy in the world."

O'Loughlin is a late blooming thespian having made his debut last fall in "Gypsy" at Hingham High School. Next spring he will appear in "Oklahoma" — maybe as Curley. It will be presented on two weekends in May and Peter is already singing "Oh, What A Beautiful Morning."

☐Martha Sharpe of the David Sharpe Gallery on Main Street, donated her time and expertise two days last week at the Deer Hill School, where she showed students a representation of pictures from the Gallery. Students from all classes in the school had a chance to view and learn about watercolor, oil, pastel, and batik watercolor paintings; modern prints, antiquarian prints; sculpture; and antique hair combs and greeting cards.

Martha, who owns and manages the Gallery with her husband, David, is a former French and Spanish teacher.

☐It's not too late to send a Christmas card to the 50 American hostages in Iran. There are no guarantees that they'll be delivered, but we can hope they will: Fellow American, Alex Paen, KMPC, Hotel International, P.O. Box 12-1517, Tehran, IRAN.

(31 cents postage for an average size envelope)

☐Last week's coverage of Messrs. Schultz and Horn's "Omelets Through the Ages" was authored by Mr. Kirby (Wizard of Literature) Meacham. Credit must be given where it's due.

☐Mrs. Rosanne Ring of Jerusalem Road, was among many South Shore residents honored for their service to the Mass. Eye and Ear Infirmary. She was recognized for 10 years of service. Congratulations!

☐Dear Ballerinas, Ann Marie Goggin, Bridget Smith, and Meredith Nash: The camera worked, no one smirked; you all were great, we lost the take! Sincerely, K.B.

☐Susan Colleton, Kindergarten teacher at the Joseph Osgood School for ten years, will leave her post on Friday with many sad friends saying good-bye. She leaves for a very happy occasion, however; she plans to be married on January 26 to Nagi Mohammed, a Radiologist at Lowell General Hospital, and a native of Egypt. Susan and Nagi will live in West Boxford and are planning a trip to Egypt in the Spring.

Susan came to her teaching job in Cohasset after graduation from Wheaton College in the only area "I ever wanted to teach — Kindergarten." At the end of a decade of working with five year olds, she says the job has been everything she expected. "The characteristics of five year olds has sustained my stay here. It's a new thing, every day, with Kindergarteners; they're spontaneous, honest, enthusiastic, and excited about every new thing," she says. Their openess to new ideas and the flexibility of the curriculum, gives the Kindergarten teacher the opportunity to establish a special bond with the children and get to know them well.

Susan will not be idle after such a long time in the classroom. She is planning to continue her studies towards a Masters degree and lead her show horse, Townshend Marsden (Pepper), a three-year-old Morgan, into a BIG YEAR of competitions. Susan hopes he will qualify for the Grand National Morgan Show in Oklahoma City. She also owns another Morgan, who is "aged and retired." The horses will move to West Boxford in the Spring when a barn is built for them.

The Osgood community — past and present — wishes Susan every happiness in her coming marriage and future. We will miss her very much!

☐Cal Kowal is new to Cohasset, but he's no stranger and once you know something about him perhaps you'll stop and say hello; you're bound to see him around town photographing buildings. He'd welcome that as a nice change from the unfriendly glares and suspicious stares he's been receiving.

Cal is an instructor of design and photography at the Cincinnati Art Museum's Art Academy and is spending a year here on sabbatical. He is an architectural photographer and is conducting personal photographic work and research. He's also been documenting our town as a secondary project. He hopes to travel to England at the end of the year where he would like to conduct a comparative photographic study of an English coastal town.

Cal and his wife, Lorraine Besse Kowal, were married here in September. She looks after Gilbert Tower and assists him with his research work. A small, but extremely fine, representation of his work is on display at the Sharpe Gallery.

Punch

Williams (first name unknown) who is supposed to have invented the drink for a Crane estate party, and after the party took off to Chicago with it, opening a saloon on Chicago's Loop.

Churchill claims he was responsible for Simeone's Liquor Store (now Scott Liquors) having carried it. Scott Liquors said is used to carry it but according to "Scotty" it was such foul stuff there wasn't much call for it and he eventually dropped the line.

Last week the Mariner Christmas Party did a consumer test — making a bowl from Bert Pratt's recipe. Consumer reporters poured a bottle of cheap bourbon over ice and swished in two bottles of soda water. It was awful. While some hearty individuals sipped a glass out of politeness, 80 per cent of it went down the drain after the party.

Churchill said he remembers being served the secret Barnes formula on the old C.W. Barnes yacht in 1920. "It's like Southern Comfort." Although Churchill admitted that it's vile stuff, he said "Nationally, I think it might go."

Mariner consumer reporters have learned this:

There are two recipes for Cohasset Punch.

Few Cohasset people have tasted the rum-based recipe being bottled in Chicago under the town's good name. Every so often the straight recipe (bourbon and soda water) shows up in a Cohasset punch bowl — but not often.

Either recipe could probably rot one's stomach lining.

If it is true that Chicago's "Cohasset Punch" plans to go national with its recipe, it might be encumbent upon the selectmen of the town to put out a national disclaimer which would hopefully disassociate the town's good name for the potion.

Whatever — don't make it for the holidays.

COLLECTOR'S ITEM?? Bob [Buzzy] Stanton of Clay Spring Road displays a bottle of Cohasset Punch but from all reports it isn't to be compared with Rothschild champagne.

could do a quick study of the land.

Both the state and the Environmental Protection Agency require that the study be done. But Montuori recommended to the citizen's advisory committee on sewerage that a $6,000 study could give them all the information needed to make a site recommendation.

However, advisory members and Commissioner John Hobbs opted for the full study. It is thought that 10 per cent of any study costs would be the town's final cost in the matter after reimbursement from a Step I grant.

Plant Situation Critical

Sewer Plant Engineer Manny Salvador told sewer commissioners Monday the present treatment plant is operating at a 50 per cent capacity with only one of two pumps operational and one of two aeroraters functioning. "We're overloaded, at a critical point," Salvador said.

In addition he said a recent visual inspection of the Greenhouse Restaurant showed broken controls and problems with the restaurant's on-site treatment system. "The town plant can't handle the load of the Greenhouse Restaurant," Salvador said.

However, Salvador said restaurant owner Robert Swain was very cooperative in wanting to remedy the problems. Commissioners agreed that Salvador, Swain and Water Superintendent Ed Pratt would work out controls and safety precautions to be taken at the restaurant.

More Repair Slips Than Voters

By Chester Magee

In 1966 my outdoor power equipment business started with repair work and the selling of secondhand equipment. This continued until a friend suggested I go before the board of appeals for a business variance and we did in 1971.

We took with us all our neighbors' signatures within 500 feet of said property, plus over 300 other resident signatures from all sections of the town . . . and a drawing showing a proposed building for the business in years to come if the business showed success.

We held back nothing from townspeople or the board of appeals. We presented a truthful long-range plan to the townspeople and officials — hiding nothing. A point I would like to make at this time is that from 1966 thru to 1976, not one town official came to me and made a statement that they had a complaint or that a resident had a complaint about the business being operated in a residential zone.

Now it seems, other laws have a statute of limitation — most in the seven-year category — and one could assume that after 10 years as a business at the same location one would be exempt, but I can tell you first hand that it's not a written by-law and that is not so,

The board of appeals findings in 1971 was, in laymen's language, that they thought I could operate the business as a artisan resident subject to specified sections of the by-laws. So I assumed as a layman I could continue as I had from 1966.

That was a mistake, because there are no laymen on the board of appeals, in fact there is no laymen's language written in the by-laws.

Now, having been involved directly with these laws, town officials, and the board of appeals and planning board, I can tell you first hand that these laws are not clearly written even so they as officials or members of the board of appeals can decifer them clearly at times.

Example No. 1 — the '60 by-laws wouldn't allow the board of appeals to grant a business variance (according to the board in 1971).

I later found from the state, they did have the power to do so; it was the way the board deciphered the Cohasset by-laws (that had been approved by the state).

Example No. 2 — in the late 70's I had a closed hearing with town officials shortly after the townspeople voted on a five-year revised study by the planning board; approved by the selectmen and brought before the town people.

The subject was brought up that due to these revisions, I could apply for a business variance as soon as the state approved the revisions voted (point 1).

This statement was made by one town official, another at the meeting said they didn't believe this was so. Another at that same meeting made no statement at all.

Now, here we have these top town officials and a bunch of revised by-laws that apparently only one official understood. Yet, these changes had to be approved by this group in order to be put on the ballot for the townspeople to vote on.

Example No. 3 — a few months after that meeting the ex-chairman of that five-year study on revised by-laws came to me at my place of business and stated: "Chet, the state approved the revised by-laws and you can now apply for your business variance."

Delight ran over me, then I remembered an early meeting with other town officials. I questioned this person about the business variance, and was assured a business variance would be had.

Convinced, for the fourth time, I collected the required signatures, plans, etc., went to town hall, paid $35 and waited for my hearing date to be assigned.

The hearing scheduled, I brought my neighbors, my plans and went with an open heart to this meeting, as finally this mess was going to be ended, I hoped. Wrong.

The board of appeals read the revisions of the new by-law that applied and said if you can show us where we can give you a business variance we will be happy to act on it.

It was quite clear to me this couldn't be done. The board (of appeals) then mentioned a hardship clause and after talking it over among themselves, decided that I couldn't even apply for that, as it was not clearly defined so that the board of appeals could even act on that.

So now we sit here in violation of the by-laws, the planning board making more revisions back in 1977 (voted on in 1978) then the previous planning board (that made a five-year study), voted in 1976.

If you don't think our by-laws are anti-business just look at the law passed last year requiring an artisan resident not to exceed a floor area of 500 square feet.

An artisan resident is one who has a home occupation in a residential area. Now, 500 square feet is a building 25 feet by 25 square feet.

That is less area than most two car garages in the town of Cohasset.

Most of you know that you can't even get your cars in that garage due to other items being stored there. So how would it be possible for a tradesman to have a business in that small an area?

Yet, we the people of Cohasset voted it in, or did we?

I say we didn't, only a select few did. Example — in 1970 by door-to-door solicitation, I obtained more townspeople's signatures for approval of an outdoor power equipment business in a residential area, than did the people that went to the polls to vote that year.

I have more sales and repair slips with Cohasset residents names than went to the polls and voted in the last eight years. Yet, the planning board brings up revisions against small business year after year.

Just to show how destructive these anti-business laws are, I am going to site an example.

In 1978 a teenager and his mother came into my shop. The young man asked if he could have a part-time job, explaining the school would give credits under a mechanical program towards his education.

Having been involved in the by-laws and facing court action, I told this young man and his mother that if the Cohasset School System could get approval from the Town Counsel I would be more than happy to employ him.

Later, they came back and said, legally, this couldn't be done. The mother than suggested her son would work for no pay in order to obtain the credits he needed in school.

I had to reject this offer and I didn't feel good about it at all. I explained my present and on-going situation and stated that if this mess with the by-laws was straightened out I would contact them.

For this and many other God-given rights I am and will continue to fight this matter into the highest court and I hope the people that did vote on these destructive by-laws can live in good conscience.

Other towns have business variances clauses in residental areas, why not Cohasset?

School To Release Fire Land

This week the School Committee voted 4-2 with Patricia Walsh and Martha Gjesteby voting no, to release approximately 1.5 acres of land from the so-called Music Circus parcel acquired by the School Department for school purposes in 1969.

The transfer of land to bhe Board of Selectmen will allow its use by the Fire Department for construction of a sub-fire station on Route 3A.

The Committee was assured by the fire study committee, represented by Lot Bates, Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink and the architect that a 60 foot easement on the south side of the property would be held for possible future school use.

Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson told the Committee that the school land was taken in fee and that there would be "no prejudice to the remainder of the land taken for school purposes" by the release of the parcel for a fire station.

Counsel added that there were no reversionary rights to the former owner (Music Circus) and that an easement for access to possible school buildings or playing fields would be honored. In view of that conformation, the committee reconsidered its vote of two weeks ago and voted the land no longer needed for school purposes.

School Briefs

RESIGNATION

Accepted the retirement letter of resignation for the end of the school year from Marjorie Giffen, with regret.

NO ACTION

The Committee did not approve the appointment of Priscilla Giovane as Reading Teacher at the Junior/Senior High School on a tie vote, with members Walsh, Gjesteby, and England voting ney.

The hiring of a full-time reading teacher to provide adequate coverage of the enlarged reading laboratory program was recommended a year ago by the Superintendent and the money for the position was approved at the last meeting of the School Committee. "After so many affirmations of the benefit of this program," Superintendent Maloney said, "the vote is baffling." CHS Principal Charles Streeter indicated the program will have to stop without the full-time teacher.

APPOINTMENT

Approved the appointment of Martha Equi as Kindergarten Teacher at the Joseph Osgood School as a long-term substitute for the balance of the 1979-1980 school year.

SALARY ADJUSTMENT

Adjusted the salary of Sandra Lynn Hayes, gymnastics Coach to Step 3, $1,000.

Five-Town Firearm Policy

Five area Police Chiefs announced they have adopted a uniform policy for issuance of firearms.

Chiefs from Norwell, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, and Scituate adopted a uniform policy for issuance of firearms.

"Presently, under Massachusetts Law," said Hingham Chief Raymond Campbell, "Chiefs are authorized to issue licenses to carry or possess firearms to persons who reside in our towns. However, the current law does not provide chiefs of police with standards to determine whether or not a person is a suitable person to carry or possess a firearm."

"As a consequence," said Chief Randolph Feola of Cohasset, "there is no uniformity in the issuance of gun permits. The policy we've adopted creates that uniformity."

"Also, said Chief Robert Shannon of Hull, "this new policy establishes standards that require all new applicants to carry or possess firearms to pass a written examination."

Chief Walter T. Driscoll of Scituate praised Kevin P. Reynolds of Scituate, the Regional Police Planner for the five towns, for "assisting us in the development of the new policy."

The new policy goes into effect immediately.

Williams Wins Disco Contest

Recently the Cohasset Winter Gardens' "Disco-Rock on Ice" program in cooperation with Phase 6 Music of Cohasset held a contest for high school students. First prize was a free dance to raise fund for the student's graduating class or favorite organization within the school.

"The turnout was not as high as we expected it to be," explained Mike Zotos, deejay at the Winter Gardens: "However, the enthusiasm was there. We might even hold another contest of this type in a couple of months for junior high school students."

Chris Williams, a senior at Cohasset High School, won the dance for the CHS Music Department. "I heard about the contest only a few days before the closing date and decided to enter," Chris said. "And I'm glad I did because a fundraiser for our music department was in order."

The dance, tentatively planned for the middle of January, will last approximately three and one half hours. The ticket price will be no more than $1.50 per person.

Village Shop Talk

By Larry Fone

. . . .only a few days of Christmas shopping left but lots of good items in Cohasset shops for hostess gifts, stocking stuffers and good, practical gifts.

• A roll of postage stamps or stamp albums from the Post Office.

• A gift certificate for shops or restaurants.

• One-year membership to the Cohasset Historical Society — $5 a year, call Constance Parker or Larry Fone.

• An opening saving account, especially good for youngsters.

• An unusual gift for the special person is a Shore Shore Art Center Gift Certificate for a membership or class.

The shops in the village and harbor and Route 3-A have many super gifts for under $10.

Hennessey News has beautiful boxed stationary and notes plus some wonderful puzzles, most under $5. The Central Market has a grand selection of gourmet food stuffs. Jams, jellies, tinned seafood, spreads, cheese and elegant biscuits and cookies. They will also make-to-order scrumptious fruit and vegetable baskets.

Notes & Quotes has a current and topical collection of book and paperbacks covering every interest. Records and tapes of the latest selection are available!

For the males in the house Cohasset Hardware has practical items — flashlights, special home repair kits, tools and lots of "games" for the entire family.

The Colonial Pharmacy has an extensive collection of Heus Cosmetics, best around . . . after shaves, cologne, shaving creams, etc. and offers a sample "squirt" of most. Good stuff and the best.

For the special person . . . a print, painting or sculpture — stop into the South Shore Art Center or the David Sharpe Gallery.

Phillip Smith has some of the most luxurious gift items I've seen in years. Tasteful, useful and decorative. Stop in and look. Ann Hamilton at the Corner Lighthouse has also assembled stunning gifts for the home. Wonderful prints, antiques, jewelry at affordable prices. Don't forget the Cohasset Jay-cees are selling their Christmas trees and wreaths at Tedeschi Plaza. Besides good quality items their profits go to community projects. Support them!

I hope parents in our town will remind their children that while shopping around Cohasset good behavior in shops and on the streets is required. "Horsing around and rowdiness is not acceptable.

Large groups of youngsters in and around shops are difficult to deal with and often a polite "Will you please leave" is necessary.

In my shop Thursday a group of five boys were in four times in 90 minutes — same group. They were disruptive, accepted no help and were asked to leave. Afterwards, bad news. Obscenities and abuse followed which was repeated in other shops.

Also in Cohasset Village we have lots of kids who like to ride bicycles on the sidewalk. This is illegal! With many shoppers on the sidewalk this time of year and many older people who can't dodge the bicycles. Parents — please tell your youngsters to walk their bicycles.

Many shops are offering Cohasset senior citizens a 10 per cent discount if this is not posted, ask!

Happy holidays to all . . .

Ballet Program At Center

The Community Center of Cohasset is pleased to announce that Ms. Fern Gladstone has been hired to direct and teach it's ballet program.

In addition to several TV performances Ms. Gladstone had danced with the Boston Ballet Company, the American Ballet theater and was the principal dancer for the Metropolitan Opera. She has served as director-choreographer for the Hingham Civic Chorus, Curtain Call Theater and Derby Academy.

Registration will begin in January. For further information call the Center Monday thru Friday 9 a.m. to 12 noon, 383-0088.

November Pack Meeting At Town Hall

The November 26 Pack Meeting at Town Hall was a great success. Cubmaster, Jeff Forsdick awarded Bobcat Badges to Wolf Dens: Geraldine Farwell and Sandra Murray's Den 1, Matthew Beggan, Matthew Devaney, Curtis Ludlow, Sean Murray and Brian Ormiston.

Danny Farwell, Caleb Snyder and Chipper Weier earned their Bobcats in October.

Margaret Webber and Joan Buckley's Den 2, Daniel Bliss, Matthew Buckley, Troy Haase, Matthew Kuhn, Stephen Webber and Paul Wilson. Alan Mackey earned his Bobcat last year.

Pat Beddows and Barbara Carter's Den 3, Com Crocker, Thomas Long, Arthur Meachum and Michael Saef. Jack Beddows, Craig Carter and Michael Figueiredo earned their Bobcat in October. Bear Den 6 just started with Jack MacNeill leading.

Congratulations and awards were given for fund raising of selling Scout Show tickets. Salesmanship patches for selling at least 10 tickets were earned by Matthew Beggan, Danny Farwell, Curtis Ludlow, Caleb Snyder, Troy Haase, Matthew Kuhn, Stephen Webber, Paul Wilson, Jack Beddows, Craig Carter, Michael Figueiredo and Michael Saef; Bears, Nicholas and Michael Lelecas and Webelos Jonathan Brown and Mark LaVange.

A bull horn for selling twenty or more went to Danny Farwell, Jack Beddows and Jonathan Brown. Grand prize for selling at least thirty was won by Mark La Vange of a base C.B.

Costumed humorous skits were performed by Den 1, Knights of the Round Table of King Arthur and Den 3, Harvest Festival at Camelot in keeping with November national theme of Knights of Yore.

Den 3 held the opening and closing ceremonies and won uniform inspection of Eagle Award which may be kept for a month until the next competition.

Today the air is filled with that special magic of the Christmas season, the feeling of anticipation that no other time of the year can bring. A week from today, the hustle and bustle will be over and Christmas will be only a dream. Tradition plays a very special role in the meaning of Christmas. For Barbara Ahern's family, the fragrance of Plum Pudding in the air spells Christmas. For years, her aunt made this recipe and now, the Ahern's holiday dinner wouldn't be complete without it. Barbara makes some for gifts by baking the pudding in cupcake tins, in coffee cans or Jello molds, then gift wrapping each one. It's a very special recipe, one which we printed several years ago and goes like this:

3 c. flour
1 tsp. baking soda
1½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. cloves
½ tsp. nutmeg
1 tsp. cinnamon
1 c. finely chopped suet
1 c. molasses
1 c. milk
1½ c. seeded raisins, floured chopped
3T applesauce

Over the years, Barbara's aunt has found the easiest way to steam this Plum Pudding recipe is to fill cupcake tins ⅔ full. Seal muffin pan with aluminum foil and place in a 13 x 9 pan with water in it. Steam on top of stove for approximately one hour, checking with a toothpick to determine when done.

Serve with hard sauce, ice cream, or whipped cream.

We all have neighbors or friends whom we consider rather special and we want to remember them with a little something. That's the time to scoot over with a gift package of homemade cookies tied up with gay, red ribbons. Sending junior off to school with a gift for teacher is a nice holiday gesture, too. And don't let the holidays go by without a special visit to someone in a nursing home. Even the children can join in making these

FRUIT BALLS

1 c. raisins
1 c. figs
1 c. dates [pitted, of course]
½ c. walnuts

Set up the grinder and let junior grind the above. Stir together and make small balls about the size of a walnut. If they don't stay together in balls too well, just add 1T of orange juice. Roll in confectioners' sugar.

Visions of sugarplums may dance in our heads, but it takes hours of stirring, whipping and sifting to produce the Christmas treats we all enjoy. It's a lot more creative than polishing the silver, getting out the crystal and ironing the best cloth, but when our family gathers around the dinner table, you know it's all worthwhile. Candles glow, the centerpiece of Christmas greens is pretty and bright, while the best china graces each setting. Dessert seems festive, too, when you serve Olga Cranston's

GRASSHOPPER PIE

Crust: Combine 1¼ c. crushed chocolate cookies with ⅓ c. melted butter. Press firmly and evenly against bottom and sides of 9" pie pan.

Filling: Scald ⅔ c. of milk and add 24 large marshmellows. Heat slowly, stirring until marshmallows are dissolved. Remove from heat, continue to stir slowly. Cool to room temperature. Add 3 oz. creme de menthe and 1 oz. white creme de cocoa. Whip ½ pt. whipping cream until fairly stiff and fold into mixture. Pour filling into cooled shell and freeze for at least two hours.

Sally Claus And Christmas Eve Up North

By Lois Martin

It was the biggest night of the year. She would spend it alone as she had in the past. Not that she minded. Sally Claus always stayed by herself that special night. Her husband, Santa, had set out to deliver the countless bags of toys to children as he'd been promising since early November.

And Sally, well, she had her own work to do that night. Indeed one would be mistaken if he believed her to be lonely, unincluded in the excitement of Christmas Eve.

Her home was nestled near a snowy hillside which was getting snowier by the minute, Sally noticed, as she put on her apron.

PATCHES

Probably people who met Sally wouldn't be at all surprised at her appearance. She looks just as you thought she would. One would not even guess at her age, suspecting they'd be wrong if they did. Her hair is white, all right, drawn back in a pug that's secured with her tortoise shell hairpins, a Christmas gift from long ago. Sally Claus, like Santa, has a fondness for red. Truth is she can't resist wearing it, especially Dec. 24.

Her dress is of modest length. Its hemline never rose to the knees but never brushes the floor to catch bits of dust. The sleeves and neckline are bordered with white cloth edged in lace. Her apron, in light of the importance of the event, is fresh, her good one, also lace-edged.

It is true Sally Claus is round and soft. One would not press her for her weight knowing she's a bit sensitive about her generous yet pleasing plumpness. But it would be a mistake to assume she couldn't scamper around her kitchen with the same spirit as Santa descends chimneys.

When I said Sally was alone that didn't mean she was without companionship. The elves, frazzled from their last minute rush in the workshop, were sound asleep in the loft overhead. Sally's putterings below would not disturb them. Neither would Toddy, Sally's small gray dog. Toddy's job was to accompany his mistress when she tended to the baby reindeer in the shelter outside. There Toddy's work was finished, and he was free to sit and watch Sally as she scurried from one chore to another.

The baby reindeer of course needed special reassurrance. She fluffed up their hay. They were too young to know their parents were on special business but would be back by dawn to nestle with them Christmas Day.

It is a challenge to describe the smells in Sally's kitchen. When one walks in the door, the first scent is that of the bread baking. But add to that the odor of molasses cookies, still cooling on her sideboard, and the whiff of wood shavings that seep in from the workshop, combined with the smell of her Christmas tree in the corner.

She tends her fire, adding logs lugged in from the covered woodpile. Sally knows she'll have to shovel before Santa returns. But there's still time to make the pies and wrap Santa's gift that he's been trying to find when she wasn't looking. He'll be surprised this year, she thinks. Ordinarily he could expect new warm socks, or mittens, or even a carefully created belt to replace his worn garments.

This year Sally knows she'll fool him. Seldom did Santa speak for himself, to give a clue of what he'd really like. But several weeks ago Sally had peeked in the workshop and caught him and the elves in a Monopoly game they were supposed to be packing. That would be it . . . for Santa this year, a unique North Pole version of Monopoly Sally had devised. Boardwalk would be included, of course, but there'd be special icebergs and frozen mountain properties.

Thinking of him she worried a bit as she did every Christmas Eve. Not that she hadn't seen to it that he had on his warmest longjohns, his insulated boots and even earmuffs. But Santa was one to neglect himself in favor of remembering everyone on his list. That was another thing. There'd been a year or two when Sally discovered Santa forgot that list. He'd headed out with gusto, reindeer bells ringing, Sally waving, only to land on the first rooftop far away and fumble for a list that was back home on the kitchen table beside his spectacles.

He had his list tonight. She was sure of that. And she'd see to it he'd have the special Christmas broth he looked forward to when he got home. Sally was charged with watching Santa's waistline. That was no easy project. Both of them knew a good batch of brownies when they saw it and neither was overly inclined to move away from the table before they'd tasted all that was on it.

But Santa's big night out brought him home at least eight pounds heavier than when he left. As he remembered his children, so they thought of him, leaving the Ole Boy an endless array of goodies — peanut butter, candy, milk, fruit punch, fruit, and at one home, chips and dip.

Consequently, Santa was stuffed. And on some Christmas morns Sally had noticed the reindeer were more than relieved to finish their work of towing a heavier Santa than they'd left with.

Toddy dozed now as Sally fixed the bow on the last package to go under their tree. Humming her favorite carol . . . "Silent Night, Holy Night," she set about to frost the birthday cake in honor of the child whose birth gave Santa and Sally their chance to tend to children they never had.

Like Santa, Sally didn't think of herself. But beneath the tree was her gift from Santa. Funny, it wasn't the shape she expected it would be. Back in October she'd started hinting that her tea kettle was likely to give out. The handle, she'd told Santa at least three times by Thanksgiving, was about to come off and the holes he'd filled in last year seemed ready to give way again.

The box under the tree with her name on it didn't look a whit like it held a tea kettle. It was long, flat, sort of rectangular in shape. And she couldn't for the life of her imagine what was in it. A nightgown, she thought, or a new tablecloth, a satin sheet even, (something Sally had admired in a frivolous moment). Time would tell.

Now though was the time to put out his slippers, fill his pipe, steep the tea and look out the window every few minutes for the returning sleigh.

She could usually hear it if the wind were still, as it came in the darkened distance. Windy nights were rough on the travelers, as was snow in blizzard force.

Tonight, though, had been perfect, with gentle snowflakes only decorating Santa and the scenery below instead of slowing his delivery.

Toddy's ears picked up. His hearing was keener than that of the woman he followed about. Together they went to the door and returned Santa's still cheery wave as he landed. Sally and Santa merged a good hug with her questions and his answers on how the night had been. Did he get to the child who went without last year? Did he find the family that moved in June? Was everyone all right?

As they released the reindeer, fed them and bedded them down, Santa told Sally the news . . . a new baby here, a visiting grandmother there, who was sick and who was well again.

While the rest of the world awoke to the thrill of Christmas morning, the couple sat down to broth and tea before crawling into bed for a rest before their own celebration.

As usual Santa went to sleep the second he pulled his flannel blankets over him. Sally, though, never could finish that special night without a few minutes of private thinking. She had a lot to be grateful for. She'd give thanks for that, for the baby that had been born, for Santa and for her chance to be part of the big event.

Her mind drifted back to the present under the tree, two of them in fact, his and hers. And as she dozed off, she realized, both packages looked the same.

Sally Claus went to sleep knowing she and Santa would have two games of Monopoly to play all year long. And she was determined just one time . . . to get Boardwalk.

We will be closed December 24.

We will reopen on January 2.

Area Nursing Homes

Come Visit And Bring The Kids

By Laura Griffin

Christmas Present at our nursing homes is a time of pumpkin bread and applesauce, of eggnog and Italian cookies, of special visits, excitement and color sprinkled and flavored by Christmas Past.

At Norwell Knoll, felt stockings hang from each door as do hand-made and love-made shiney tissue wreaths created by the residents. A nine-foot tree is hung with snowflakes, bells, moons and stars of glitter and glow. Those too were shaped by residents.

The tree at Logan Nursing and Retirement Home in Marshfield was raised Dec. 4 because Christmas there is a month long celebration.

"You only enjoy it for one month," Mrs. Annette Bregoli, Activities Director at Logan, noted. She and directors at other local homes invite groups and individuals for tableux and sharing and exchanges that make Christmas special for their residents.

Each of the patients at Norwell's Stetson Manor will have a poinsettia brought by a local scout group and presented individually, according to Gloria Trowbridge, Activities Director.

In Scituate at Cardigan Nursing Home, Christmas is an international celebration this year with "Around the World" the theme. The cooking group has been baking for visitors and other residents. Scouts, Gates students, the Knights of Columbus and high school chorallers are scheduled to visit.

Mrs. Ruth Scisson at the Norwell Knoll believes that many residents find Christmas there "more active than it might be at home." Programs are geared to the individual's ability to participate.

There isn't room to list the groups booked for local homes although there is always room for one more group or visitor. Each of the directors contacted described a variety of givers from prayer groups to the veterans' "Cooties."

For example, Mrs. Scisson noted members of churches will present a carol program: Girl Scouts, a puppet show and later a tea. A Christian Doctrine class from Duxbury has planned an Advent play and Norwell High School students will sing.

At Cohasset Knoll, residents are making centerpieces and will have discussion groups as well as parties and carolling.

One of the special programs at Cardigan and Scituate Ocean Manor is the adopt-a-grandparent plan sponsored by Brownies. Activities Directors at Cardigan are Mrs. Lucille Dorrentino and Ginny Croteau. Janet Leo is at Scituate.

Special bus trips are scheduled by home and outside groups for viewing night lights locally and at special spots such as Attleboro. Twenty residents of Norwell Knoll will visit the Sparrow School for a musicale and tea.

Norwell High School Chorus performs at Norwell Knoll Nursing Home.

There are occasions when carolling or children bring memories of times past, most directors agreed. Most get somber.

"You do get people who reminisce. It brings tears but those are happy memories, happy tears. There is a lot of excitement and anticipation," Mrs. Bregoli said.

To lighten the weight of Christmas memories, directors often vary the season programs. For example, Mrs. Sorrentino noted they don't sing all the Christmas songs at once. They are mingled with lighter tunes. She's found that residents often "need a little levity at this time."

Barbershop singing, just plain clowning, as well as activity keep moods high.

Always, young visitors provide the lightness, the joy that makes Christmas special for nursing home residents. Each director volunteered that children's visits ranked among the most special Christmas treat.

Unanimously, they said that residents look forward to Christmas because then the children come — the young people with their appetite for life, their blunt open chatter and their innocence.

The holidays are special, according to Mrs. Scisson because it's the time "when children come in. They all want to see the children. They don't often see that age group."

Children are "lively and gay and they smile." Mrs. Scisson said when asked to explain why they are so welcomed. "They take them in their laps and ride them around in their wheelchairs."

"Children have a way of adding excitement," Mrs. Bregoli said.

Roni Dunham of Cohasset Knoll agreed the residents "love to have children come in." Possibly, children remind them of their own and their grandchildren and "a lot of happy times."

Children bring color and a different outlook on life. "They're bright and young and full of beans. They pick this up right away, the color..." explained Mrs. Gloria Trowbridge, Activities Director at Stetson Manor, Norwell.

But Christmas, as one director noted, is only one part of the year. For some residents, like some of us, January can be a "downer." The tree comes down, the colors fade, the children are gone and the songs are echoes of another Christmas Past.

Several directors at the local homes swing into a crowded schedule geared to their level

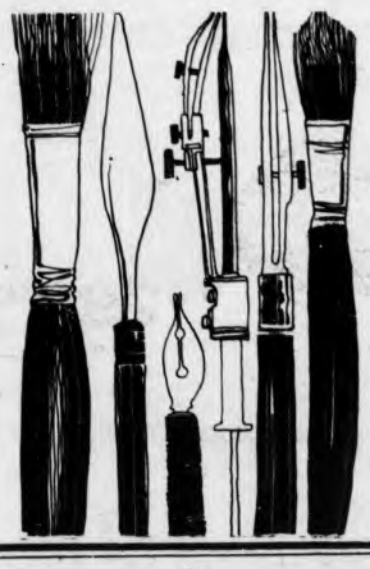
A Young Visitor

He is Christmas Now and all the Christmas Futures... a golden boy of eight; dark lashes, blue eyes. He has grass-stained knees on his Toughskins, an ever-errant sneaker shoelace. There's a scrape on his ear from landing on the bottom of the schoolyard 'pig-pile' and bumps on his head.



He swats off kisses like summer mosquitos, wipes them or washes them off when kisses happen to land. A streak of solid dirt is preferrable.

Once in a while, he visits Grammy with his Dad. Children are welcome and brighten the nursing homes, the directors say.

What happens? he's asked. Does he talk to the others in wheelchairs, in the sitting room, in the corridors?

Oh, yes. They talk to him and his sisters. They listen. They pat his head. They listen, smile at him.

"One lady kissed me and she wasn't even Grammy," he recalled with awe. Surprised, he never wiped it off. He smiled remembering.

patient to offset the jolt that is January. Programs include wheelchair bowling, basketball, special trips, wine and cheese parties, birthdays, but other programs and volunteers are welcome always.

Directors were asked what individuals or groups could do to keep spirits high throughout the year.

Time is the most precious gift, most answered.

Mrs. Sorrentino suggested "sharing an hour of a special experience." She noted that a recent visitor brought in slides of Lourdes and Greg Chaisson of Scituate High School shared his trip to Germany. Individuals can come to read or just to talk.

"To keep the mood, bring the children in," Mrs. Scisson suggested. "Bring plants for the dining room." Mrs. Scisson repeated that residents love color. One way to provide that would be donations of flower bouquets for the dining room. If 12 persons were interested in donating flowers, one bouquet each month, there would be twelve months of Christmas.

"Time is the most precious of all gifts," Mrs. Bregoli noted. "Come in either to read or plant flowers." If community groups are interested in a year round pleasure, they might consider an aquarium for patients, Mrs. Bregoli said. The most important thing to remember is the residents are "at home" all year round.

Persons interested in visiting a local nursing home, planning a program or considering a gift for the patients may contact activities directors at the homes in these towns.

The following list is the names of some nursing homes, approximate number of residents and names of activities directors:

ECCS Available In Mass.

The state Department of Public Utilities have ordered the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company to make available to consumers throughout the Commonwealth an optional calling service known as "Expanded Community Calling Service" or "ECCS".

This service has been in effect on a trial basis in certain towns for three years. With some modifications, to this service, it will now be offered on a statewide basis. ECSS will result in increased local calling areas for those subscribers in qualifying exchanges who elect it.

The plan will permit subscribers for a nominal charge to call toll-free certain neighboring communities which heretofore could only be reached by a toll call. This optional service will now be available at all hours during the week. No longer will the 9 a.m. to 12 noon restriction period apply. This service will be available for an additional monthly charge of $1.00 for the first two hours and an overtime charge of $.04 per minute for usage in excess of the two hours.

Gift Certificates Available In S.S. Art Center

Gift Certificates for Christmas giving are available at the South Shore Art Center on 103 Ripley in Cohasset. Certificates may be used to give someone a class for the winter or a membership in the Center that will enable the recipient to enjoy all the programs offered throughout the year. The Art Center is a non-profit organization offering classes, exhibits, speakers and films throughout the year and a Festival of the Arts in the summer.

Classes now being enrolled to start in January are Photography, Calligraphy, Creative Writing, Drawing and Painting, Oriental Brush painting, Gallery Tours in Boston, Art History, Figure Drawing and children's classes in painting and in clay. Classes in painting and drawing are offered through the Massachusetts College of Art Continuing Education program for college credit.

Winter schedules are available at the Center or may be requested by telephone. The Center will be closed Christmas week but schedules may be picked up at local libraries. For further information telephone 383-9548 Monday through Friday between 12-4.

Free Workshops For Job Hunters

Free workshops for women and men preparing to return to the job market sponsored by the Quincy Junior College Women's Center will be held at the Lincoln Hancock Community School beginning the week of January 7, 1980. The workshop Personal Growth and Development will run for 10 weeks on Mondays from 9 to 11 a.m. Workshop leader, Carla Goodwin, has been a school psychologist and a drug rehabilitation counselor and is presently president of the League of Women Voters of Easton and engaged in private practice as a family counselor. The workshop will include values clarification, both personal and job related, confidence building, decision-making skills, role-playing, interviewing, resume writing and interest testing.

On Tuesday mornings, Jane Ford, director of the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, will lead a workshop on Community Resources. Ms. Ford has a master's degree in education and has taught at Curry College and Massachusetts Bay Community College. She has been co-chair of the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women, Chair of the South Shore Women's Political Caucus and has worked with the youth ministry of St. John's Church. The workshop will seek to make people returning to the job market aware of the resources within their community which could help them in making that transition. Community resources considered will be employment, education, mental and physical health, recreation and other resources considered important by the participants.

The Wednesday morning workshop on Parenting and Child Development will provide an opportunity for participants to meet together for ten weeks to explore and discuss a variety of parental concerns. Topics which will be included are: choosing a day care, strengthening self-concept, setting limits, sibling rivalry, sex education, and handling death and anxiety. Discussion leader will be Jeanne Evans who has a master's degree in counselor-training and has extensive experience as a parent group discussion leader. Ms. Evans, mother of two daughters, has led parenting groups for the South Area Jewish Community Center and is a consultant to a Walpole psychologist.

The Family Dynamics workshop will meet for 10 Thursdays from 9 to 11 a.m. beginning January 10, 1980. The workshop will focus on the effect of the family relationship of a parent's returning to the job market. Participants will learn to apply appropriate methods of productive behavior to improve relationships within the family environment. Sarah Diskin, a Family Life Education coordinator for Family Services Association will lead the Family Dynamics workshop. Ms. Diskin has a master's degree in counseling and has led groups in assertiveness training, parent effectiveness and effective communications.

Those interested in registering for any one of the workshops should call Alicia Coletti at the Women's Center 786-8791 or Linda Wilson, Student Services Coordinator at 786-8777 X452. Child care will be provided free of charge and all of the workshops are free. Priority will be given to single parents, those over 35, handicapped and minorities and classes are limited to 15.

Christmas Spirit ...January Blues

The Christmas spirit often leads to a financial hangover come January that can upset the most loving household.

'Buy now — pay later' is the rallying cry that once again is bringing hordes of shoppers out for their annual gift-giving spree. Credit cards are flying like confetti.

"Although we are in the business of lending money, this seems an ideal time to remind all consumers that borrowing more than can comfortably be repaid is bad business," comments Joseph V. Forti, treasurer-manager of the Rockland Credit Union.

Danger signals abound that will sound the alarm that you are treading on thin financial ice, Mr. Forti said.

Here are a few danger signals to watch for:

— Are you shuffling bills and putting off the less urgent ones?

— Are you spending cash that was earmarked for taxes or insurance?

— Are you shopping where you can charge it rather than where prices are lower?

— Have you taken out new loans to pay up old ones?

To find out if you are heading for financial trouble, Mr. Forti suggests preparing a budget listing monthly take-home income, monthly fixed expenses and monthly variable expenses.

"We don't want to take the fun out of Christmas. Thrift institutions like ours want to be as helpful as possible with your credit needs," Mr. Forti said, "but we know you will feel better in January if you use your credit wisely."

Singles To Have Christmas Party

The first annual Christmas Party sponsored by the South Shore Singles is set for Friday, Dec. 21, at the First Parish Church on River Street in Norwell. Come by around 8 p.m. and join in a toast to the season with special goodies, carol singing and general good cheer.

This social and support group for singles of all ages and interests has grown rapidly in the last few months, and the Christmas Party is a special opportunity for those who have participated in the group sometime throughout the year to join together and share some good holiday spirits!

Newcomers are always welcome too. Donation of $2 to cover refreshments. If you'd like to participate in a gift exchange, bring along the most creative gift you can find for under $2.

For directions or further information, please call Janet Noble at 749-2602, Chuck Tenney at 331-4617, or Debbie Kingsbury at 335-7058.

S.S. Art Center Has Blue Ribbon Show

Throughout the month of December the South Shore Art Center at 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, is proud to have on exhibit a Blue Ribbon Show of the Center's own Gallery Artists.

It is always very interesting and gratifying to see the work of artists who live in the area and this most recent show is a fine representation of some of those people and of the variety of media and styles in practice today.

In the field of oil paintings there is a wide range of styles and sizes. The Blue Ribbon painting of J. Papandrea, "Driftway Marsh," a minute landscape is done in the style of the French Impressionists.

The medium of watercolor provides a number of interesting attitudes and techniques. The very lovely, dreamy, "Pine Bough" of J. Marson took a Blue Ribbon in this category.

C. Pratt's pastel protrait, "Lady in Orange Hat" also received a first prize. Ms. Pratt's work is familiar to most of us on the South Shore and well respected. Three dimensional works which were awarded Blue Ribbons were the unusual stained glass composition, "Calligraphy" by C. Rifkin and a ceramic plate and teapot by ceramicist Weintraub, distinctive in its color and design.

This group show is just one of the many cultural events provided by the Center and is a very good example of the art work encouraged and produced by the Center in its classes and gallery shows. The Center is open weekdays from 12-4 and Saturdays from 10-1. For futther information call 383-9548.

Historical Groups Want Audubon Money Held In Escrow

Noel Ripley, chairman of the historical commission, made an eloquent speech to selectmen last week which resulted in that board's promise to, in the future, inform that town commission and other interested societies, about any proposed sale of historical artifices.

Approximately eight individuals from the historical commission and the historical society, including Connie Parker, chairman of the historical society, attended last week's meeting to voice their concern over the board of library trustee's recent auctioning of several Audubon pieces.

Ripley said the historical commissions hadn't been officially notified of the proposed Audubon auction which took place in New York. The sale netted the town $40,460 for a rare John James Audubon bird plate and two Audubon books.

While Ripley admitted that the trustees did everything "in line (legally)," he said "I feel badly that there was no input."

Ripley said this had not been the first time the library board of trustees had sold off items of historical significance to the town without notifying interested groups. He said the trustees had sold an old clock from the library, and said "There should be some control. The trustees shouldn't be able to unilaterally control historical objects.

"Basically, these objects belong to the people of Cohasset. They belong to the townspeople, not the trustees. I feel the Audubon artifacts shouldn't have been sold."

Ripley added that he felt the money from the sale should be held in escrow to save other town artifacts, i.e. items from private families over which the commission has no control.

He further suggested that there are oil paintings of Cohasset ships which the town might wish to purchase — as opposed to having the Audubon money going to a "general slush fund."

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said the money obtained from the Audubon Auction could be used for any purposes so voted by town meeting, but noted that the library trustees had requested that the funds be used for library purposes.

Ms. Parker said she also felt some control should be put over the board of library trustees. She alleged the trustees had sold various books dedicated to the library through memorial donations. "Which the Hingham Library accepted readily."

Selectman Henry Ainslie said he had no idea that the historical commission was not satisfied with the auction, saying he did not feel there was the "slighted" town historical significance association with the Audubon articles. He also noted that the trustees were concerned with the safekeeping of the items.

Flap Over Flags

Cohasset selectmen don't salute the flag.

Because they don't have one.

The only flag they have is a town flag but that's in the selectmen's closet — too valuable to fly, so they've been told (it was a Bicentennial gift).

"We can fly it every 200 years," Selectman Henry Ainslie said.

No one ever has been in the least concerned about this subject until Selectman Rocco Laugelle brought it up last week after having attended a Hull selectmen's meeting on the issue of Straits Pond.

Hull selectmen do salute the flag and do say the pledge of allegiance.

Now Laugelle says he wants a flag in every corner of the selectmen's room, and outside he wants a 50-ft. aluminum flagpole.

Circus Given Restrictive License

After weeks of holding the South Shore Music Circus' weekday entertainment license in abeyance, selectmen last week issued the license with orders of condition pertaining to traffic control and noise levels.

In addition, the Circus was put on notice for its 1981 season that no shows may overlap into the school year unless selectmen are advised of the proposed overlap and agree to it.

The Circus will be required to relieve the present one-way traffic situation which exists for short times on Sohier Street at its own expense. Circus officials have already agreed to that condition.

However, selectmen said they were at a loss in trying to determine how to be able to deal with "noise" levels, other than individually monitoring each performance.

Laugelle said he felt the Circus had realiy made an attempt to contain volume last summer. But added, "There are so many factors, I don't know the answer."

"It's still a relative thing, we can't close down a show," Selectman Henry Ainslie said.

Laugelle disagreed. "When kids are having a disturbing party the police are able to close it down."

Selectmen agreed that Music Circus officials would have to cooperate with them on the noise situation.

Swim Center To Expand

Sometime this Spring the Cohasset Swim Center will open a new functions room at the center for organizations in need of a meeting place to show films, conduct business meetings, play ping-pong, billards, stage ceremonies or buffets. And best of all, there will be no charge.

Swim Center President Eugene Price said this week the center had planned to open the functions room late last summer to town organizations, but a manufacturer's strike caused a delay of several months in obtaining an air-exchange system which finally arrived last week.

The room is presently equipped with complete kitchen facilities, deck chairs, and will eventually have a movie screen. Gene envisions the room's getting a lot of attention next summer for the showing of swim competition films, Red Cross instruction, and the board of trustees and pool managers will hold their meetings there to coordinate pool activities.

Last summer the center held its awards ceremony and a luncheon/buffet there.

According to Gene, pool trustees have always been concerned about children not having any haven at the pool during inclement weather, so the room will also serve that purpose.

The facility will be available for use by any town organization or groups, but will not be turned over for any individual need.

Tyeryar Ordered To Close Dump

Last week, along with the Christmas and New Year cards, James Tyeryar received an order to close-down Cohasset Heights — a private demolition dump off 3-A.

The order came from the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) which claimed construction debris was being dumped too close to wetlands.

Tyeryar said in an interview that the notice to shut down came as a complete surprise to him and said the order would cost him in the nature of $300-$400 a day, not including long-range business losses from clients who would be forced to find other dumping facilities.

Tyeryar feels the close-down order is the result of a misunderstanding and is hopeful his engineer can work something out.

"I think DEQE hired some one new, someone not familiar with my operation," hence, the order.

He said it is his understanding that he is not dumping within 100-ft. of any wetlands and said that in any case he is not filling wetlands.

Singles To Have Christmas Party

The first annual Christmas Party sponsored by the South Shore Singles is set for Friday, Dec. 21, at the First Parish Church on River Street in Norwell. Come by around 8 p.m. and join in a toast to the season with special goodies, carol singing and general good cheer.

This social and support group for singles of all ages and interests has grown rapidly in the last few months, and the Christmas Party is a special opportunity for those who have participated in the group sometime throughout the year to join together and share some good holiday spirits!

Newcomers are always welcome too. Donation of $2 to cover refreshments. If you'd like to participate in a gift exchange, bring along the most creative gift you can find for under $2.

For directions or further information, please call Janet Noble at 749-2602, Chuck Tenney at 331-4617, or Debbie Kingsbury at 335-7058.

S.S. Art Center Has Blue Ribbon Show

Throughout the month of December the South Shore Art Center at 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, is proud to have on exhibit a Blue Ribbon Show of the Center's own Gallery Artists.

It is always very interesting and gratifying to see the work of artists who live in the area and this most recent show is a fine representation of some of those people and of the variety of media and styles in practice today.

In the field of oil paintings there is a wide range of styles and sizes. The Blue Ribbon painting of J. Papandrea, "Driftway Marsh," a minute landscape is done in the style of the French Impressionists.

The medium of watercolor provides a number of interesting attitudes and techniques. The very lovely, dreamy, "Pine Bough" of J. Marson took a Blue Ribbon in this category.

C. Pratt's pastel protrait, "Lady in Orange Hat" also received a first prize. Ms. Pratt's work is familiar to most of us on the South Shore and well respected. Three dimensional works which were awarded Blue Ribbons were the unusual stained glass composition, "Calligraphy" by C. Rifkin and a ceramic plate and teapot by ceramicist Weintraub, distinctive in its color and design.

This group show is just one of the many cultural events provided by the Center and is a very good example of the art work encouraged and produced by the Center in its classes and gallery shows. The Center is open weekdays from 12-4 and Saturdays from 10-1. For further information call 383-9548.

POPE DAY

Town Counsel Blake Thaxter Jr. has been asked for a written answer on whether police department personnel are entitled to a day off for Pope's Day last fall. Town offices were closed on that day.

Patrolman Paul Laugelle, speaking on behalf of the police association, said members of the department are willing to go through the grievance procedure over the day off.

Previously, town counsel said selectmen were not authorized to provide time off to any personnel not scheduled to work.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he wouldn't like to think Cohasset firemen and policemen would bring suit over the matter, "I feel it's very unfair."

However, Selectman Henry Ainslie said he could see the reason for the request. "That was a day they never had the benefit to bargain for."

APPROVED

Last week the advisory board approved a $12,000 reserve fund transfer to an emergency engineering study of the Paul Jones conservation land which has had recent interest from town officials as the possible site of the new sewerage treatment plant.

State and federal funding will be pursued.

DOG REMOVED

Selectmen, with Rocco Laugelle abstaining, voted last week to order a dog owned by Sean Laugelle destroyed or removed from the town.

A year ago the Selectmen ordered the dog restrained as a result of similar reports.

RESPONSE ASKED

Residents with information regarding Straits Pond should contact the selectmen's office regarding the same.

Dump

that Tyeryar was dumping demolition materials over a much larger area than the state had originally approved and within the 100-ft. wetland restraint.

Tyeryar countered that the state had been informed a year ago and had given approval for the expanded dumping area. But no written approval was given.

William St. Hilair of DEQE said state regulations are that no landifll can be done within four feet of the high water mark. A recent inspection of the dump indicated that the DEQE regulation was being violated.

Tyeryar feels the state inspector mistakenly assumed that "perched water" which is trapped by bridges and fallen trees on Whitney Woods conservation land are causing a blockage of water which the inspector viewed as wetlands. Tyeryar said the perched water dries up in the summer months.

Mainstreaming At Osgood

By Diana Kornet

Children and teachers alike are enthusiastic about a new program which began this fall in the Cohasset second grades. It's purpose is to educate the children about disabilities, and to develop sensitivity to the needs of handicapped people through this new understanding.

The program originated at the Meeting Street School in Providence, R.I., and Susan R. Bookbinder has published a curriculum guide called "Mainstreaming — What Every Child Needs to Know About Disabilities."

Incorporating children with disabilities into the "mainstream" of the public school system is a national priority, covered by Public Law 94-142. But new legislation can only mandate action; it cannot change attitudes.

To make this effort successful, teachers and staff must be committed to meeting the special needs of youngsters coming to them, but even more important are understanding and acceptance from the other children.

Stephen Hart, Administrator of Special Education for Cohasset, heard of this program last spring and enlisted the help of eight volunteers from the community to take it into the classroom this year. The presentation is divided into four units which will be covered from October through March: blindness, deafness, physical disabilities, and mental retardation.

Two volunteers have been assigned to each unti; they prepare the material for the lesson, arrange for the guest speaker, and lead the classrroom discussion. To maintain a favorable atmosphere for open discussion, it is important to work with a relatively small group of youngsters, so the volunteers visit each classroom individually.

Four hours are devoted to each topic, divided into two two-hour session. The sessions are two or three weeks apart, so the children will have the opportunity to think about the disability long enough for it to make an impression on them. The children's awareness of each disability may be heightened as they go through their usual school routine if the teacher asks them to consider what it would be like to be blind when they were doing their art project, for instance.

Blindness is the first disability to be discussed, as it is perhaps the easiest one for the children to understand. There are five components to the curriculum: simulation activities, exposure to aids and appliances, guest speakers, audio-visual material, and class discussion.

Thus, the unit on blindness provided an opportunity for each child to be blindfolded and go on a "trust walk," led by a sighted guide; each child went to wash his hands, returned to the classroom, sat at his desk, unwrapped a cupcake, ate it with a fork, poured a cup of juice, drank it, and threw away the garbage, all as if he were blind, with no help other than the words of his guide.

The experience of being the guide is just as important as being the blind person, for the guide tries to think of what the blind person needs to know and what he can do for himself. Each child took a turn at each role. To conclude the first session, a movie about the training and use of seeing eye dogs was shown.

The second session included the "aids and appliances" and a guest speaker. Donna Bailey, a friend of John and Mary Benbow, (and now a friend of the entire Osgood School!) came to visit us for two days from her home in Jamaica Plain.

She visited each of the four second grades, bringing with her the special cane she uses, a Braille watch, Braille clothing tags, labels for food, "talking books," magazines, a Scrabble game, Braille playing cards, a Braille typewriter and a complete 1979 Red Sox schedule in Braille. She also carries with her everywhere her indomitable spirit and enthusiasm for life, and a ready willingness to answer any question about being blind which may help others to understand the trials and triumphs of her disability.

We are indeed fortunate to have this new friend, for we can think of no one more able than Donna to inspire respect and understanding for this disability. We hope she will be able to return next year as we introduce blindness to a new group of second graders.

If you are interested in helping with this program, please call Stephen Hart at 383-6104, or speak to one of the volunteers: Margie Charles, Mary Chittim, Ann Hublitz, Diana Kornet, Taffy Nothnagle, Maria Plante, Helen Reynolds, or Dianne Santini.

Audubons

"I can't believe that," Ripley said.

Ripley said he had heard the rumor that the Audubons were going to be auctioned, but had thought that option was being dropped as he had heard no further word on the object.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said "We've certainly learned our lesson. I was of the understanding this was the way things were usually done on the board. I felt we hadonly to make the vote official."

Clark said, "We'll have to be more in control."

In the future, selectmen voted to notify appropriate interested groups should anything of historical value be proposed to them for sale.

TWO JURORS

Barbara Froia and Eunice Clark were selected last week as jurors for Norfolk County Criminal and Civil Court sessions.

UNDER ADVISEMENT

Bids for the town report and town warrant were taken under advisement by selectmen. Bids were from the following companies: Fairmount Press ($28.48 per page and $30.10 per page) for the town report and town warrant respectively. Golden Press bid $6,991 for the report and $15,091 for the warrant with alternatives. Dennison Press bid $28 per page and $24.27 per page, with no extra charge for alternatives, for the report and the warrant respectively.

POLICE APTS.

Selectmen said last week they would ask for a review on police department intermittent appointments on the grounds they would like more questions answered from applicants.

BOARD OF APPEALS

Selectmen are presently seeking a volunteer applicant to serve on the board of appeals.

CLOSED SESSION

Last week selectmen entered a closed session on town counsel's advice at approximately 10 a.m. to discuss sewerage issues, specifically the consent decree signature asked for by the Attorney General's Office.

NOTICE RECEIVED

At 8 p.m., Wednesday, Jan. 23 the South Shore Regional School District will hold a public hearing on its budget at the Hanover Vocational School.

FIRE STATION

James McKinnel, Mace Architects, estimated that the cost of heating the fire station would cost $1,200 plus $35 an hour for supervision of such work if requested. Inspection would be included in the estimated sum.

BOSTON GAS CO.

Notice was received from Boston Gas Co. by selectmen that it will phase out the sale of heating equipment, conversion burners and appliances in the near future. However, repair and technical services are still available.

VOTED

Selectmen voted to allow Boston Gas Co. to run approximately 1,470 ft. of main on Sandy Cove Road, Cohasset, from Atlantic Avenue.

Editorial

The Audubon Plates

Whether the board of library trustees have actually "done the town wrong" by its selling of the Audubon treasures depends upon one's perspective.

We don't think the fate of the Iranian hostages will be determined by the sale of the Audubons. Nor do we think oil prices will be affected. What then?

We think the sale of the Audubon's was a mistake. But we don't think it was a grievious one. The board of library trustees obviously felt it was acting in the town's best interests. And in many other respects the trustees are doing a superb job.

If anyone is to be blamed for the sale of the Audubons and the residents having not been informed of it, it was in fact, the press. We all let you down.

The three newspapers which cover the town gave the selectmen's consent of the Audubon sale scant coverage.

Last week in a letter to the Mariner Ms. Sheila Evans, chairman of the board of library trustees, noted that the trustees's meetings are always open to the public and the press. And that's true. Our excuse: it would take a staff of 20 to cover all of the town's boards. No newspaper could afford to have that staff. We depend upon town boards to clue us in on their activities.

The library board of trustees failed you in not having more widely publicized the proposed sale. The selectmen erred. And perhaps the historical commission and the society failed you when they admittedly heard the rumor but didn't investigate it.

And so, we suggest that interested groups place an article upon the annual town meeting warrant asking that town meeting vote to require that certain groups be given a vote on the ultimate disposal of any historical items.

Over the next several years the board of library trustees, will, as will the board of selectmen, change their identities. Selectmen have pledged their good faith in future auctioning matters. But good faith doesn't count. Town by-laws do.

We also suggest the historical commission and the historical society make it encumbent upon themselves to inventory the town's entire historical treasury, wherever it may exist.

And this will be a beginning, and the end of the who-did-its.

Flags

"Do you want to put one in the budget?" Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark asked.

"I fly the Italian flag, the Irish flag and the American flag," Laugelle said, fingering his recently-acquired miniature three-flag plaque in front of his name-plate...a gift from somewhere.

If the flags were voted and in place in the selectmen's room at some future point in time, Laugelle said, "I would not go against the pledge of allegiance to the flag."

"Rocky got the walls painted (in the selectmen's office) and now he wants a flag," Clark said.

Legislative Year Reviewed

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (Cohasset, Hingham and Hull) had some final comments concerning the 1979 legislative session. "In retrospect, the 1979 legislative session raised and confronted some very serious issues. Many of them were dealt with in a logical and efficient manner, others were not. Here are, what I feel, some of the highlights.

Cutting taxes was, and is, the major concern of Massachusetts residents. The promise of rollback property taxes by $5.5 billion was made by Governor King during his 1978 gubernatorial campaign.

Although he was unable to win a zero per cent cap on local spending from the legislature, the House and Senate did approve a four percent cap on municipal spending. The result: most cities and towns either held their tax rates steady or allowed only a small increase.

Unfortunately, legislation to cap state spending was not passed this year. And, the legislature tried to place a limit on the state's bonded indebtedness, but the Governor vetoed it.

The legislature did approve, and the Governor signed, a $5,506,591 billion budget. Much criticism surrounded its passage. The critics said there was little reason for it not being approved by the July 1, 1979 deadline. It was, instead, approved in mid-July after many late-night sessions. Speculation on what caused the delay concerned a rivalry between the House and Senate leadership.

Also, I supported an attempt to attach an amendment to the budget, calling for an income tax cut and a repeal of the 7.5 per cent surtax on income. That proposal was defeated by a partisan vote of 125 to 31 (with only one Democrat supporting the Republican amendment.)

Our ancient civil service system came under scrutiny in 1979. I supported a civil service reform bill that became the impetus for the establishment of the Special Commission on Civil Service. The Commission will prepare a reform proposal for the upcoming legislative session.

Great controversy surrounded the raising of the drinking

Looking Back

Tried & True

By Peter Barnicle

The Christmas season in Cohasset is a time of family reunions, students are home from far-flung campuses, salesmen are in off the road and at least one of our townsmen made it all the way back from Japan for the festivities.

In looking back we find that the celebration of Christmas in Cohasset has followed the same pattern over the past century and more. Then as now people gather around the Christmas tree and neighbors exchange visits. Today the cocktail party is the center of convivial gatherings and the age old tradition of exchanging gifts is carried on.

Festivities in this day and age are more lavish and the gifts are more expensive. Back around 1880 a fancy china teapot might have been an adequate gift from husband to wife, whereas today a color television is looked on as a nice gift.

Today's students come into Boston's Logan Airport from all parts of the nation to be met by welcoming relatives and friends for the drive to Cohasset.

A hundred years ago those who made it all the way from Boston on the Old Colony Railroad were greeted just as enthusiastically. The railroad used all its facilities to see that people got home for Christmas.

In 1882 the regular freight train was shunted aside to provide a second engine to make the Boston run and return through a blinding snowstorm.

Despite the ever increasing commercialism of Christmas the family gathering and church services are the keynotes of the Feast of the Nativity.

The merchants in the 1880's always stocked up with "Welcome Christmas Presents" and advertised their wares. Gross & Nichols, at South Main and Brook Streets, advertised plain and fancy glass, china and crockery ware; decorated tea sets, pitchers and fruit dishes. They also had a selection of "toilet sets and shaving mugs."

Today's drug stores are often the subject of wry comments because they carry photographic equipment, cards, stationery and lots of other merchandise not associated with pharmaceuticals. The idea is not new. A hundred years ago Frank W. Browne's Cohasset Drug Store, at Elm and Brook Streets was advertising "toys, pocket books, checkers and dominoes" just before Christmas.

It's the old story of the more things change the more they say the same.

Even the greeting: "A Happy and Holy Christmas to one and all."

Suzy McMahon's On Jim Corrigan's Olympic Team

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Three hours every day, five days a week, 11-year old Suzy McMahon works out on the parallel bars, vault, beam, floor mats at Corrigan's School of Gymnastics in Rockland.

After just one year of classes she was put on the pre-Olympic competition team. And this year she's definitely competing. In her first competition ever in Connecticut recently, she took first place in bars and won fourth all-around in the group competition.

This isn't the story of an Olympic star who made it — this is the story of one, special little girl, Suzy, who's on her way to somewhere.

Suzy McMahon
[Photo by Derr]

There are probably thousands and thousands of Suzy McMahons across the nation who are even at this very moment practicing to compete in the Olympics in 1984.

By the time Suzy's turn comes she'll be 15 — just about the right age. And she will have had four more years of concentrated experience.

There's only one hitch to this dramatic lead.

When Suzy was asked if it were her dream to enter the Olympics, she said:

"I don't know."

Her mother, Dian, looked startled. Keep in mind that Suzy's daily activities certainly do demand a lot of chaufeuring on her mother's part. Suzy commented that her mother can now make the trip to Rockland in just about five minutes. (Chief Feola take note.) But heck — that's an ordeal for any parent.

So what is all this practicing getting ready for? Suzy's not sure. Maybe teaching.

Corrigan's School has won the NEAAAU championship for 10 consecutive years along with many other state, regional and international team titles. So obviously, Corrigan's has other things in mind for Suzy.

Sitting, climbing, twisting on a sofa during the interview, Suzy is all arms and legs and movement — a healthy, happy 11-year old body that has to exercise in spite of itself. A Thursday snowstorm has cancelled her trip to Rockland. Really, she'd rather be playing in the snow and she makes that apparent without being insulting. "Am I done?" We assure her she is.

The youngest of five and the only girl, Suzy said she'd like to be a teacher, "Probably." Presently, her brothers eat all the cookies in the house and steal her candy. We should note here that when asked about her brothers she became interested in being interviewed again.

Being the youngest McMahon and the only girl in the household is definitely not an advantage at Suzy's point in time. But in just a few short years the minuses could change into pluses, we suggest. And so could Suzy's possibilities for the Olympics. She gave us an outer-space look.

Hey, listen — Suzy McMahon has always been wiry and has always liked to climb trees, bounce on sofas, beds. When the Cohasset Community Center (CCC) offered a gymnastics course two years ago Suzy was "Johnny-on-the-spot."

But Joan Miller, Suzy's instructor at the CC, took one look at Suzy's twisting, rolling, bowling over the gym mats and advised her parents that Suzy was a little beyond CCC instruction. Sobeit.

Eventually, the McMahons and Suzy found their way to Corrigans — and now we'll just have to wait and see.

age. The legislature reached a compromise drinking age of 20 years, ending a six-year period in which the drinking age in Massachusetts was 18. I voted for a phased-in version of the bill, but it was not adopted.

A bill to make the State Office of Energy a secretariat in its own right was passed in 1979. Now the state can consolidate its energy effort and the new Executive Office of Energy Resources is empowered to issue bonds to raise money for conservation programs and develop new energy resources.

A new state Division of Hazardous Waste was created by the Legislature. It is empowered to set and enforce regulations on the production, use and disposal of hazardous materials. Also, the state Division of Water Pollution Control was authorized to enter private property to clean up hazardous spills.

Lastly, by 1982, the state will be obligated to annually inspect vehicle exhaust systems. It will cost $10 per vehicle. This is a Federally Mandated Program. It is folly to force the state, and through them cities and towns, to pay for programs mandated by the Federal Government. I am against mandated programs and will continue to support the concept of "Home Rule" for cities and towns."

Obituary

Katherine Kilduff

Mrs. Katherine A. (Sullivan) Kilduff of Cohasset, a drug company office employee before her retirement, died Dec. 18 at the Ripley Road Nursing Home, following a long illness.

She was born in Boston and came to Cohasset seven years ago when she entered the nursing home.

She was the wife of the late Leo A. Kilduff and leaves two sons, Leo R. Kilduff of Medway, and John J. Kilduff of Boston; a daughter, Mrs. Marie A. Engel of Hull, 11 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at 9 a.m. Friday in St. Mary of Assumption Church, Hull. Burial was in Hull Village Cemetery.

White President N.E. Baptist

Allan White of Cohasset was elected president of the New England Baptist Hospital Corporation and chairman of the Board of Trustees at the hospital's 85th annual meeting.

☐THIS IS WHAT CHRISTMAS IS ALL ABOUT: A very special First Christmas in Cohasset for the Khlee family began last Thursday when they were honored with a party by Faith Bowker and her first grade class.

Mr. John Creamer, Osgood School Principal, presented the Khlee children who attend the school — Chien, Bun, and Et — with an airplane which represents payment of their transportation costs to this country from Thailand. A total of $480.00 was raised since the fund was established a few weeks ago.

The family also received a Friendship tree with the pictures of their classmates and a Banner filled with paper ornaments representing each class in the school. Many people donated presents to put under the Khlee's first tree.

Mondeth O'Donnell, also a Cambodian refugee, who has been sponsored and now legally adopted by Mr. O'Donnell of Scituate, interpreted for the Khlee's in their native Khmer. Mondeth's visit to the school, and the party, added so much meaning to the Khlee's own plight, as he told of his own experiences in leaving Cambodia and paid a moving tribute to Mr. O'Donnell who has also sponsored two young Cambodian boys who have been reunited with their family in this country.

Ms. Bowker hopes to raise the remaining $1,000 balance of the Khlee's transportation costs by Valentine's Day. The importance in repaying this money quickly, she said, is that as soon as World Refugee Services receives it back, they can sponsor other people.

Contributions — all the pennies, nickles, and dimes — came from children, parents, teachers, and friends. Ms. Bowker (who deserves a whole column herself some day!) felt this way at the end of the party: "I left just thinking, this is what Christmas is all about. As the years go on, it will mean more and more. I loved today. Its the nicest Christmas I've had in a long, long time."

The smiles on the faces of Chien, Bun, Et, their parents and younger siblings, told it all.

Bless you Faith!

Anyone who wishes to contribute may send a check to "Khlee Transportation Fund," c/o Mr. Magner, Cohasset Savings Bank, 13 Elm St., Cohasset. Checks may also be dropped off at the Osgood School, Ripley Road in care of Faith Bowker.

☐The Brownies were busy last week spreading cheer all over town. Some went caroling around the Common. Others made gifts for the elderly and sick.

Troops 615 and 616 visitec the Ripley Road Nursing Home. They made Santa Clauses which they gave to residents and they left a big wicker basket full of fresh fruits. They sang Christmas carols to them and shared their Santa (Troop leader, Beryl Sullivan). Velma Begley, Claudia Story, and Joan DeCruz also helped.

☐The second grade students in Marie Price's class also trooped across Sohier Street to liven and brighten up the day of the elderly residents at the Ripley Road Nursing Home. They brought homemade cards, cupcakes, and also serenaded the folks with carols. Did the kids enjoy their visit? When it was time to go, one little girl asked "Can I stay with my lady?"

☐A little friend wrote at the end of his Christmas list: "And for my baby sister (she's only 6 months old), please, a little stuffed mouse and a pink blanket."

☐The Joseph Osgood Children's Calendars, a project begun last year in honor of Year of the Child, went home with the children on Thursday, in time for Christmas ordering. These calendars started last year when Osgood students drew pictures and voted for one from each class to represent them on a 1980-81 calendar.

Murphy's Law states: "If anything can go wrong, it will." And it seemed to with this best-of-intentions project (proceeds will go towards enrichment programs in the school for all children). However, the Law of Human Nature states that someone (with the biggest of hearts) will ususally come to the rescue, and the DeCruz's — Joan and Rudy — rescued this calendar project many, many times and saw it finished! A special thank you to the "donor press," Liz Wyman, parent and teacher volunteers, Fred Wescott and Jack Duncombe of Cohasset Village Printers, and all Osgood students — artists and others!

(Calendars are still available at the school — after vacation.)

☐Navy Ensign James Brackett, son of Dr. and Mrs. Philip Brackett of 365 Atlantic Avenue, has been commissioned in his present rank upon graduation from Officer Candidate School.

☐It often happens that where a reporter spends time, the people seen and talked with, will usually lead to the stories written for the week.

As you can see, my week centered around the people in the Osgood School. You can be certain (in fact, you'll know) that there are many, many others throughout town doing kind and thoughtful things for people at this time of Christmas.

The love and caring that has been extended to the Khlee's, however, is the most touching story I found.

My wish for Christmas would be that the "spirit" of the season stays with us all through the year.

Merry Christmas!

Tis-Talk About Upcoming Winter Sports Season

By Rob Tis

The crowds are large and boistrous and the ice hockey varsity team responds to the enthusiasm with consistent good play.

There is little doubt that Skipper Icemen are going places this year. They have lost only two starting players to graduation and have a big, powerful and experienced team.

The Skippers' main strength is defense: Seniors Frank Mahoney, Matt Brown, John Ayers along with Gary Orminston and Dom Campacletti — all of whom will control both blue lines as well as stopping an occasional opponent piercing through the boards.

The offense is led by Senior Co-Captains Doug Dillon and Joe McCullough as well sa some other puck-handling wizards as Jack McNeil, Mike Nedro, Don Ohiel, Dan .Bowen, Andy Pottenger, Sean Curran, Barron Salvadore, Doug Yeager and Bill O'Connell.

Another Skipper strongpoint is the goal. Assuming starting position in the net will be Bill Hollis. Also behind the Iceman's mask will be Mike Jones, Scot Ripley and Steve Bowen.

The Skippers are 1-1 in preseason scrimmage and had their first game Saturday against Hull. They are coached by mild-mannered Ed MacDermott and Ed Walsh.

If you have wondered over the traffic jams at 5 a.m. at Winter Gardens on weekday mornings, it's because the hockey team is practicing. If you like hardhitting, hustling hockey — the Skippers promise to be a good ice show this year.

Hoopsters

Varsity hoopsters started off slowly this season. But last Friday they took control of the keel, the winds were right and they balanced their record 2-2 with a 59-46 victory over East Bridgewater.

Skippers had high expectations for a repeat of last year's successful season, but lost to a hustling Hanover team. Coach Hogan chalked up the loss to the Skippers being out of shape.

But they bounced back against the defending league champs, the Middleboro Sachems — the game going back and forth until with only seconds left Jim McCarthy sank one of his patented jumper to give the men in [redacted] a two-point victory. [redacted] victory got noticed from st[redacted] wide basketball circles.

Next, the Skippers went to Abington High School with their noses high in the air. Unfortunately, they suffered a disappointing loss. The Skippers fell to a 10-point deficate and could never quite make the comeback.

Their backs to the wall, they proceeded onward, beating East Bridgewater. Last week's victory was sparked by Bill Taylor who pumped in 20 points and Mark Goff, Bill Duffy and Bill Kurte who all tallied double digits for the team.

Town Rec Jobs Open

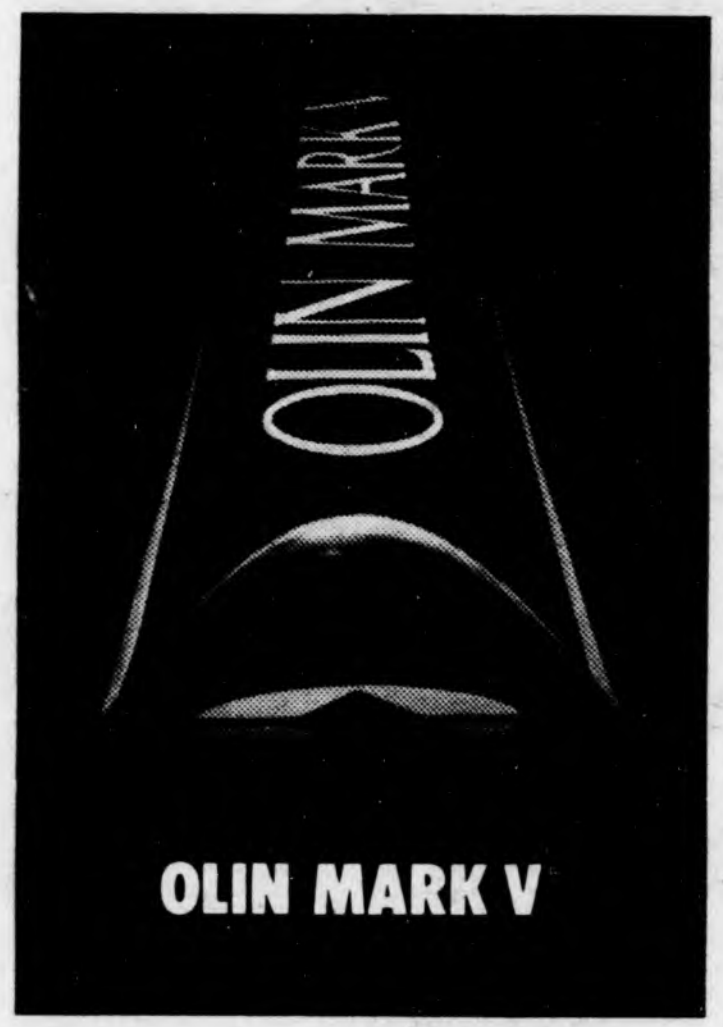
The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept applications for the following positions of part-time employment.

Baton twirling instructor grades K-12, beginner and intermediate classes; creative dramatics instructor grades K-12, two classes; tennis instructor for adult lessons.

Applicants must be a minimum of 18 years of age and have demonstrated teaching skills and knowledge of subject matter. If interested please call the Recreation Office at 383-6791 for an application and interview.

ICE SKATING

With cold weather on its way, ice skating season is approaching. If skates cut in — go home. Salt water in mild climates is always treacherous: keep away from it.



The deepest portion of Elms Meadow is towards the Spring Street Dam (about 12-18 inches). The shallowest is towards the back of the area, two inches or so.

Do not throw debris on the ice to check for safety. This only clutters up the ice, making skating dangerous and does not give you an accurate indication of ice strength.

Hockey is to be played only on the Spring Street side of the area. Goals should be placed at each end of the Meadow so that you are skating parallel to Spring Street. Stay away from the dam proper as the ice may be weak there. The rest of Elms Meadows is for ice skating.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO RACE IT TO ENJOY IT.

This new recreational racing ski combines high-performance precision and response with predictability and ease of handling.

If you're a strong expert or a recreational racer, and you want the advantages of a racing ski without the usual disadvantages, there's really only one choice.
